Strike's Cessation, New Peace Board Advised in Report

Labor Relations Group Would Be Created for Industry.

Union Requested To Halt Walkout

President Pleased by Findings of Special Inquiry Body.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

A plan for settlement of the Nation-wide textile strike, including creation of a special labor relations board for the industry, was advanced by the Winant mediation board yesterday in a report to President Roosevelt.

The President hailed the report as "excellent" and expressed the hope that the board's study would bring a "fair solution" of a tie-up which has been marked by 13 violent deaths and the idleness of more than 400,000 workers.

One of the board's most important recommendations was that the United Textile Workers call off the walkout. Coupled with that request was an appeal to the employers to "take back the workers now on strike without discrimination."

Union Will Act.

Informed of the report's contents, unionists announced the proposal for cessation of hostilities would be considered today at a meeting of their executive council. They interpreted the report as "an indictment" of the mill owners.

The mediators, headed by Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, proposed that the new board be clothed with authority to decide the troublesome question of whether the union shall speak for all workers in the industry in collective bargaining negotiations.

Winant and his associates also recommended that the Labor Department and the Federal Trade Commission be instructed to investigate the ability of the manufacturers to support "an equal or a greater number of employes at higher wages."

Another major recommendation called for creation of a committee under the proposed new board to regulate use of the so-called stretch-out system under which employes man an unusually large number of machines. Further increases of duty would be prohibited until February 1, 1935.

Lasting Settlement.

"The findings and recommendations here submitted to you," the board reported, "are based on as comprehensive and careful a survey as the situation permitted.

"The board is confident that these findings and recommendations are fair and reasonable, that they meet the basic sources of the difficulty,

Missing Child Feared Killed

Stained Handkerchief and Hairpin Mute Evidence of Tragedy.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 20 (AP).—A blood-stained handkerchief bearing the letter "D," a small hairpin, and dark stains upon a suburban street were the mute evidences of tragedy in the hands of police tonight as they sought to solve the disappearance of 6-year-old Dorothy Distelhurst.

Whether the child, who was last seen at 1:15 p. m. yesterday on her way home from school, was kidnaped and slain, killed accidentally by a motorist who hid her body in the vicinity, struck by a train that dragged her body away, or experienced some other less dire fate remained a mystery. United States Department of Justice agents also were investigating.

A climax of the day's searching of the neighborhood came when W. L. Hamilton, uncle of the child, found the blood-stained handkerchief on the railroad tracks near the street.

Nine hours later police broadcast a request for 200 citizens to assist in a search of the neighborhood. Before dawn hundreds had joined in covering a five-mile area, fruitlessly.

President Praises Report on Strike

President Roosevelt's statement on the report of the Winant committee was as follows:

"The excellent report of the board of inquiry for the cotton textile industry presents findings and recommendations which cover the basic sources of difficulties, and does this in a way which shows the wholly fair and reasonable approach with which the board undertook its task.

"It is, I think, a good example of the practical way in which industrial problems can be calmly discussed and solved under a republican form of government.

"It is, of course, greatly to be hoped that a fair solution can be had because of the good will and intelligence which undoubtedly exist in the industry as a whole, including both workers and plant owners."

Armed Guards Wait Strikers' Attack on Jail

By Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 20.—The jail here was surrounded with submachine guns and reinforced police force awaiting the arrival of 100 members of a flying squadron of strikers, reported en route here from Martinsburg, W. Va., to liberate 19 fellow strikers.

The prisoners were arrested early today for distributing literature to employes of the Virginia Woolen Co., whose 400 employes have refused to join the general textile walkout.

Mobilization of the "flying" squadron was started shortly after 9 o'clock in Martinsburg, where 1,700 employes of the Interwoven Hosiery Mills are on strike. They assembled on the outskirts of the city and started for Winchester in 29 automobiles.

All available Winchester policemen were summoned and deputies were sworn in for special service. A call for aid was sent to the Virginia State police and ten men, carrying high-power rifles and submachine guns, hurried to the scene of the expected hostilities.

The jail is in the City Hall building. The distance between Winchester and Martinsburg is only 22 miles and the small police force had little opportunity to prepare for the squadron's arrival.

9 Killed, 200 Hurt In Mexican Quake

Thousands Homeless; Several Towns Destroyed.

Mexico City, Sept. 20 (AP).—Belated dispatches to the newspaper La Prensa said today that at least 9 persons were killed 200 injured, and thousands made homeless by an earthquake last Saturday night in the State of Jalisco.

Several small and isolated villages were reported destroyed.

The reports said that practically every building was razed in Talpa, Cuale, Concepcion del Bramador and Zapotes.

V. F. W. Told to Shun Industrial Disputes

Kansas City, Sept. 20 (AP).—James E. Van Zandt, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, today issued a general order to all units of the organization warning against becoming involved in industrial disputes.

"As an organization, we are neither obligated nor permitted to respond to the call of a public official of any State for military service or police duty in times of stress," the order said.

'John Doe' Indictments Await Baby's Kidnapers

Flemington, N. J., Sept. 20 (AP).—In the Hunterdon County prosecutor's office are a couple of "John Doe" indictments—aimed at the abductors of the Lindbergh baby—still waiting to be moved.

Anthony M. Hauck, the prosecutor, said tonight the indictments were voted about a year ago and impounded, to be held in readiness for speedy extradition to New Jersey of any suspects.

Ship Owners Covering Up, Alagna Says

Radio Man Declares He Was Told to Keep Mouth Shut.

Pleaded With Warms to Send S O S, Witness Asserts.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—George I. Alagna, first assistant radio operator on the Morro Castle, today told a Federal board investigating the disaster in which 132 lives were lost that a Ward Line representative told him "to cooperate with the Ward Line and you'll be taken care of."

"Keep your mouth shut," Alagna said that Stanley R. Wright, Ward Line representative, told him. "Don't say anything to anyone. Come to my office and this thing will blow over."

The alleged conversation took place on board the Coast Guard cutter Tampa after the last remaining officers and members of the crew had been taken off the burning liner, Alagna told Dickerson N. Hoover, Federal steamship inspector in charge of the investigation.

Asked for Funds.

After the cutter landed, Alagna said, he was driven to Wright's office, where he asked for funds to go home to Connecticut. He was told, he testified, that that would be taken care of later.

Alagna asserted, however, that he was offered $10 and access to Wright's personal bank account and downtown clothing accounts.

Earlier in the day Alagna told in detail of his efforts to get acting Capt. W. F. Warms to order an S O S sent out.

Five trips and "strong pleading" were necessary, Alagna testified, before Capt. Warms gave him the order to send the S O S at "about 3:25." Alagna had been assigned to the bridge, he said, to relay Warms' orders to Chief Radio Operator George Rogers in the radio room.

Tells of Confusion.

In the meantime, he said, he observed only scenes of confusion in the wheel house, on the bridge and on the decks.

"Rogers and I seemed to be the only ones who knew how serious the situation was," Alagna testified.

"I passed the wheel house," he said, "and the man on duty was spinning the wheel in different directions like it was out of order."

"On my fourth trip to the bridge I learned that the wheel had been abandoned."

"On the bridge," the radio operator testified, "Capt. Warms was pacing back and forth. I had to follow him around and even then I don't think he recognized me.

"After I had made three trips to the bridge without getting orders to send the SOS, Rogers and I decided to send the "stand-by" signal. That was at 3:15 a. m."

Finally Ordered S O S.

Alagna then told how on the fifth trip he "pleaded very strongly"

Hauptmann Trial May Take Place At Murder Scene

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 20 (U.P.).—Bernard Hauptmann, held in New York as the man who received $50,000 in ransom money in the Lindbergh kidnap case, may be taken to Hunterdon County, N. J., for trial, Gov. A. Harry Moore said tonight.

The body of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., was found in that county.

Machine Guns Guard Madrid From Revolt

Martial Law Is Ordered If Reported Rebellion Materializes.

Madrid, Sept. 20 (AP).—The cabinet today armed Minister of Interior Rafael Salazar Alonso with power to put Spain under martial law should asserted plans for an extremist uprising, believed thwarted, be carried out.

Meanwhile, "American gangsterism" and Leon Trotzky's Fourth Internationale figured in Alonso's comment on the abortive "proletarian" revolt, which authorities said would have been the bloodiest in Spain's history.

The strategy of the exiled Russian combined with the methods of American gunmen in the plot, Alonso said.

The cabinet, meeting with President Alcala Zamora presiding, approved precautionary mesaures taken, congratulated Alonso, expressed confidence that the situation was in hand and drafted emergency decrees, it was learned, for "a state of alarm" and a "state of war" which Alonso may declare at will.

Boston Mayor Is Lagging; Bacon Forges Ahead in G. O. P. Race.

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP).—Gen. Charles H. Cole, indorsed Democratic candidate for Governor, swept into the lead over former Mayor James M. Curley, Independent, early tonight on the basis of 45 precincts outside of Boston. The figures gave Cole 1,342, to 1,266 for Curley. At the same time Lieut. Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon led Frank A. Goodwin for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, 3,554 to 1,939.

On the basis of the same figures, which did not include any from Boston, United States Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), candidate for renomination, was showing the way to former Lieut. Gov. Edward P. Barry by 501 to 238, while William Donahue, of Boston, political unknown, had only 40 votes.

The City of Westfield, first to complete its vote, gave decisive majorities to Walsh, Cole and Bacon in their respective fields. Its vote, not included in the 18 precincts upon which the first State-wide tabulation was based, gave Walsh, 879;

Rainbow Erases Lead, Wins Amazing Victory

Spurts to Triumph by Three Minutes 26 Seconds After Trailing at Half-Way Mark by 6:40 Come-Back Cheers Americans.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 20 (AP).—A gambler of the sea, all his chips on the rolling board, Harold S. ("Mike") Vanderbilt diced desperately with the winds today to score one of the most amazing triumphs in all the history of the fabled America's Cup.

He shot his snowy hulled Rainbow out of the sea haze and the smoky murk of the huge trailing fleet to overcome a lead of almost 7 minutes in 15 miles and add 3 minutes and 26 seconds more for his first victory of the series over T. O. M. Sopwith's blue bolt challenger from Great Britain, Endeavour.

Not in the memory of the oldest salts peering incredulously from the fringe of astounding drama was there a recollection of anything like this ever taking place before in the history of the international racing classic that goes all the way back to 1851.

And tonight, instead of an all but unconquerable lead of three straight victories, which she had by the mutual consent of all except Vanderbilt at the half-way mark this afternoon, the Englishman's lead was only 2 to 1, with anything likely to happen now in the thrilling battle of the great sailing sloops.

Starting out today in typical Rainbow weather—a breeze of only 6.8 statute miles an hour at the start nine miles southeast of Bren-

Quick Trial To Confront Hauptmann

Jersey Court Will Try Suspect; Life Term Kidnap Maximum.

But Murder Conviction in State May Carry Death Sentence.

(Associated Press.)

Swift moves to prosecute Bernard Richard Hauptmann in a New Jersey State court on a charge of kidnaping and murder in the case of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., were indicated tonight by Attorney General Cummings.

Obviously pleased at the capture of the suspect, a German alien, after 30 months of unrelenting search by Federal agents and police, the Attorney General explained the trial could not be held in a Federal court.

The Federal kidnaping statute—known as the Lindbergh law—would not be effective in this case, Cummings told reporters, because of its enactment after the abduction of the child.

New Jersey Law.

"New Jersey has a law, enacted in 1931, that provides a maximum of life imprisonment for kidnaping," he said.

"That State has a death penalty for first-degree murder—murder that is premeditated. It's statute calls for life imprisonment for second-degree murder."

The Attorney General explained that no final statement could be made at this time regarding the plans for bringing Hauptmann to trial, since conversations had not yet been held with other Federal and State officials.

"Every last smidge of his record will be investigated," he went on. "I imagine the investigation will take several weeks. We will try to find out all that he has been doing since he came to this country and before."

Hears O'Ryan Talk.

Cummings made these comments after he had listened to police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan, of New York City, address a radio audience on the circumstances of the arrest. The Attorney General invited reporters to join him in his office for the broadcast.

Referring to the New Jersey murder law, he said that the first degree penalty might be invoked if it could be proved that the homicide occurred in the commission of a robbery or burglary.

Such proof, especially in the Lindbergh case, would be difficult to obtain, he said, adding:

"Of course we may get a confession."

Bride of 3 Weeks Lost in Wyoming On Hunting Trip

Dubois, Wyo., Sept. 20 (AP).—Searching parties trouped the west slope of the continental divide today in a hunt for Mrs. Olga Mauger, of Midwest, Wyo., missing since Monday on an elk-hunting expedition.

Shouts of a woman were reported heard in a canyon near the top of Twogwotee Pass last night but search of the canyon today was fruitless.

About 250 persons were engaged in the hunt.

Mauger reported his wife grew tired and while she rested he went deeper into the woods. When he returned, he could find no trace of her.

The President referred all questions to the Department of Justice.

Chicago Butcher Admits Fire Which Killed Youth

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—Thomas Falone, proprietor of a chain of butcher shops, today confessed, authorities announced, that he plotted an incendiary fire in which a youth perished.

The arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in New York yesterday has solved the Lindbergh kidnaping, it was authoritatively declared last night. The Department of Justice is expected, beginning with the arrest, to carry through the investigation to a complete solution.

It was stated that the kidnaping is considered a one-man job.

Handwriting of Hauptmann has been identified as similar to that found on ransom notes received after the kidnaping, it was said.

Specimens of the suspect's handwriting were brought to Washington and compared with that on the ransom notes in the criminal laboratories of the Department of Justice, it was said.

By Francis A. Jamieson.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Sept. 20.—In swift, dramatic moves in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, police today made known the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a German alien, and recovery of part of the ransom money and announced that a solution of the greatest mystery of modern time was assured.

Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan, announcing $13,750 of the $50,000 ransom money paid for the baby, later found dead, was found in Hauptmann's cellar in the Bronx, was asked:

"In your opinion, does this solve the Lindbergh kidnaping?"

O'Ryan conferred for a few minutes with J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, and said:

"Yes, it will."

After an afternoon filled with sensational rumors that the "break" long awaited had come, O'Ryan emerged from secret conferences with Hoover and others at the Greenwich police station and issued this terse statement:

"We have in custody the man who received the ransom money. He is Bruno Richard Hauptmann, of 1279 East 222d street, the Bronx. He is an alien who came to this country as a stowaway 11 years ago."

Among those at the police station was the man of many missions in the long hunt—"Jafsie," Dr. John A. F. Condon, aged welfare worker, drawn into the search by the noted aviator after other intermediaries had failed.

It was "Jafsie" who paid the $50,000 to the supposed kidnapers—the night of April 2, 1932, at a cemetery in the Bronx, a month after the kidnaping.

After the announcement of the arrest, Commissioner O'Ryan said Hauptmann was identified positively as the recipient of the ransom money in the cemetery.

The identification was made by "witnesses," O'Ryan said. This was taken to mean "Jafsie" had seen the prisoner and had made the identification.

Identified as "Jafsie's" Man.

Hauptmann, placed in the prisoners' line-up later, was also identified by John Perrone, Bronx taxi driver, as the man who, two days after "Jafsie" advertised himself as the Lindbergh negotiator, gave him $1 to deliver a note to the Condon home.

Hauptmann was in line with other prisoners. Perrone was led in.

"Pick up the man who handed you that note," Perrone was told.

Without hesitation, the taxi driver tapped Hauptmann on the shoulder.

"This is the man," he said.

Watched for Weeks.

Hauptmann had been watched closely by police and Federal agents since he paid for gasoline at a filling station several weeks ago with a $10 gold certificate, identified by serial numbers is-

O'Ryan Statement On Kidnap Capture

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Police Commissioner John R. O'Ryan tonight issued the following statement in connection with the Lindbergh case:

"The taking into custody of Bruno Richard Hauptmann today marks unrelenting and closely coordinating efforts on the part of the New York Police Department, the Jersey troopers and the Department of Justice to bring a solution of the Lindbergh kidnaping, and with the facts at hand we are satisfied that the first and most important stage of the police work has been accomplished.

"The story as related by the detectives who have been engaged on the case for more than 2½ years might best be told in chronological fashion.

Soon on Ransom Trail.

"Within two days after the payment of the ransom money in St. Raymond's Cemetery, a $20 gold certificate was discovered in the East River Savings Bank, on Amsterdam avenue and Ninety-sixth street.

"However, despite untiring efforts on the part of the investigators, we were unable to discover a single tangible lead as to the identity of the passer of the ransom money, and for more than two years not one bill of the $20 denomination appeared again.

Meanwhile, some $5,000 in $5 and $10 bills were passed to small storekeepers at various locations throughout the city.

"The small denominations of these bills and their common use made them practically useless to us, yet they entailed an individual investigation for each specific bill. Despite the disheartening fact of the seeming failure, our men refused to be disheartened. Three weeks ago $10 and $20 gold certificates appeared in the Yorkville and Fordham sections of the city.

Merchants' Aid Sought.

"Storekeepers, garage owners and small merchants, particularly gas stations, were asked to cooperate and requested to identify, as near as possible, the owner with each sued to all banks as one of those in the ransom pay-off.

The filling station proprietor, remembering that gold certificates had been called in by the Treasury, became suspicious and notified police.

Hauptmann, it was reported, was driving an automobile identified as one stolen near Lakewood, N. J., the day before the blond, curly-haired Lindbergh baby, Charles Augustus, jr., was stolen from his crib from the second floor nursery of the secluded Lindbergh home in the Sourland Mountain district near Hopewell the night of March 1, 1932.

With O'Ryan and Hoover, behind closed doors, were Frank Fay, Hoover's New York chief, and H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State police, who has participated in the search from the start.

Arrest Disclosed Here.

At 3:20 p. m., Attorney General Homer Cummings in Washington disclosed Hoover had informed him of Hauptmann's arrest.

A few minutes later, O'Ryan, Hoover and the others emerged from their conferences here, read their statement and said they would answer all questions.

First, O'Ryan said:

"We have the ransom money, found on the premises of this man, and we will allow it to be photographed."

"How much of the money have you recovered from Hauptmann?"

"Thirteen thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars in $10 and $20 bills," said O'Ryan.

"How many people have you in custody?"

"One at the moment."

"What is his nationality?"

"German."

(It was recalled by newspapermen that the writer of the ransom notes sent to the Lindberghs was thought to be of German extraction, from the peculiarities of his writing.)

"Where was the money found?"

"In the garage of Hauptmann's home."

"Can you tell us the details of the trip-up?"

Details to Be Given Later.

"I will give you the details later."

"Do you believe Hauptmann kidnaped the Lindbergh baby?"

"I have no comment at this time," O'Ryan answered.

O'Ryan then said no charge, as yet, had been booked against Hauptmann and that questioning of him had not been finished.

The commissioner also would not say wether Dr. Condon had seen Hauptmann.

In announcing the arrest, the commissioner said:

"I have an important statement to make in relation to the Lindbergh case. In making this statement, I am acting for the police department of New York City, for J. Edgar Hoover and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, as the spokesman for their departments as well.

"The three agencies have been working together for a long time seeking the solution of this crime. Personnel assigned by the various departments have been under the immediate direction of Inspector John Lyons, of the New York police department, bureau of criminal information."

After this report, O'Ryan added: "It is not in the interests of the case that a more detailed statement be made at this moment. I can say, however, that what has been accomplished constitutes an outstanding example of the effectiveness of unified action and teamwork as displayed by the three departments."

Refuses to Answer Questions.

Police aids at the Greenwich station disclosed further that Hauptmann was arrested at 9 a. m. yesterday near a subway station on Webster avenue in the Bronx.

At first he refused to answer questions, except to deny any part in the Lindbergh case. Then he was taken to headquarters. Hoover was hurriedly summoned from Washington and Schwarzkopf from New Jersey.

It looked at last as if the most intense police search in history was at an end.

All of the officials, throughout the day, kept themselves secluded at the Greenwich station. Not until O'Ryan's announcement was there any definite word from those in New Yark.

The first word from an official source came from William Stanley, in Washington, an assistant to Attorney General Homer Cummings. He said:

"The case is hot."

Col. Henry Breckenridge, counsel for the Lindberghs and their adviser in the long search that extended over the world, likewise would make no comment. It was understood, however, he knew of the arrest long before it was announced.

Lindberghs in West.

Whether it was he who informed the Lindberghs of the arrest was not learned. The colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh were in Los Angeles after a combination business and pleasure flight across the continent.

Since that afternoon of May 12 when the baby's body was found in the woods but a few miles from the Lindbergh home—Col. Breckenridge had worked closely with the police and investigators in tracing down every clew.

Breckenridge absented himself from his office. Neither did he appear at the Greenwich station—which was the focal point in this climax of the great manhunt.

Whether others have been questioned was not revealed. Rumors have been persistent that four men and two women were taken to the station for questioning.

Prisoner Shabby, Sullen.

His clothes were of good material, but his appearance was one of shabbiness.

Since his arrest, Hauptmann's attitude has been sullen.

A detective had hurried to his home in the Bronx to summon him. To newspapermen, who recognized him at once, he waved a greeting and cried out:

"Hello, boys!"

The aged welfare worker hurried into the room where O'Ryan and the other officials were. It was remembered that Dr. Condon had described the man to whom he paid the ransom money as "foreign."

Dr. Condon's home in the Bronx is not far from that of Hauptmann. Close by, too, is the cemetery where the ransom money was paid.

Police Still at Home.

The Hauptmann home is a two-story stucco dwelling in the thickly wooded section along Needham avenue.

Tonight there were four automobiles parked outside the house. Neighbors said police came in some of them and that the cars had been there for two days.

Hauptmann, O'Ryan disclosed, is a married man with an 11-month-old boy.

Neighbors volunteered the information that Hauptmann had lived in the house for about five years; that he told people he was a cabinet worker, but unable to locate a job. They also said he went down to Wall street every day to "play the market."

Mrs. Hauptmann was described as from 25 to 30 years of age, a blonde of medium height with blue eyes.

Neighbors said Hauptmann spent most of his time at a Bavarian beer garden close by his home.

Rumors throughout the neighborhood that Hauptmann had been arrested drew crowds to the home. They stood in the street, until police squads ordered them away.

Huge Dog Guarded Garage.

One of the neighbors said a huge dog was always chained outside the garage and that men frequently entered the garage.

The dog was gone tonight. No one was visible inside the house.

In the yard was a baby's crib, with toys scattered nearby—mute testimony of another crib that was robbed, an abduction that precipitated an unrelenting search.

This search led to many blind walls.

Frequent, during the investigation, have been the stimulants given by the finding in circulation, generally in the Bronx, of ransom bills.

On the frequent appearance of these bills in the same general locality, officials had placed their hopes of nabbing, at least, the man who received them that April night by St. Raymond's Cemetery—when "Jafsie" paid the money to the supposed kidnaper as Col. Lindbergh sat a block away in an automobile.

Ransom Hoax Feared.

All during the search, there was the constant thought that the man who received the money might not have any connection with the kidnapers—that the ransom might have been a hoax.

Supporting this was the trip "Jafsie," the colonel and Breckenridge made the next day after the ransom was paid to Martha's Vineyard, on Long Island Sound. They went supposedly to find the baby on a boat as a result of the kidnaper's directions.

They found nothing.

But the search went on. In seaports over the world, ships were watched. Thousands of clews were run down—only to find them to no avail.

And not until today was there definite assurance that, when the man with the ransom money was found, that the whole mystery of the kidnaping would be solved.

The assurance by O'Ryan and others that the mystery would be solved by Hauptmann's arrest lent credence to the belief other arrests would soon be made.

The ransom bills—the only tangible clew possessed by the investigators—were of $5, $10 and $20 denominations.

The absence of $5 bills from those recovered meant Hauptmann, at the outset, passed only these in an effort to avoid any suspicion.

Banks and storekeepers were supplied, all over the country, with the serial numbers. If they slipped by there, Treasury officials kept watch. And many of them came to the Treasury.

Every Clew Traced.

Every clew, provided by the appearance of any of the bills, was traced.

Now and then, in the 30 months of search, developments have seemed imminent. But they were nil.

Underworld characters and others were drawn into the search. Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz, police characters, tried in vain to make contacts with intermediaries of the kidnapers.

Morris Rosner, Broadwayite, lent his aid.

Alphonse "Scarface Al" Capone, from his jail cell in Chicago before he was taken to Atlanta, used the far-reaching ramifications of his gang—all fruitless.

It seemed a certainty, then, that one of the well-known gangs of criminals had a part.

To the outside world, the first indication of a contact came through advertisements inserted in the personal column of the Bronx Home News. They were signed "Jafsie."

On April 2 the ransom money was paid over to the supposed kidnaper.

Banks' Aid Enlisted.

Then the trip to Marthas Vineyard. When the baby was not found on the boat, banks were asked privately to look for the bills.

For a day or two there seemed no place to turn. But there developed the most unusual twist of the case—the John Hughes Curtis hoax.

Lindbergh Kidnaping Told in Tabloid Form

Baby Stolen From Crib March 1, 1932; Ranson Paid in April; Infant's Body Found in May Near Home.

The Lindbergh case in tabloid:

The time: 10 p. m. March 1, 1932.

A warped wooden shutter had been unlocked. Dirt tracks on the floor and window sill. Footprints in the earth below. Indentures in the earth, possibly those of a ladder.

Bizarre Twists in Case.

Thus opened the great mystery of modern times. It reached the peak of sensationalism, replete with many bizarre twists of fate.

Five days later, two New York underworld characters—Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz—were authorized to negotiate by Col. Lindbergh. Nothing came their way.

Then, March 8, in the Bronx Home News, this advertisement in the personal column:

"I accept. Money is ready, you know they won't let me deliver without getting the package. Please make it some sort of c. o. d. transaction. Come. You know you can trust. JAFSIE."

This was the first major break.

Days went by before the "transaction" was arranged. Frantic days, with the Lindberghs publicly appealing to the abductors to watch their son's health. Throughout the Nation prayers were offered in churches.

$50,000 Ransom Paid.

Then, the night of April 2, St. Raymond's Cemetery in the Bronx.

As the noted aviator set in an automobile, "Jafsie" paid ransom to unknown intermediary.

April 3: Lindbergh, "Jafsie," Henry Breckenridge, flier's attorney, flew to Marthas Vineyard looking for boat on which bab; was supposed to have been left by abductors.

They found nothing.

On April 9 banks were asked to watch for the serial numbers on the Lindbergh ransom bills.

For another month, over the world, the search continued. Ships everywhere were watched. Known hangouts of criminals and dives searched. Fruitless, everything.

Finally, May 12, in the woods but a few miles from the Lindbergh home, Baby Lindbergh was found—dead.

Relentlessly, to this day, the search has gone on for his killers.

Presidential Gold Ban Led to Arrest In Lindbergh Case

President Roosevelt's monetary policy supplied police and Federal agents the weapon which broke open the Lindbergh kidnaping mystery, according to the Associated Press.

When Mr. Roosevelt nationalized the Nation's gold stocks, he ordered that gold should no longer circulate as money. Both the metal and gold certificates were called into the Treasury.

That was the reason a filling station operator became suspicious when Bernard Richard Hauptmann offered a $10 gold certificate in payment for gasoline. This suspicion started the police inquiry which identified the certificate as part of the ransom money.

Red Cross Seeking To Enroll Employes

Numerous addresses urging enrollment of employes in various companies, concerns and small businesses have been made by speakers of the Red Cross, it was announced yesterday, with the filing of a report on organization activities in the District.

Speakers who already have talked before groups of employes include Henry M. Baker, assistant director of disasters and civilian relief service, National Red Cross; Dr. Thomas E. Green, director of the speakers' bureau, National Red Cross, and Harry J. Davies, Red Cross field director.

Lindy Letters Believed Sent Here for Tests

Scientific Instruments Are Used to Examine Ransom Notes.

Search of 30 months for the kidnapers and killers of little Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., by the Department of Justice came to a climax yesterday when Attorney General Cummings announced the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, suspect, in New York.

In this brief statement the Attorney General announced the arrest:

"Hauptmann is known to have passed some of the ransom money and to have a substantial amount of it in his home at the time of his arrest."

Suspect Is Carpenter.

The suspect, who is about 50 years old and a carpenter by occupation, is said to have been the author of some of the ransom notes.

It also was learned that his home on East 222d street in the Bronx is near the cemetery where "Jafsie" delivered the ransom money to the kidnapers.

It was said the information which led to his arrest was a recent development.

Hauptmann is a married man, it was understood. It could not be determined whether he had a previous criminal record, nor was there any information available about possible confederates in the kidnaping.

Has No Legal Interest.

Legally the Department of Justice has no interest in the solution of the crime which shocked the Nation and the world on March 1, 1932.

The United States will not prosecute the case. It probably will be handled by the State of New Jersey because the "Lindbergh law," giving the Federal Government authority over interstate kidnapings, did not become effective until July, 1932.

But since soon after the crime the Bureau of Investigation of the department has been busy running down every kind of "tip" on the case it received.

A man has been sitting beside a telephone, its number National 7117, which has been announced through the entire country as the "Lindbergh phone," where all information which might lead to a solution should be called in.

"The Case Is Hot."

The first break on the news came from William Stanley, who announced to a group of newspapermen that "the case is hot. There are three phases to it and if anything should go wrong with them it would be tragic. I'm sorry that's all I can tell you now."

Later came Cummings' announcement. Cummings also said:

"I suspect that Commissioner O'Ryan will outline the part played in this case by three departments: the New Jersey State Police, the New York Police and the Department of Justice (O'Ryan is New York commissioner of police). I appreciate the cooperation between the three."

In New York working on the case was J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, who has been in active direction of the squad constantly on the case.

Evidently the money formed one of the important bits of evidence in breaking the case. For more than two years the serial numbers of the bills were circularized. Some were located but their source never could be traced.

Ransom Notes Tested.

Although the atmosphere of secrecy which usually pervades the Justice Department's identification unit and crime laboratory was more intense than ever yesterday, officials would not deny that ransom notes and other evidence taken from Hauptmann in New York already were being placed under scientific examination.

The crime laboratory, recently moved into the new Justice building, is equipped with numerous X-ray and ultra violet ray machines, microscopes and other instruments used in comparing handwritings, a phase of the present investigation which may develop into the most important one.

One scientific criminologist attached to the laboratory was observed entering the offices hurriedly about 4:20 p. m. carrying a small package. Neither he nor officials of the department would comment on the contents of the package.

Never Heard of Him.

Both the German Embassy and the Bureau of Immigration of the Labor Department said they had never heard of Hauptmann.

The Immigration Bureau revealed that its Ellis Island office was investigating to determine the status of the arrested man in relation to his entry into this country as a stowaway.

If Hauptmann came to this country illegally before July 1, 1924, he would not be subject to deportation. However, if he came after that date the present law allows deportation.

The success of the Department of Justice during the past year was described by Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, as "almost unbelieveable in tracking down criminals."

"I never believed that it was possible for them to accomplish what they have in kidnaping and other important cases," he said.

New Law Enforcement Era Ushered In as Congress Slashed Tape.

The arrest of Bernard Richard Hauptman, pointing to a solution of the Lindbergh case, yesterday crowned a new era of law enforcement into which the Federal Government was led by the kidnaping and killing of a blond-haired child, according to the Associated Press.

The crime which cost the life of Charles August Lindbergh, jr., inflamed a Nation into action. It moved Congress to swift law revision. It developed in the Justice Department a corps of experts in the grim job of man-hunting.

But when the 20-month-old Lindbergh baby disappeared on March 1, 1932, the situation was different. Justice investigators were hamstrung by a rigid separation of State police and Federal activities. The Justice Department could promise only "cooperation," since the case was out of their jurisdiction.

The then small band led by No. 1 Federal sleuth, 39-year-old J. Edgar Hoover, could not even bear arms.

Congress Slashed Tape.

Congress started to slash the tapes. The Lindbergh act, making kidnap threats a Federal crime punishable by 20 years' imprisonment, was signed by President Hoover in July, 1932. On that day a special squad was assigned to the Lindbergh case.

The next Congress added more teeth. Death was voted for kidnapers. Hoover's men were given power to track fleeing gangsters across the State lines which halted local authorities.

Since the Lindbergh tragedy the Justice Department has worked on 29 abduction cases and investigated thousands of tips and clues on the Lindbergh case that have led from coast to coast.

It was Hoover's men who brought an end to the killing and terrorism careers of "machine gun" Kelly and John Dillinger.

Are Quiet-Spoken Men.

The Justice Department anti-gangster clan is composed of men much like their chiefs—quiet-spoken, often scholarly, but, above all, thorough. They average 35 years of age. It was slim, almost frail-looking Melvin Purvis who got Dillinger in Chicago.

Getting their man doesn't finish the task. They carry through in the courts where the Bureau of Investigation has built a record of 95 per cent convictions.

Here are some of the outstanding kidnaping cases in which the bureau has participated since the Lindberght abduction:

Charles Boettcher 2d, of Denver, seized February 12, 1933, and released March 1, after the payment of $60,000 ransom. Those arrested were Rea Verne Sankey, who committed suicide before trial; Arthur Henry Youngberg, who got a 16-year prison sentence and was fined $1,000; Carl W. Pearce, who drew a 26-year sentence, and Gordon Alcorn, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

John (Jake the Barber) Factor, of Chicago, an international speculator, kidnaped and later released after the payment of $70,000 ransom. Roger D. Touhy, Gustav Schachtel and A. J. Lamar have been convicted of taking part in the abduction and sentenced to 99 years. Basil (The Owl) Banghart also was taken into custody in connection with the case. Willie Sharkey, Midwestern bad man, was arrested, but committed suicide while awaiting trial.

Three Drew Life Terms.

August Luer, of Alton, Ill., was kidnaped July 10, 1933, and released six days later. No ransom was paid. Percy M. Fitzgerald, Randall E. Norvell, Lillian Chesson, Mike Musiala, Charles Chesson and C. N. Gitcho were convicted of the crime. The first three drew life sentences.

One of the most spectacular kidnaping cases was that of Charles F. Urschel, of Oklahoma City, taken July 22, 1933, and released August 1, 1933, after the payment of $200,000 ransom, $79,650 of which has been recovered. Among those arrested for this abduction are Albert L. Bates, R. G. Shannon, Ora L. Shannon, George ("Machine Gun") Kelly, his wife, Kathryn Kelly, and Harvey J. Bailey. Bates, Bailey and "Machine Gun" Kelly are now at Alcatraz Penitentiary.

Cases which have not been solved are those of William Hamm and Adolph Bremer, both of St. Paul. Members of the Touhy gang of Chicago were acquitted of complicity in the Hamm case. The Department of Justice has named "Doc" Barker and Alvin Karpis, Midwestern outlaws, as being guilty of the Bremer abduction. Both are at large.

Another kidnaping case which attracted wide attention was that of Brooke Hart, abducted at San Jose, Calif., November 9, 1933, and murdered the same day. Harold T. Thurmond and John M. Holmes, believed to have been the kidnapers, were arrested November 26, 1933, and lynched.

Other recent cases were those involving William F. Gettle, of California, and Jean Robles, of Arizona.

Trained Wisconsin Bass Entertains Tourists

Waupaca, Wis. (U.P.).—Henry Estberg, who operates the Grand View Hotel dock on the chain of lakes, claims to have the only trained, tame bass in the world. He has named the fish Bozo.

Hundreds of visitors have seen him wiggle his finger in the water beneath the dock for Bozo to appear for food. Bozo eats from Estberg's hand and permits his master to stroke him on the head and back. The fish first appeared last year and returned this season early in May.

Teutonic Symbolism in Notes Gave U. S. Clues in Baby Hunt

Ransom Letters Replete With Expressions of German Origin.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Teutonic symbolism has been a guidepost for Federal authorities in their search for the Lindbergh baby kidnapers since almost the first day of the search.

This symbolism was marked in all of the ransom notes sent to Col. Lindbergh, and tonight officials were seeking to link Bernard Hauptmann, unnaturalized German, with the obvious Teutonic background of the notes.

The mysterious "John" to whom "Jafsie" paid the $50,000 ransom was of German or Scandinavian appearance.

Each ransom note ended with a complicated symbol, made up of several smaller symbols, each of which could be found in German books on symbolism.

Apparently garbled sentences in the notes became crystal clear when considered in literal German translation. Compound words, frequently used by Germans, abounded, these including "sleeping suit."

The phrase "the kidnap was prepared for a year already," told alert investigators more of the background of the kidnapers.

Federal agents feared the notes were too German sometimes. They thought a master criminal might be trying to throw them off the trail.

But they persisted in their tracing of the obvious clews that abounded in the many notes, which have not yet been made public in detail.

Curtis Accused Of Retarding Kidnaper Hunt

Norfolk Shipbuilder's Hoax Barred 'Breaking' Case Earlier, Is Belief.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Belief that the Lindbergh case might have been "broken" long ago if John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk shipbuilder, had not stepped in and sidetracked the search, was expressed at Curtis' trial on a charge of obstructing justice.

Curtis, who projected himself into the case with a story of being in touch with the kidnapers when the search for the missing baby was at its height, was convicted of either perpetrating a gigantic hoax or of shielding the kidnapers.

Comment at Trial.

At the time of his trial, at Flemington, N. J., in July, 1932, Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., declared the police were working on a clew "that would have led to apprehension of the kidnapers" when Curtis broke into the case.

Shortly after the kidnaping, and before the baby's body was found, Curtis sought out Col. Lindbergh and told him he had been contacted by an emissary of the kidnapers.

Curtis already had enlisted the backing of Dean H. Dobson-Peacock and Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, both of Norfolk, and he quickly gained Lindbergh's confidence.

As chief negotiator Curtis undertook a series of flights to various parts of the country, frequently using a Navy plane and pilot. Later he shifted his activities to the vicinity of Norfolk.

A Navy yacht was placed at his disposal and he cruised about the coast, often accompanied by Lindbergh. The colonel was on one of these cruises, although Curtis was ashore at the time, when the baby's body was found. Lindbergh did not learn of the discovery until he returned nine hours later.

Curtis Confession Alleged.

Following upon this turn in the case, Curtis allegedly confessed that his supposed dealings with the kidnap gang, his story of midnight meetings and of being warned that the baby would be sold to the highest gangland bidder unless quick ransom arrangements were made, were all imaginary.

Col. Lindbergh, testifying at Curtis' trial, said the shipbuilder had not only described the boat on which he said the baby was being held, but also had described members of the gang in detail.

Before his trial Curtis repudiated his alleged hoax confession, declaring he had written it to end continued questioning.

He was found guilty of obstructing justice, however, and sentenced to one year in jail and fined $1,000. The sentence was suspended and he was released after paying the fine.

Curtis Is 'Delighted' At Case Development

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—John Hughes Curtis, one of three Norfolk intermediaries in efforts to have the kidnaped Lindbergh baby released, said today he was "delighted that the matter is being cleared up and awaits further developments with a great deal of interest."

Associated with Curtis in the negotiations were Dean Dobson-Peacock, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, and Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired. Dean Dobson-Peacock received the news with interest, but made no comment. Admiral Burrage could not be reached immediately.

Colonel Silent When Told of Kidnap Arrest

Lindbergh and Wife at Pasadena as Capture Is Effected in N. Y.

Pasadena, Calif., Sept. 20 (U.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh showed little interest today when notified of the arrest of a suspect in the kidnap-murder of his first son, the United Press was told at the home of Mrs. Audrey Morgan, a sister of Mrs. Lindbergh.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh are in seclusion here after an overland flight from St. Louis in their new airplane.

The person who answered the telephone at the Morgan home would not give his name, but said he had been the first to notify Col. Lindbergh.

"When I heard of the arrest I immediately reached Col. Lindbergh, giving him all the details," he said. "Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh have nothing to say about the case, nor of their plans for the immediate future, but will issue a formal statement when they are ready.

"Col. Lindbergh did not seem much interested when I told him."

Los Angeles, Sept. 20 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh secluded themselves even from their hosts here today, while reports were circulated the couple knew in advance the kidnap case arrest was expected in New York.

A close friend, one of their hosts, said today they would have nothing to say save to authorities about the kidnaping arrest, and intimated they were preparing to fly back to New York.

Lindys Blazed Sky Trails to Drown Sorrow

Nearly Every Land Visited in Effort to Erase Horror of Crime.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Life for the flying Lindberghs has been lived mostly in the air since their first-born son was abducted and then murdered in March, 1932.

They have had another child, a second son named Jon Morrow Lindbergh, who was born August 16, 1932, in the New York apartment of Mrs. Dwight Morrow.

Spectacular dashes across the continent and flights to virtually every country in the world have marked the passing months.

Besides constant aeronautical research, Col. Lindbergh, shortly after his son was kidnaped, plunged into other research work in a special and extensive laboratory reserved for his use in the Rockefeller Institute.

Bitter Memories Revived.

Three months after his child was abducted, Col. Lindbergh returned for the first time to the New York offices of Transcontinental & Western Airways, Inc., and Pan-American Airways, of which he was technical director.

That same month—June, 1932—bitter memories of the tragedy were recounted by the colonel in a courtroom at Flemington, N. J., where he was a defense witness in the trial of John Hughes Curtis, confessed hoaxer in the case.

The Lindbergh estate in the Sourland Mountains of New Jersey had been but a place of sorrow to the famous couple, and slightly more than a year after the kidnaping they announced the property would be used for child welfare work.

With Mrs. Lindbergh as copilot, the colonel took off for Greenland on an exploratory air cruise that lasted several months.

After Greenland came Norway and Russia, Denmark and Sweden, thence southward to Portugal, after which they flew to Africa and across the South Atlantic to Brazil. They spanned the 1,875 miles of ocean in 15 hours and 53 minutes.

28,000 Miles Flown.

Twenty-eight thousand miles were flown on this venture, including many miles over trackless jungles. In all, 30 countries were visited.

The red monoplane was given by Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh to the American Museum of Natural History. Sixty-nine thousand persons saw the exhibit the first week.

The past months of 1934 returned Col. Lindbergh more than ever to the public eye when he became a figure in the controversy following the Administration's cancellation of air-mail contracts.

He commented adversely on the Government's blanket action, offering to personally testify regarding any and all financial transactions he had had with aviation companies.

Col. Lindbergh became owner of a new plane this summer, and in it he and Mrs. Lindbergh have made several trips to various American cities since.

$25,000 Lindbergh Reward Still Holds

Sum Posted by New Jersey for Kidnapers.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 20 (AP).—A $25,000 reward offered by the State of New Jersey for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the "kidnaper or kidnapers" of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., still stands.

Soon after the kidnaping, the New Jersey Legislature authorized the Governor to offer a reward not exceeding $25,000 in any case involving the kidnaping of a child under 16.

Gov. A. Harry Moore on May 24 that year issued a proclamation posting the maximum reward in the Lindbergh case.

Police Flash: 'Lindbergh Baby Kidnaped!' Inspired Frenzied Search Through Nation

Child Snatched From Crib; Ransom Note Left Behind.

Late on the night of March 1, 1932, the teletype machines of the New Jersey State police carried this message:

"Col. Lindbergh's baby kidnaped from the Lindbergh home between 7:30 and 10 p. m. Boy, 19 months, dressed in sleeping suit. Search all cars."

It was a message that stirred the entire civilized world, that started one of the greatest criminal investigations in all history, and that forecast one of the greatest mysteries in the annals of crime.

Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., 20 months old (not 19 months as the message had said) was put to bed at the Lindbergh's Sourland Mountain home near Hopewell, N. J., at 7:30 p. m. Betty Gow, his nurse, was the last person to see him alive.

Crib Found Empty.

At about 10 o'clock some member of the household went to the baby's room and found his crib empty. A screen on an open window, a screen with a faulty catch, had been pushed aside.

On the crib was a note. It was signed with queer cabalistic signs. It demanded a ransom of $50,000 for return of the child.

It was a week-end. It was the first week-end that the Lindberghs had spent at the Hopewell house. It had been their custom to spend the week-ends at the Dwight C. Morrow home. Some one, police believed, who had intimate knowledge of the family's movement stole the child.

In the house at the time of the kidnaping were Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, Betty Gow, and Ollie Wheatley, the butler, and his wife. No one had heard a sound.

Used Extension Ladder.

The baby's room was on the second floor of the house. A three-piece extension ladder was found on the grounds not far from the window. A chisel was found in the grass. Later the ladder was identified as having been made of wood obtained from a nearby State institution.

Immediately the eyes of America and the world were centered on the lonely home in the Jersey hills. Two hundred New Jersey police, and police from surrounding States, joined in the kidnap hunt. In a few days they were joined by all the police departments of the world.

From the beginning there was a feeling that someone inside the house knew something of the crime. Betty Gow and the butler were questioned repeatedly, but police finally decided they knew nothing of the kidnaping.

Immediately rumors began to fly. On the second day it was reported that Lindbergh had learned the baby was safe. It is certain that he received a number of communications. They may or may not have been from persons connected with the kidnaping. A mysterious airplane flew over the house, dropped a note.

It was reported that ransom of $50,000 had been asked, but it was not until days afterward that this fact was verified. On the day after the kidnaping reporters and others were ordered to withdraw and told the baby was about to be returned. This was the first of an endless chain of false reports.

Mrs. Lindbergh revealed that the baby had been suffering from a slight cold and she was concerned about his health. She broadcast the baby's diet and feeding instructions with the nope that the kidnapers would hear her and know how to take care of the child.

First Arrest.

Lindbergh let it be known that he was ready and willing to deal with the kidnapers and pay the ransom. He broadcast an appeal to the kidnapers to communicate with him. British police were asked to look into the persona' histories of Betty Gow and Wheatley, both of whom had come from England.

On March 4, Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh caused to be published a signed statement appealing to the kidnapers to get in touch with them and promising they would not be molested. Lindbergh's airplane was tuned up for a flight and he made a short trip away from home by automobile, the first of scores of such trips.

On the same day the first arrest in the case was made. The man arrested was Henry (Red) Johnson, a friend of Betty Gow. Johnson, a sailor, was held at Hartford, Conn. He was taken to New Jersey and questioned for days before the police became convinced that he knew nothing of the kidnaping. It was felt that he had unwittingly given the location of the baby's room to the kidnapers. He had visited Betty Gow at the Lindbergh home. An appeal in six languages was made to the kidnapers over the radio.

Underworld Leaders Enlisted.

On March 5, Lindbergh sprung a surprise. He announced that he had secured the services of Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz, New York underworld characters, to contact the kidnapers. Hopewell took on the appearance of a war base. Spitale and representatives of Lindbergh conferred the next day at Princeton, N. J. Spitale said he had enlisted 20 Broadway racketeers to aid him in the search.

Reports continued that the kidnapers were communicating with the child's father. It was said another note with the same handwriting as the original had been received. New Jersey police continued to deny the existence of an original note, evidently fearing the kidnapers would be frightened. Lindbergh continued to repeat his promise that the kidnapers would be safe if they would deal with him.

Grounds Again Cleared.

Another report that the baby was about to be returned was circulated on March 8 and the grounds of the Lindbergh home were again cleared. Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, head of the New Jersey police, replied to all questions that the "investigation was incomplete."

On March 24, John Hughes Curtis, Rear Admiral Guy W. Burrage, retired, and Dean H. Dobson-Peacock came into the limelight at Norfolk, Va., where they declared they had established a contact with the kidnapers, who, according to their story, had the child on a rum-runner's boat off the coast.

Curtis, a native of Portsmouth, neighboring town to Norfolk, was president and owner of the J. H. Curtis Boat and Engine Co. Dean Dobson-Peacock was rector of Christ Episcopal Church, in the fashionable section of Norfolk, and Curtis was one of his leading church members. It was therefore natural that the rector should believe him when he went to him with the story that on March 9 he had been stopped by a man who hopped onto the running board of his car and asked him to serve as a go-between for the kidnapers of the Lindbergh child.

Not only did Dean Dobson-Peacock himself sponsor Curtis in his mission to Col. Lindbergh but he interested another of his influential parishioners, Rear Admiral Burrage, in the affair.

When they presented their story to Col. Lindbergh and the New Jersey police it was at first given small credence, since at that very time the real kidnapers were negotiating with the colonel through "Jafsie."

Minister's Hopes High.

But the Norfolk intermediaries insisted they were in touch with those who had the child, and even after Col. Breckenridge, lawyer for Lindbergh, told them that his client believed their information was false, the Rev. Dobson-Peacock reported confidently:

"We will recover the baby."

Curtis had obtained permission from Col. Charles Consolvo to use his yacht, the Marcon, in contacting the kidnapers at sea.

He made several trips to look for them, and after one of these trips he reported having contacted them. There had been talk, he said, of a $50,000 ransom.

Col. Lindbergh at last consented to board the Marcon for the first of a series of futile rides up and down the coast. They were looking, according to Curtis, for a fishing vessel, the Mary B. Moss, on board which the baby was held. On payment of the ransom it would be returned to its father. The fishing vessel was never found.

When the trips came to nothing, Burrage personally vouched to Lindbergh for the high caracter of Curtis, and suggested that the contact with the fishing vessel might better be made with a plane. Curtis volunteered to descend in a parachute to talk with the abductors if their boat was found.

Planes Aided Search.

Meanwhile other airplanes scanned the waters of the Atlantic and dropped notes to Curtis giving the location of fishing vessels which answered his general description of the Mary B. Moss.

But though the Marcon, with Lindbergh aboard, and later the Cachalot, another yacht which offered its service, combed the waters along the Atlantic seaboar , no trace of the fishing vessel supposedly used by the kidnapers could be found.

Burrage made the statement that he was sure that he and his companions were dealing with the kidnap gang. More airplane and boat trips were made. Meanwhile the New Jersey police sent an officer to England to check up on a reported angle in that country. Curtis continued to make trips to sea and indicated that the baby would be returned from a boat.

Then the hunt broke loose in another direction. Lindbergh and his adviser, Col. Breckinridge, made an airplane trip to Massachusetts and landed at Marthas Vineyard. It was reported that a contact might be made there.

On April 6, Curtis returned after a four-day absence and reported he had seen the kidnapers and been told the baby was well. It was reported Curtis also had gone to Marthas Vineyard.

Then the whole theory of the return of the child broke down. Lindbergh revealed that he had paid $50,000 in ransom money and the baby had not been returned. He said he was sure the kidnapers had properly identified themselves. A record of the serial numbers of the bills paid out had been kept. These numbers were now made public and everyone was asked to watch for them. Repeated reports that some of the money had been found were circulated, but none of it was traced.

"Jafsie" Enters Story.

It was at this point that the public learned of "Jafsie." Since shortly after the kidnaping advertisements had been appearing in the New York papers, evidently referring to the kidnaping. They were invariably signed "Jafsie." They stated that "the money is ready" and once an ad said "what is the matter? Have you double crossed me?" There had been 13 advertisements in all.

"Jafsie" was now revealed as J. F. Condon, a 70-year-old lecturer at Fordham University. He revealed that shortly after the kidnaping he had offered a $1,000 reward and that he had immediately been contacted by persons representing themselves to be the kidnapers.

Condon had met a man one night beside a fence and the man had in his possession clothing Condon believed to belong to the Lindbergh baby. Condon and Lindbergh had been working together. Lindbergh also was convinced that Condon had contacted the kidnapers. On the night of April 2, Condon with a satchel containing $50,000 met a man in a cemetery and gave him the money.

Lindbergh waited nearby in an automobile. The man had a sleeping garment Condon believed belonged to the baby. The man took the money and disappeared. It was after this affair that Lindbergh made public the numbers of the bank notes. There never was any question about Condon's good faith.

Gaston B. Means in Case.

Meanwhile, the group in Norfolk were continuing their secret trips and indicating they believed the baby might be returned. Lindbergh went to Norfolk and made a trip in a boat, presumably hoping to contact the kidnapers.

There was another lull in the case until May 5, when Gaston B. Means, who had been a Department of Justice investigator during the Harding Administration, was suddenly arrested. He was charged with having obtained $100,000 from Mrs. Edward B. McLean, of Washington, on his promise to reveal the whereabouts of the baby.

Mrs. McLean said Means had told her the baby was in Mexico. She had made a trip to El Paso, Tex., in the hope of bringing the child back with her. Mrs. McLean said she gave Means the money at Aiken, S. C. She revealed that after he obtained the $100,000 Means demanded $35,000 more, suggesting that Mrs. McLean pawn her jewels to raise the money.

$100,000 Still Missing.

Means, after having been released on $50,000 bond, was finally brought to trial and convicted of larceny. On June 15 he was sentenced to 15 years in prison. He is now serving his term in Lewisburg, Pa. A search was made for the $100,000. Safety deposit boxes were opened, but the money never was found.

On May 12 Lindbergh and Curtis were in a boat off Norfolk, still attempting to contact the supposed kidnapers. William Allen, a colored truck driver, stopped his truck beside a road less than five miles from the Lindbergh home. He went a short distance into the woods and found under leaves and dirt the body of a baby.

Body Identified.

The body was immediately identified as that of the Lindbergh baby, although badly decomposed. The baby had died as a result of two blows on the head. It evidently had been dead since immediately after the kidnaping. The child was identified by clothing, which was recognized by Betty Gow. The hair was the color of the hair of the missing baby. Lindbergh hurried home. Mrs. Lindbergh was at the home when the body was found. Both were convinced beyond a doubt that the body was that of their child.

Maid Is Suicide.

The hunt for the kidnapers was resumed with renewed vigor. President Hoover pledged all the resources of the United States to capture the kidnapers. The hunt has been going on unabated. J. Edgar Hoover was put directly in charge of the hunt and has been in charge ever since. Reports of clews to the kidnapers have been received from time to time.

A week after the body was found Curtis confessed that he had perpetrated a hoax on the police and on Lindbergh. He signed a statement saying his story of negotiations was not true.

On June 10 excitement flared up again. Violet Sharpe, a maid at the Morrow home, committeed suicide There was nothing, however, to connect her with the kidnaping. Two friends of Violet Sharpe were arrested, but they proved they could have had nothing to do with the crime.

Kidnap Suspect In Labatt Case Held in Detroit

Meisner, Surrendering to Detectives, Protests Innocence.

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP).—Asserting he did not "have the first thing to do with this kidnaping," David Meisner, one of the two men sought by Detroit and Canadian authorities in connection with the kidnaping a month ago of John Labatt, London, Ont., brewer, surrendered to local detectives today.

Meisner said he could produce "all the witnesses in the world—even policemen" to prove he was in Cincinnati at the time of the kidnaping.

He surrendered to Inspector John Hoffman, of the special investigation squad, by appointment this afternoon. Hoffman said Meisner surrendered without any conditions. The other man sought is Albert Pegram.

Meisner, a Canadian citizen, can be extradited by the Canadian government, if necessary, but he said he will fight these efforts unless he is sure of a "square deal in the Ontario courts."

As Meisner surrendered, Fred W. Frahm, Detroit, chief of detectives and Inspector Hamar Gardner, of the Ontario provincial police, were seeking him and Pegram, near Timmins, Ontario, 700 miles from Detroit.

Labatt, who has a summer home near Sarnia, Ontario, on the St. Clair River, was seized as he was driving to London from that point, and was held for several days. He was released unharmed. While members of the family claimed no ransom was paid, it was reported his captors were given $25,000 for his release.

Farley Urges Dakotans To Support New Deal

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Sept. 20 (AP). Postmaster General James A. Farley lauded the New Deal as having placed the Nation on the road to economic recovery, in an address here tonight. He appealed to the South Dakota electorate to support the Roosevelt Administration by returning the incumbent Democratic officeholders in the November election.

He flayed the previous Administration for "selfishness" and "blundering and bungling," and praised the Roosevelt Administration for its handling of economic policies.

Mrs. Lindbergh and I desire to make a personal contact with the kidnappers of our child.

Our only interest is in his immediate and safe return and we feel certain that the kidnappers will realize that this interest is strong enough to justify them in having complete confidence and trust in any promises that we may make in connection with his return.

We urge those who have the child to select any representative that they desire to meet a representative of ours who will be suitable to them at any time and at any place that they may designate.

If this is accepted, we promise that we will keep whatever arrangements that may be made by their representative and ours strictly confidential, and we further pledge ourselves that we will not try to injure in any way those connected with the return of the child.

Code Heads Lax In Cooperating, NRA Aid Says

Blackwell Smith Says Some Acted Role of 'Pressure Groups.'

Unidentified code authorities were rebuked for failure to cooperate with NRA and to act in the public interest yesterday by Blackwell Smith, acting chief counsel of the Recovery Administration.

He spoke in what he termed a "Dutch uncle" talk at the meeting of American Trade Association Executives in the Shoreham Hotel.

The NRA code-making system in turn came under the fire of Ralph E. Flanders, of Springfield, Mass., a member of Secretary Roper's advisory and planning council. He characterized price-control and other competition-reducing code provisions as "poison traps."

Code Groups Criticized.

"Some code authorities, staffed by trade association officers," said Mr. Smith, "have played the part during this last year, of pressure groups, often not disclosing to the Government the known weaknesses of proposals sponsored nor the degree to which the industry itself is opposed to such proposals.

"This sort of thing has weakened the confidence of Government in the agencies of industrial self-government."

"Certain code authorities were granted power under the codes to fix minimum prices according to formulas outlined in their codes. In several instances the exercises of these powers has been without close conformity to apparent public interest or the formulas of the codes, resulting in an unenforceable conflict with the psychological and economic laws. * * *

"This has brought down on the head of government in such cases the disapproval of the industries due to the resulting nonenforcement. More serious still, this has further weakened the confidence of government in agencies of self-government in industry."

Points to Difficulty.

Mr. Smith declared the Government had no intention to withdraw from price control and production limitation "if they can be administered by agencies of self-government and the Government." He hastily added: "That is a big 'if.'"

Mr. Flanders said "the temptation is great" for individual business men to see competition as anything but an evil.

"And, so," he said, "we grasp at the chance offered by the codes to free ourselves from its annoyances and dangers and seek protection in an ordered and controlled business economy.

"The bait is tempting, but the trap is strong, swift and sharp; and the bait is poisoned * * * We will learn that safety and ease are purchased at the cost of governmental regulation.

"There is developing an inevitable loss of efficiency, a growth in wasteful bureaucracy, an asphyxiation of constructive private effort and a resulting decrease in the general standard of living. This will be a heavy price for the worker of this country to pay for a transient sense of security for himself or for a similar illusion on the part of the business man."

Private Profit Urged.

Flanders urged the Administration to encourage private profit.

"We will preserve the minimum wage clauses, though perhaps more carefully studying the problems of regional variations and the desirable variations as between urban and rural conditions," he said. "If the Administration will wholeheartedly encourage private profit and private initiative we may look forward to raising these minimums.

"We will oppose further shortening of hours as destructive of hopes for a raised standard of living. * * *

"Open prices must not merely be permitted, they must be enforced. * * *

"Certain of the unfair practice clauses should be retained, discarding the great mass which look toward a restriction of effective competition. Bribery, dishonesty—these are obviously out of place in self-respecting business."

Revision of the proposed amendments to the agricultural adjustment act, which failed of passage at the last session of Congress, was demanded by Charles J. Brand, secretary and treasurer of the National Fertilizer Association.

Old Sea Giants In Alabama

New York (U.P.).—Two 60,000,000-year-old sea giants—a sea turtle and a sea lizard, called a mosasaur—have been unearthed from the chalk beds of Alabama.

These latest contributions to historical geology reveal that the present State of Alabama once was the bottom of a prehistoric ocean. Taken from the chalk beds, which are associated with the Cretaceous period, they are objects of unusual interest to paleontologists, according to J. J. Renger, who reported his discovery of them in "Rocks and Minerals."

The turtle measures 10 feet from stem to stern and has a width of 11 feet, between the two forward flippers. From the joint in the shoulder girdle to the tip of the flipper is 4 feet 4 inches. With a prow in the form of a 6-inch pointed beak, its head is 20 inches long. Despite the turtle's weight, which was about two and a half tons, and although it appears to have been cumbersome, it was an able and powerful swimmer.

Compared to the recently acquired ancestor of present-day turtles, the lizard, which once undulated through the shallow seas above Alabama, is not without certain points of interest to those who demand the unusual in prehistoric animals. The lizard's head is 5 feet long, the jaws of which are about 4 feet in length, with sharp, curved teeth.

$10 and $20 gold certificate passed on to them.

"It was suggested, whenever possible, to mark either a street address or automobile license number on the bills of the one passing the bill.

"In connection with this we traced a $20 gold certificate to a shoe store in Fordham and from that merchant we secured a description of the man who passed it.

"Subsequently, one of the ransom bills bearing an automobile license number was discovered in the Corn Exchange Bank at Park Avenue and 125th street. From there the bill was traced to a gas station in the vicinity of the bank.

Descriptions Tally.

"The operator of the gas station described the customer who passed the $20 gold certificate in an almost identical fashion as the one described by the Fordhm shoe store proprietor.

"Securing the name and address of the owner of the automobile bearing the license number appearing on the bill, the investigators kept the premises under surveillance. Because of the importance of the case and the danger in the least possible slip-up, the men acted with caution and at 9 a. m. Tuesday morning, Bruno Richard Hauptmann was seen to leave his residence in the automobile bearing the license which appeared on the bill, and started toward Yorkville, with the detectives following.

"When his car reached Tremont and Park avenue, the detectives halted Hauptmann's car, directed him to get out and, searching him, found another $20 gold certificate identified as part of the Lindbergh ransom.

Denies Ransom Knowledge.

"He was immediately taken back to his house and while questioned there admitted passing the $10 and $20 gold certificates found by the police. He denied, however, all knowledge of the Lindbergh ransome money.

"Meanwhile a search of the place was instituted and a pair of shoes located and identified by the Fordham shoe store proprietor was found.

"Today, in continuation of the search of the house, Detectives John Murphy, Frank Dunn and James Petrosini, of the New York police department; Sergt. Wallace, of the New Jersey State police, and Special Agent Turo, of the Department of Justice, after a diligent search of the entire premises found $13,750 hidden under the floor of the garage and in the sash of the door.

Served in Germany Army.

"From the many conflicting stories Hauptmann has told detectives, we learned that he is 35 years old, born in Saxony, Germany, and, after serving in the German army, stowed away on the steamship Washington, arriving in the United States at New York in 1923.

"He stated he had odd jobs about the city until 1926, when he married and madt his home in the Bronx.

"Strangely enough, he explains that shortly after the ransom money was paid, he quit working and devoted his time to trading in the stock market.

"He explains the presence of the money as a result of careful savings, and the gold certificates as foresight, with word of the supposed inflation shortly after President Roosevelt took office.

Bank Denies His Story.

"However, in tracing back to the bank which he stated issued him the gold certificates we got a blank denial of each phase of his story.

"Somewhat significant is an admission that he had been employed in the neighborhood of the Lindbergh's Hopewell home as a carpenter.

"In addition, the detectives have established beyond question that he had access to a lumber yard where lumber bearing a peculiar mark similar to that found on the lumber in the ladder, which was found at the scene of the kidnaping, is to be had.

"Despite the fact that Hauptmann denied that he had a criminal record, I have just been advised that tonight he admits he was on parole and escaped as a stowaway from Germany to prevent his return to prison there."

Dock Plot Results In Dynamite Hunt

319 Pounds Found at Morgan Line, 900 Stolen in All

Houston, Tex., Sept. 20 (AP).—An apparent attempt to blow up the Morgan Line docks on the Houston ship channel sent police and shipping men on a frantic search along the waterfront today for possible additional dynamite caches.

Officials of the Morgan Line disclosed that 319 pounds of dynamite connected to a battery and an alarm clock were found under the docks late yesterday by two sailors.

Anxiety increased when it was reported 900 pounds of dynamite had been stolen from the Victoria area. Labor troubles have flared here at intervals for several months in disagreements between union longshoremen and ship operators. The Morgan Line employs independent longshoremen.

Machine Guns Guard Madrid From Revolt

Martial Law Is Ordered if Reported Rebellion Materializes.

dawn today found Madrid under heavy guard, as Alonso under the powers given him by the "state of prevention" in force for many months posted machine guns to cover vital spots and set riflemen patrolling the streets.

Machine guns and rifles were the instruments selected by the alleged Communist, Socialist and anarchist plotters to deal death to all Spain's officials, authorities said, while using bombs, liquid flame and even red pepper to spread terror everywhere.

Ministerial circles, in revealing the preparation of the emergency decrees, expressed the opinion their use would not be necessary, although the belief also was expressed that Alonso might enforce the "state of alarm" tonight or tomorrow as an additional precautionary measure.

Alonso assured the cabinet that extreme measures for public order are being taken throughout Spain and the government's intelligence service is active in tracking down conspirators, many of whom already are under arrest. Quantities of arms have been confiscated.

Authorities said documents found on Francisco Ordonez, Madrid University athletic coach, who was arrested yesterday, gave away the conspiracy, which they said involved Socialists, Communists and Anarchists.

Police Seeking Girl 'Looking for Work'

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Police in two States today were seeking the whereabouts of Mildred Sprenkle, 14, daughter of Fred Sprenkle, school director of Quincy Township, missing from her home since Tuesday.

When she did not return home from school Tuesday evening, the family instigated a search. A note was found indicating the girl's dislike for school and her intention of going to "Waynesboro for work." An extensive search failed to reveal her whereabouts any place in this section.

Relatives in Maryland and Pennsylvania were queried by police and her parents, in the belief she had been stopping there. Their efforts were fruitless. Police of Maryland and Pennsylvania have been given a description of the girl, who was last seen walking along the railroad tracks toward Waynesboro with a bundle containing an extra dress and a pair of shoes, Mrs. Sprenkle said, after searching through the young girl's wardrobe.

PWA Work Continued At Teachers College

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Construction of dormitories at the State Teachers College here was still being carried on today and no orders for cessation had been received, despite recent announcement that all Virginia PWA projects, of which the dormitories form a part, had been suspended pending adjustment of wage disputes, Dr. Morgan L. Combs, college president, said.

Suspension of pay rolls for the workers here has not been ordered, according to Charles Todd, PWA engineer in charge of the construction.

Makers Deny Two Gas Deaths In Bonus Rout

Challenge Story Babies Were Killed; Gen. Leach Assailed.

By Robert C. Albright.

The bonus battle of Pennsylvania avenue was fought over again in a Senate committee room yesterday, as tear-gas manufacturers heatedly denied any babies were killed by gas hurled at retreating veterans.

A charge that two babies were gassed to death by tear grenades in the bonus march rout from Washington was made by Senator Bennett Champ Clark, former National commander of the American Legion.

In the next breath the Missouri Democrat loudly demanded Maj. Gen. George E. Leach, Chief of the Army's Bureau of Militia, "be put before a board" for a letter praising B. C. Goss, president of United States Ordnance Engineers Co., Cleveland tear-gas makers.

The Leach letter, written on War Department stationery, addressed to Brig. Gen. Ralph M. Immell, of the Wisconsin National Guard, was published in an advertising catalogue issued by the Lake Erie Chemical Co., also headed by Goss.

Called Salesman.

"It is my opinion Gen. Leach ought to be put before a board for acting as a salesman for a poison gas company," said Senator Clark, when Goss said he saw nothing wrong with the letter.

At his home here last night, Gen. Leach had no comment to make.

He declared, however, that any information he has on the subject of tear gas is at the service of the committee.

The Missourian's assertion that babies were killed in the Army's eviction of bonus marchers in August two years ago was challenged at once by Goss, who roundly criticized committee tactics.

"I have been sitting here since Monday," he said. "I have the distinct impression that some of these questions are not addressed to witnesses, but are intended to give the impression that people who make tear gas are the enemies of labor and the people generally.

"That simply isn't so. I challenge your statement that two babies were gassed. Doctors and Army experts will bear me out. I don't believe you can prove the statement."

Too Late for Facts.

"It is too late now to get the facts, but I believe it is true," said Clark.

Earlier, the committee completed examination of John W. Young, of Federal Laboratories, and Frank Jonas, associate, with the following disclosures:

Mrs. Patricia Kendall, of Virginia and England, socialite and novelist, was listed as agent of Federal Laboratories for the British empire in a letter written by Young to President Walter B. Ryan, president of the Auto Ordnance Co.

Young told the committee this was a "mistake." He said Mrs. Kendall was interested in using tear gas in rioting in India as a "humanitarian" measure.

Paul Young, brother of the Federal Laboratories official, and a missionary for the Christian Missionary Alliance in Ecuador, wrote for quotations on tear gas grenades and "billies" after exhibiting his brother's products to high officials of the South American republic. In the same letter he told of missionary work with Ecuador Indians.

A comprehensive plan for development of a chemical warfare unit in Colombia was submitted two years ago to that republic by Goss, of United States Ordnance Engineers, the committee was told. Goss offered plans for building mustard gas, chloracetophenone gas and diphenylamenechlorarsine gas plants, to make the "three most important war gases."

Means of beating an impending League of Nations embargo on South American bomb importations, by antedating a contract, were proposed by F. V. Huber, export representative of United States Ordnance Engineers, in a letter written in May, 1933, it was testified.

Witness Thanked.

Dismissing Jonas, export agent of Federal Laboratories, Chairman Gerald P. Nye thanked him for disclosures, declaring "munitions companies in the next few weeks are going to be taking public baths" and "folks like you are going to lose their jobs to other people who will use the same methods."

Young, of Federal Laboratories, in a letter to Okura & Co. of Japan, read to the committee, offered tear-gas patents for sale, urging early acceptance "due to the impending possibility of Federal embargoes."

Criticizing his action, Nye said War Department preparations are being made against the "possibility" of war with Japan.

Striker Squad Of 19 Is Jailed In Winchester

Group Was Distributing Pamphlets at Virginia Woolen Mills.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Industrial Winchester was tense late today after the arrest and imprisonment of 19 strikers from Martinsburg, W. Va., who came to Winchester today and attempted to disseminate strike literature at a textile plant.

Chief of Police C. W. Hollis, who ordered that the group, including four women, be taken into custody after they started distributing strike pamphlets at the Virginia Woolen Mills, said that each person was being held under $150 bond on charges of disturbing the peace. Early tonight no efforts had been made to secure the freedom of any of those held. None of those held made any statement.

Reports that another invasion of Martinsburg strikers would take place tonight led Chief of Police Hollis to request Gov. Peery to send State policemen here to augment the local city and county forces.

Chief of Police Hollis and his local force were on guard tonight along with ten State troopers commanded by Superintendent H. B. Nicholas, and it was announced that anyone attempting to picket the mills would be taken to jail. Tear gas bombs, sub-machine guns and revolvers were among the equipment of the officers who said they were taking no chances of an outbreak. It was understood from a reliable quarter that the two National Guard companies were being held in readiness.

Reports that a large force of strikers armed with clubs and stones was moving on Winchester from Martinsburg sent a detachment of officers hurrying to the West Virginia line 7 miles away this afternoon, but no crowd appeared. The road still was guarded tonight.

Mayor Hurries Home.

Mayor Charles R. Anderson, who had been attending the annual meeting of the League of Virginia Municipalities at Staunton, hurried home late today after hearing alarming reports of conditions here. He found everything quiet but held conferences with police and mill owners and arranged to have factories guarded both within and without as long as it might appear advisable.

Commenting on the attempt of the group to distribute literature urging a strike here, the police chief said: "You can say that we do not expect to allow any picketing at local mills and persons who attempt to picket or distribute literature will be arrested."

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—One hundred strikers from Martinsburg, W. Va., textile mills were ordered to leave this morning, when they invaded the town in an effort to induce workers in the Interwoven Mill to strike.

Sheriff P. E. Yost of Morgan County, who headed a group of officers who met the "flying squadron," said a movement was in progress to have the strikers denied permission to use the courthouse for a meeting next Tuesday lest trouble might result.

In the crowd that met the squadron, traveling in 25 automobiles, were a number of armed citizens. Sheriff Yost conferred with the leader of the strikers and told him of the feeling in the town with regard to picketing, and the strikers left after being given ten minutes to get out of town.

Coach Exonerated Of Auto Tragedy

W. L. Scott Freed in Death of Charles Cromwell.

Norfolk, Sept. 20 (AP).—William L. Scott, 25, freshman coach at the College of William and Mary, stood exonerated of a murder charge tonight after Police Justice R. B. Spindle, jr., had ruled there was no gross negligence observable in an automobile accident Sunday night fatal to Charles E. Cromwell, 28, Navy enlisted man.

Scott, who was driving, and other occupants of his car testified they were proceeding toward the Newport News Ferry docks at the naval base when a man appeared unexpectedly from the darkness in front of the machine. He was struck down before the machine could be swerved.

State Dentists To Assemble At Frederick

Maryland Association to Hold Business and Social Reunion.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The eleventh semiannual meeting of the Maryland State Dental Association will be held at the Francis Scott Key Hotel here Monday and Tuesday, September 24 and 25. About 200 dentists and their wives will attend. In addition to the business sessions, social events will be planned for each day.

Dr. Thomas S. Eader, president of the Frederick County Dental Association and past president of the State association, will give a reception at his home, Clark place, Sunday night, September 23, in honor of the visiting members. Registration will take place Monday morning, followed by an address of welcome by Dr. Eader on behalf of the local association, with response by Dr. D. C. Blevins, Baltimore, president of the State association. A business session will then be held at which papers will be read, followed in the afternoon by a meeting of the board of governors and clinics.

A trip to Harpers Ferry and a tea at the Hill Top House has been planned for Monday afternoon for the ladies, following a bridge party at the Catoctin Country Club in the morning at 10 o'clock. A dance will be held in the ball room of the Francis Scott Key Hotel in the evening.

Tuesday will be devoted entirely to entertainment. The eleventh annual 36-hole golf tournament will be played on the course of the Catoctin Country Club, beginning at 9 o'clock a. m. There will be a low gross prize, the Maryland State Dental Association Golf Trophy, a runner-up prize, low net prize and other prizes. Luncheon will follow the tournament at the country club in the afternoon.

Committees planning the events include Dr. A. A. Radcliff, Dr. A. K. Leon, Dr. Ralph B. Campbell, Dr. William E. Trail, Dr. Bernard M. Davis and Dr. Charles Broadrupp. Mrs. Helen Eader Johnson is chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment for the ladies. Dr. Davis, this city, is vice president of the State association.

Prof. Francis Jacob In West Virginia Post

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Prof. Francis William Jacob, who has taught law in the University of Chicago, Kansas and California, will succeed Frank J. Horack as professor of law at the University of West Virginia.

Granted a year's leave of absence, Horack has gone to Washington to become statistical director in the division of the bureau of litigation in the Treasury Department. Prof. Thomas C. Billig, another faculty member given a similar leave of absence, is serving as a member of the NRA staff in Washington.

Charge of Operating Still Holds Two Men

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Two men were held in $500 bail each on charges of operating an illicit distillery after a hearing yesterday before United States Commissioner E. E. Fisher.

The men are Eugene Howdersheldt, 18, and Clayton Bryant, 30. Another hearing will take place in Alexandria. Federal revenue officers Sam Burgess, John Millam and John Fitzpatrick surprised Bryant and Howdersheldt in the woods near here.

Postmastership Stays in Family For 134 Years

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.). With the reappointment of G. T. Brown as postmaster at Brownsville, Washington County, that office has been in the Brown family for 134 consecutive years, with the exception of one term under President Grover Cleveland.

John Brown, the present postmaster's grandfather, was appointed postmaster in 1830 by President Andrew Jackson. He served until his death at the age of 98. He was the oldest postmaster in point of service in the United States.

He was succeeded by his son, Cornelius Brown, while the present postmaster, a son of Cornelius, was appointed in 1898 by Postmaster General James A. Gary and has served continuously since.

John Brown, first member of the family to serve as postmaster, was founder of the town.

Draft Measure Support Urged

Richmond Veteran Calls on Legion to Back Universal Bill.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Senator John J. Wicker, of Richmond, in installing officers of Rockingham Post of the American Legion last night, called upon the veterans to work for the universal draft bill to be introduced at the coming session of Congress.

By taking away the profit of war, he declared, the munitions makers and other militarists will not be anxious for conflict. He referred to the disclosures of the Senate munitions committee now in session.

"The munitions trust," asserted Wicker, "have no regard for the tremendous loss of life in war. They are only concerned with starting wars and reaping a benefit from them. If everything is nationalized in a state of emergency, the arms and powder makers will not be encouraging trouble."

Frank Cavdeo, Richmond, State director of the National Reemployment Service, and Raymond Maxie, veterans' placement officer, also spoke.

Virgil Ryan was installed as commander to succeed Dr. John Sawhill. Erwin Chapman took his office as adjutant.

College Editors Form Association

Better Social Conditions Aim of Group.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Editors of college newspapers in the United States and Canada have organized for the purpose of promoting among students peace, good government and better social conditions.

Murat Williams, of Richmond, editor of College Topics at the University of Virginia, with representatives of the leading institutions in the East, attended a meeting last week-end in New York which formed the organization, to be known as the Association of College Editors. While the Literary Digest was instrumental in bringing the college writers together, its future activities will be of an advisory nature only, lending no financial assistance.

The association will sponsor a column under the heading "Trend" in member publications, and conduct during the present school year several extensive polls on current questions.

James Chosen To Head G.O.P. County Group

Plans for Active Campaign Made at Frederick Conference.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The New Republican county central committee met yesterday and organized by electing E. Austin James, chairman; Estee B. Zentz, Thurmont, vice chairman; Oliver C. Keefer, secretary, and Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Mushhower, treasurer. The meeting was largely attended and harmonious, 22 out of the 26 election districts being represented.

Plans were made for an active campaign. Headquarters will be opened tomorrow and weekly social events will be given by the new Republican Club organized Monday night. Talks were made Thomas A. Chapline, candidate for county treasurer; Leslie W. Gaver, Middletown, candidate for register of wills; Jesse I. Renner, U. Grant Hooper and Abraham H. Derr, candidates for county commissioners; Joseph B. Payne, Jacob R. Ramsburg, John F. Thompson and Joseph R. Harp, candidate for the House of Delegates; Pinkney A. Richardson, near Woodsboro; Samuel U. Gregg, Frederick, and George Doub, Middletown, candidates for judges of the orphans court; Guy Anders, candidate for sheriff; former State Senator Dr. Charles F. Goodell, who has been selected for temporary chairman at the State convention, Baltimore, September 27; Reno S. Harp, Dr. David G. Everhart and others.

Announcement was made that the next registration days will be October 2 and 9 and revision day October 16. New voters may register October 2 and 9. Revision day is for voters whose names have been erased from the poll books to appear and show cause why their names should be restored.

The central committee, with a membership of 390, is the political governing body of the county.

Dean Gifford Renamed To Head Religious Body

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Dean Walter J. Gifford, of the State Teachers College, was reelected president of the Rockingham Council of Religious Education at the annual convention held here yesterday. George S. Harnsberger, Harrisonburg attorney, was named vice president, Mrs. W. H. Ballengee, secretary, and Clyde Peters, treasurer.

The convention went on record as extending the week-day schools of religious education, which have been in progress in Rockingham and Harrisonburg for several years.

Cumberland Tightens Police, Firemen Tests

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Hereafter, applicants for the Cumberland police and fire departments must have a high school education or better, in addition to physical qualifications, to get on the eligible list. College-trained men will be given educational credit.

The civil service board will hold an examination of qualified applicants for the Cumberland police and fire departments October 8 at 7 p. m. at Union Street School. The examination will be written as well as oral.

Higher Prices For Albemarle Apples Likely

Hundreds Busy Picking Short Crop in Virginia Territory.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Albemarle growers have begun the harvesting of their fall apple crops. Hundreds of men, some from outside of the State, are busy picking and packing the fruit.

Indications are that a yield of 45 per cent is about the best that can be expected by the local growers, but the crops have given evidence of better quality than usual.

Because of the scarcity of the crop and the better quality, prices for this season are expected to be above those of last year. So far brokers report only few sales. Winesaps, 2¼ up, selling at $4 per barrel, were said to be the best seller to date. Yorks, in the few being sold, were bringing from $1 to $1.05 per barrel for those 2½ up.

Among the early apples, no sales in Pippins were reported through brokers, although it was said growers were asking from $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel. Some Delicious were being marketed at $1.05 per barrel for 2½ and $1.65 for 2¾ up.

Although early sales were said to be light, truckers have been buying considerable quantities, it is reported, and a good deal of the crop is expected to be stored.

Harvesting operations will continue during the next six weeks. Wages for the workers, many of whom have been on the relief rolls, approximate $1.50 per day.

Loudoun County Enrollment Gains

3,039 Pupils Reported, Increase of 18.

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—A total enrollment of 3,039 pupils in Loudoun County schools was made this year, an increase of 18 over last year's number, according to O. L. Emerick, superintendent of schools.

A large increase was reported in the high school departments this year, 646 pupils having been enrolled, as against 608 last year. In the grades the numbers dropped.

Lincoln High, with 181 pupils enrolled, has the largest number in the high school department, while Leesburg High, with 105, comes next.

Funeral Services Held For Mrs. Henderson

Grafton, W. Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Mrs. Mary Henderson, 67, widow of John Henderson, who took her own life by hanging to a doorway at the home of her son, William Dorsey Henderson, East Grafton. She had been depressed since the death of her husband two and a half years ago.

She was a daughter of the late W. R. and Margaret Jane Miller Davis, and was born and reared in Taylor County. She is survived by Mrs. A. S. Poe, William D. Henderson, Londo B. Henderson, Nathan Henderson and Mrs. John Collison, all of Grafton; George Earle Henderson, of Cumberland; Md.; John G. Henderson, of Baltimore, and Mrs. William Bolinger, of New York.

Spotswood Relics To Be on Display At Fete in Orange

Orange, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—A whisky case, Bible, and candle stand belonging to Colonial Gov. Spotwood, were found today by a committee collecting historical relics for the museum to be a part of the Orange County bicentennial celebration here, September 25 to 28.

The relics are the property of Mrs. Morton Pannill, of Raccoon Ford, Va. In addition to this find, a letter was received today by D. N. Davidson, chairman of the general committee, from Arthur Keith, of Vermillion, S. Dak., who offers for exhibition a razor hone brought to this country in 1717 by his ancestor, Nicholas Yager, who was born in Weichersbach, Hesse, Germany, in 1678. He arrived in Virginia in 1717 and in 1725 settled in Madison County.

Track Worker Killed by Truck

Charlottesville Man Victim of Hit-Run Driver While on Duty.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Struck by a hit-and-run truck driver while at work late yesterday afternoon welding the tracks of the Charlottesville & Albemarle Street Railway, William E. Eades, 60, track foreman, died from his injuries while being rushed to University Hospital. He had several ribs broken and suffered a gash on the head.

Eades, who had been in the employ of the street railway company for nearly 20 years, was a native of Woodridge, Albemarle County. He married Miss Annie Durham, of Albemarle, who survives, with eight children, two sons and six daughters, Artie L. and W. M. Eades, jr., of this city; Mrs. I. L. Ridenour, of Baltimore; Mrs. L. C. Gibson, of Ivy; Mrs. E. A. Breeden and Misses Minnie, Mabel and Josephine Eades, of this city.

Mr. Eades also leaves one brother, J. W. Eades, of this city, and the following sisters: Mrs. Ruby Kirby, of Woodridge; Mrs. Perry Burgess, of Carters Bridge; Mrs. Nannie Durham and Mrs. Ad Maupin, both of Alberene, Albemarle County.

Farmers Receive U. S. Wheat Funds

$43,000 Paid in County for Crop Curtailment.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Final payment for curtailment of the 1933 wheat crop has been received by 367 Washington County farmers. The total received was $43,000.

First payments for the corn-hog curtailment here are expected within a few days.

County farmers will have received a total of $220,000 when final payments arrive for the corn-hog curtailment.

A previous payment of 20 cents a bushel for wheat curtailment, made December, 1933, amounted to $34,000. First payment for the 1934 wheat-crop curtailment will be made within several weeks and will be 20 cents a bushel.

Garden Club Opens Season.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The Warrenton Garden Club, oldest in the South, began its fall series of meetings at Airlie, the estate of Mrs. H. C. Groome near here, today. A dahlia exhibit was featured at the meeting.

Peery to Visit Orange County Bicentennial

Elaborate Plans Are Being Made for Celebration Next Week.

Orange, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Gov. George C. Peery will be the guest of Justice George L. Browning during his visit to the Orange County Bicentennial celebration to be held here next week. Justice Browning also will entertain Miss Westwood Byrd, daughter of Senator Harry F. Byrd, who will represent Clarke County in the bicentennial pageant.

Mrs. George Gordon Battle, of New York, who is staying at her summer home near Rapidan, Campbell Field, has accepted an invitation to serve as chairman of the ball committee. Two large costume balls are planned.

Mrs. L. S. Macon, of Chestnut Hill, who has been appointed chairman of the portrait committee, has selected her committee as follows: Mrs. L. H. Gray and Mrs. Walter Dunnington, of Montebello; Miss Miriam Hill and Mrs. W. W. Harper, of Pelito; Mrs. E. O. Willis, of Culpeper; Mrs. R. M. Spencer, of Gordonsville; Mrs. S. M. Nottingham, Mrs. A. S. Robertson, Mrs. E. H. De Jarnette, Mrs. Anna T. Burgess, of Orange; Mrs. Caroline Barbour Ellis, of Barboursville; George W. Brown, and Mrs. Theodore Scott, of Orange.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reynolds will have as their guest during the celebration, Miss Edna Earl Clore, who will represent Madison County.

Miss Frances R. Hill, representing Roanoke County, will stop with her grandfather, R. Ogden Halsey. Miss Hill is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Givan Hill, of Roanoke.

Miss Carroll Snidow, of Pearisburg, who will be "Miss Giles County," will stay with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Slaughter.

Young Democrats Invited to Meeting

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—A meeting of the Loudoun County Democratic committee has been called for 2 p. m. Saturday to which members of the Young Democratic Club of this county are invited. Plans will be made for the support of the Democratic ticket in November.

Reports have come in that there is considerable activity in the Republican ranks at several points in the county since the nomination of John Locke Green, of Arlington, for Congress in the Eighth District in opposition to Judge Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, incumbent. Lovettsville District, a Republican stronghold, is putting forth an effort to bring out a big vote for Green. The committee is expected to invite Judge Smith to address the voters early in October.

Pocomoke City Woman Will Be Buried Today

Pocomoke City, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Mattye M. Walters, 50, of this city, widow of B. Fuller Walters, will be held at the Presbyterian Church at Bladespring, Va., tomorrow at 3 p. m. Burial will be at the Old Glade Cemetery there.

Mrs. Walters died yesterday. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Hunter B. Morris, of Elizabethton, Tenn., and three brothers, Charles M., Herbert and Crosby McKinney, all of Crawfordsville, Ark.

Staunton Holds A Fashion Show To Climax Fete

Crowds View Display Presented on Stand at City Hall.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Members of this community's younger set paraded the season's gorgeous creations here tonight as a fashion show brought to a close Staunton's first autumn festival and convention week.

Sponsored by merchants of this trading area, mannikins marched before thousands of persons who gathered in the downtown section of the city to view the display, presented from a brightly decorated stand opposite City Hall.

To the strains of orchestra music, a holiday spirit prevailed as the miniature Mardi Gras was staged; vaudeville features, dancing, singing, and other forms of amusement being provided.

Tonight's program followed a block dance in the same neighborhood on Tuesday night, when it is estimated that 4,000 persons participated.

Band Concerts Given.

Other festival events included band concerts at the City Hall presented daily at noon by the Festival Band; Monday night by the Stonewall Brigade Band, and last night by visiting bands.

The parade yesterday was one of the most spectacular in the city's history, there being in line bands, military and fraternal units, State and city police, officials of and visitors to the annual meeting of the League of Virginia Municipalities, while merchants entered elaborate floats.

Seated in the reviewing stand, together with League officials, were the four oldest business people in Staunton—J. J. Prufer, Michael Kivlighan, Henry L. Lang, and Mrs. Clara Hamrick, all of whom have been at the head of concerns here for at least 46 years.

The tournament proved a unique feature, the Knight of the Golden Crown (Edward Shull) taking first honors riding the course without missing a single lance thrust. The Knight of Moscow, Paul Wampler, was second; the Knight of Stony Point, Cyrus Wichael, and the Knight of Mount Solon, Norwood Clinedist, taking third and fourth positions.

"Queens" Are Crowned.

Each of these nominated a queen, and these young women were crowned by Dr. Guy R. Fisher at the public dance on Tuesday evening. The queens were Miss Naomi Stoutmayer, Miss Mary Hosaflook, Miss Vernie Cooke, and Mrs. C. H. Wichael.

The festival program was arranged in connection with the annual conventions here of the League of Virginia Municipalities and its two affiliated organizations, the Virginia Police Executives Association and the Building Officials Conference of Virginia.

Fredericksburg was recommended as the seat of the 1935 convention of the Virginia League of Municipalities in its session today.

E. M. Stull, of Covington, Va., was recommended for president by the nominating committee. Both recommendations will be ratified by the executive committee. Other officers named by the nominating committee were John R. Jolly, Petersburg, first vice president; Roy P. Bishop, Salem, second vice-president; Thomas W. White, Newport News, third vice-president; Dr. R. J. Payne, Fredericksburg, fourth vice-president; Morton L. Wallerstein, Richmond, executive secretary.

For the police executives, a swimming and diving exhibition, carrying the championship honors of Augusta County and bronze, silver and gold medals to the winners, was staged in the natatorium at Staunton Military Academy.

Diving honors went to Robert B. Terry, one-time diving champion in the United States Navy; Charles B. Ralston and John Greene; while swimming medals were won by Julia Anne Patch, Oscar Dabney, Sidney E. Trott, Thea Conger, the last-named winning in both the 50-yard dash and the 25-yard backstroke.

The league's meetings were brought to a close this afternoon, leaving the fashion show and vaudeville features for tonight. This year's convention of the municipal officials was the largest in the history of the organization—it is 29 years old—the registration lists showing approximately 300 names.

Foundrymen Will Convene

Philadelphia (U.P.).—Steel founders from America and Europe will convene here October 22-26 for their fifth International Congress to be held in conjunction with the Thirty-eighth annual American Foundrymen's Association convention.

An elaborate program has been arranged. In addition to the general sessions, two technical meetings will be held. A round-table luncheon and a visit to the plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co. are also planned.

Among the program highlights are several foreign exchange papers. The British foundrymen's paper will be read by Dr. W. H. Hatfield, and the Czechoslovakian paper will be given jointly by Dr. E. Valenta and Dr. P. Herasymenko.

Two other papers of interest will be given by George Batty, Steel Castings Development Bureau, Philadelphia, and C W. Briggs and R. A. Gezeline, of the Naval Research Laboratory, Washington, D. C.

One of the most important discussions to come before the convention—porosity in steel castings—will be taken up in detail, an entire session being devoted to that question. Those who will lead the discussion include R. A. Bull, Chicago; George Batty, Philadelphia; C. E. Sims, East Chicago, Ill., and W. C. Woodward, Milwaukee, Wis.

Hero of 50 Years Ago To Get $2,515 Reward

Grafton, N. Dak. (AP).—Half a century ago Ole Johnson, then a 21-year-old Norwegian sailor, rescued a boy from drowning off the English coast.

Johnson, now senior engineer of the city power plant here, has just been notified that a reward of £500 (about $2,515) awaits him. The rescued lad, Thomas B. F. Davis, of London, now 65 years old, began a search for members of the crew a year ago. He enlisted the aid of Crown Prince Olav of Norway.

Australia Deep In Gloom Over Wool Prospects

Figures on Paper Cheerful but Promise of Brisk Trade Is Small.

Sydney (AP).—The economic outlook in Australia at the moment is extraordinary. On paper the nation may count on profitable overseas trade in the immediate future. Actually the prospects are discouraging.

It all has to do with the anomalous position of wool. Wool is Australia's trade barometer. When the price is high the whole continent prospers; when it is low there is general gloom.

In Australia all well-organized commercial establishments engaged in overseas trade keep a statistical summary showing the world position in relation to wool supplies and prices. On those figures governments frame their budgets and overseas traders make their estimates.

Figures Bring Cheer.

At this moment the world wool position as revealed by statistics is a happy one. It appears as if most of the nations either need wool now, or are about to demand supplies.

But actually the position is quite different. France has announced that she does not intend to buy wool immediately. She has a considerable supply and she wishes to protect the franc by buying a minimum of foreign goods.

Italy has discovered that she sells to Australia goods representing only half the value of the wool she purchases from Australia. Therefore the fiat has gone forth that as from August 1 her wool imports will be rationed; in other words she is reducing her Australian wool purchases by half.

Germany, hitherto a substantial purchaser of wool, has gone off the market while her chemists plan production of synthetic wool.

In the depth of the depression the wool index price was 110. By January, 1934, as a result of brisk buying it was 208.

Firm's Suit Hits At Labor Board

W. Va. Firm Challenges Order for Secret Vote by Its Employes.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—Constitutionality of the act creating the National Labor Relations Board is challenged by the Ames Baldwin Wyoming Co., of Parkersburg, W. Va., in a petition filed with the clerk of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals here.

The petition, which seeks to have set aside an order by the Labor Board for a secret ballot to choose collective bargaining representatives among the company's employes, was transmitted today to Senior Circuit Judge John Parker, at Charlotte, N. C.

The action of the West Virginia concern is said to be the first to contest the authority of the new board.

Asserting that the Labor Board acted in an arbitrary manner and refused to inform the company of the nature of complaints brought against it by union members, the petition asks that the order issued by the board for the election be set aside. The petition charges that prior to a preliminary hearing and a later hearing, the board failed to respond to requests by the company for a statement relative to the charges and that the company's counsel was not allowed to cross-examine witnesses offering testimony to the board.

Firemen Convene In West Virginia

Clarksburg Is Host for 3-Day Session.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—West Virginia firemen today opened their second annual State meeting with President T. J. O'Shea, of Huntington, presiding. The convention closes Saturday.

Today's activities consisted of executive committee sessions, at which convention committees were appointed and general business outlined.

The banquet speaker tomorrow night will be John F. Hines, chief of the Pittsburgh fire department and former fourth vice president of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

Hungarian Town Gives Newlyweds Hive of Bees

Budapest (U.P.).—Newly married men of Kecskemet may be satisfied they were not stung on the deal, but the city fathers are going to prove them wrong.

The town is famous for its honey, but production has been falling off. So the municipality is giving every newly-married couple a present of a beehive with a swarm of bees.

Virginia Fights To Revive Tree That Shaded Lee

Richmond, Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The poplar tree near Appomattox Court House, marking the site of Gen. Lee's headquarters from which he sent out his immortal farewell order to the army, is dying and Col. John W. Williams, clerk of the House of Delegates, suggested today that the tree be kept alive by further treatment, and, if necessary, by engrafting healthy twigs.

Located on the eastern side of the Buckingham-Appomattox road about 2 miles north of the Appomattox battlefield, the tree is believed to be one which shaded the Confederate commander on the day his army surrendered, April 9, 1865.

Annual Meeting Set By Kenmore Society

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Appointment of committees and adoption of a program of activities for the ensuing year will take place at the annual meeting of the Kenmore Association tomorrow at Kenmore, Colonial home of Betty Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington.

Mrs. H. H. Smith, National secretary of the association, returned here today after a tour through the New England States. She addressed the Vermont convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution and several other organizations on the history of Kenmore.

War Find Indicates Bullet Collision

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Souvenir collectors are examining a mass of lead found on the Spotsylvania battlefield Sunday, believed to have been formed by two bullets that met head-on in the midst of the fighting.

George Nelson jr., son of George Nelson, superintendent of the National Cemetery here, found the bullets while searching the area for relics uncovered by recent heavy rains.

Nelson said it was quite probable that the collision spared the lives of two soldiers. If the projectiles met exactly head on, he said, they must have been traveling in a straight line between the two soldiers. Fusion of the bullets is almost conclusive proof that they met squarely, he said.

Young Democrats Plan Club at Snow Hill, Md.

Snow Hill, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The young Democrats of this city will organize a "Young Democrat's Club" here tomorrow night. Benjamin Truitt, James Sturgis, William Sherky, William Kerbin and Joseph Brimer, the active organizers, state that they expect 75 or more charter members at the first meeting.

This will be the second Democratic club for young men in Worcester County. The movement was begun about a month ago by M. William Miller, of Pocomoke City, who stated that simular clubs will be organized in Berlin and Ocean City.

The Lindbergh Case.

The apparent solution of the Lindbergh kidnap-murder mystery must be marked down as one of the greatest achievements in the history of law enforcement in America. Officers were completely baffled by this fiendish crime. They began work with only meager clews that led nowhere. Yet their search has been persistent and unremitting. After two and a half years it has produced results.

Public reaction to the news from New York and Washington will be akin to rejoicing—not because of the prospect that the accused will be punished for this foul crime, but because the skill of law-enforcement experts has triumphed over criminal prowess and cunning. A most powerful blow has been struck at the kidnap racket. So far as Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh are concerned, this arrest, and others which may follow, will mean the revival of painful memories, but the case of their murdered son had become a National concern. If the actual felon who planned and executed this crime is in custody, the figurative scales of Justice will take on a new semblance of balance.

Regardless of how nearly complete the evidence against the suspect may seem to be, however, it is no cause for outbursts of public temper. Nor should the fact that the accused is an alien prejudice his case. The Department of Justice, the New Jersey State police and the New York police have worked with remarkable harmony and precision to "break" the Lindbergh case. It would be a pity indeed if their excellent work should be marred by any attempt to disrupt the smooth operation of the machinery of justice.

Confusing The Issue.

The suggestion that a new Department of Transportation should be created, to be headed by a member of the President's Cabinet, is said to be under consideration. The proposal gives rise to certain misgivings because it would tend to complicate the regulatory machinery, and create a danger of overlapping authority. The Cabinet officer heading the new department would be a personal representative of the President, responsible to him alone. His duties would have to be very carefully defined and severely limited to guard against conflicts with the existing independent regulatory agency—the Interstate Commerce Commission—and to prevent possible interference with its activities.

Although the United States is in great need of a unified regulatory policy that will embrace all competing transport agencies, this lack will not be met by the creation of new offices or mere additions to regulatory machinery. Simplification of the existing regulatory mechanism through reorganization of functions is no doubt desirable, but that can be accomplished without adding to the number of commissioners or creating a new executive department of government.

The country does not require more complicated regulatory machinery. All that is necessary is a coordinated policy providing equality of treatment for all forms of transportation, with changes in the law that will permit the ICC to function effectively. Talk of creating a new Cabinet post to aid the country's distressed railroads tends to confuse the central issue.

Quo Vadis?

Recent election results have been rather carelessly tabulated as being for or against the New Deal. It is more interesting and perhaps more significant to appraise them on the basis of their effect upon the Democratic party.

When President Roosevelt was nominated at Chicago in 1932 the Democratic party was a fairly homogeneous group, in spite of the incompatibility between old-line Southern leaders and Tammany Hall. Certainly its leaders formed a united front of opposition to the Hoover Administration. But since the New Deal was installed at Washington strongly centrifugal forces have been at work in the Democratic ranks.

The effect of recent primary elections is to widen the gaps between the various groups which are supporting the Administration. Mississippi has decided to send to the Senate its former governor, Theodore G. Bilbo, who promises to "make as much noise for the common people as Huey P. Long" and to "raise more hell" than his distinguished peer. His election on a platform calling for "controlled inflation," redistribution of wealth, cash payment of the veterans' bonus, &c., appears to mark a trend toward Fascism as distinctly as did Huey Long's recent victory in Louisiana.

On the other hand, the Democrats of California have chosen a Socialist as their candidate for governor. Likewise, the platform of bigger and better gratuities from the Federal Treasury, on which Gov. Brann won reelection in Maine, is akin to socialistic theory. But in Wisconsin the nominee for Senator is a conservative Al Smith-Democrat who must confront the more extreme Bob La Follette, reputed to be President Roosevelt's choice. It is all too evident that the majority party is drawing into its ranks a motley group of demagogues, all of whom are repugnant to the real Jeffersonian Democrats.

In which direction is the Democratic party going? Because of the confusing implications of the New Deal, the party is acquiring not one, but several insurgent blocs. This tendency to stretch out toward Fascism, on one hand, and Communism, on the other, probably will be accentuated. It is not surprising that there should be grave apprehension among the more thoughtful Democrats as to the ability of their leadership to carry out a consistent national policy and to keep the various camp followers under control.

Mr. Hull And Mr. Peek.

Secretary Hull and George N. Peek, special trade adviser to the President, seem fundamentally at odds in their approach to the problem of how to revive foreign trade. Mr. Peek emphasizes the direct exchange of goods against goods—that is, a system of barter between nations as a means of stimulating trade. The Secretary of State approves the bilateral trade agreement of a barter type under certain conditions, as an emergency measure, but he thinks that such agreements should be limited in number so as not to interfere with similar triangular or world-wide pacts.

There are now in existence a large number of trade agreements between countries which provide for the most direct kind of barter through clearing agreements. Although lack of foreign exchange, restrictive tariffs, quotas, &c., have made resort to these bilateral clearing systems unavoidable, the results have been most unfortunate. Progressive restrictions upon imports designed to effect a balance of payments with other countries have led to corresponding reductions in exports, and progressive strangulation of world trade.

With these instances in mind, no doubt, Secretary Hull has emphasized the fact that foreign trade does not rest upon a "narrow quid pro quo policy of balancing trade between every two nations that have trade transactions with each other." Such a policy, he adds, "would be the direct road to economic suicide." He reiterates the well-known principles upon which international trade has been based in the past—namely, triangular or multilateral exchanges which enable country A to meet its obligations to country B by selling more to C than it buys from C. In short, balances on international account are normally effected by equalizing imports from all countries against exports to the world at large.

The importance which Secretary Hull attaches to this principle of balancing makes it evident that he has slight patience with German suggestions that the United States agree to buy an amount of German goods sufficient to pay for the American goods sold to Germany. The State Department in its treaty negotiations is not proceeding upon any such narrow and essentially unworkable plan of action but hopes to expand trade through agreements that eliminate some of the existing barriers to an exchange of goods instead of increasing them.

Mr. Peek's suggestion that in the future American foreign loans should be placed principally, if not entirely, in countries with which we have a favorable balance of trade is further evidence of his dissent from Secretary Hull's views. Such a proposal would reduce the role of loans as a balancing factor in international trade to greatly shrunken proportions. It would result in advancing funds to countries that may neither need nor desire American capital, while neglecting investment openings in other countries that might be good credit risks.

Secretary Hull is upon strong ground theoretically, therefore, when he decries the tendency to balance trade between every two nations. Under present conditions, his hopes of expanding foreign trade by any widespread lowering of tariff barriers may seem quixotic. But it is only along the lines indicated by him that any considerable expansion can be expected in the future.

An Important Decision.

In a decision handed down by Judge Chestnut in the Federal District Court for Baltimore, the Frazier-Lemke farm bankruptcy law has been declared unconstitutional. The judge based his opinion on the contention that the law eliminates safeguards for creditors and leads to confiscation of property. He also held that the act attempts to supersede the rights of the individual States in the operation of their courts.

The law in question is an invidious kind of class legislation which gives farmers a privileged status under the bankruptcy laws at the expense of their creditors. Doubts of its constitutionality were freely expressed at the time of its passage. But by threats of a filibuster, Senator Long and a few of his colleagues succeeded in forcing the measure through the Senate on the eve of adjournment. It was also rushed through the House, and subsequently approved by the President to the surprise of many who had properly expected a veto.

The irresponsible and easy way in which this important piece of legislation was railroaded through Congress at the eleventh hour is a sad reflection upon the supposedly deliberative character of that body. The manner of passage emphasizes the vital position occupied by the courts as the ultimate protectors of the people against legislative assaults upon their constitutionally guaranteed rights. Judge Chestnut is evidently a foe of judicial opportunism. Although he states that he is not unmindful of the considerations of a public nature which led to passage of the act, he adds firmly that "It is the imperative duty of the judicial branch to declare the law invalid if not consistent with the Constitution which is the fundamental law of our country."

This sound conception of the function of the courts as an interpreter and preserver of rights guaranteed under the Constitution can alone provide adequate protection against an invasion of those rights, which may be so easily impaired through inadvertence, ignorance, irresponsible legislative action or with deliberate intention.

Freedom Of Judgment.

Traditional policy is on the whole followed by the questionnaire which the American Federation of Labor is sending to all candidates nominated in the Congressional primaries. That is to say, the unions continue to frown upon independent political action, preferring to work for their legislative aims within the framework of the two-party system. This is sound politics, both in theory and in practice.

But there is grave danger in a questionnaire of this character. It lies in the possibility that the advance pledge may eliminate that freedom of judgment which every legislator worthy of the name should put above price. Though this point was stressed a century and a half ago by Edmund Burke, in his famous address to the electors of Bristol, it can not be too often reiterated. The essential deliberative character of a legislative assembly is lost when its members commit their votes in advance of discussion. Probably nothing has done more than this practice to bring parliamentary institutions into disrepute and thereby menace the fundamentals of our system of government.

It must not be thought, however, that the political questionnaire is essentially evil. Obviously voters must know the attitude of candidates on the major issues of the day. It is to meet this need that we have the platform, which an honorable party and its chosen representatives will do their utmost to observe. For that reason a questionnaire concerned with general principles is to be commended, so long as it does not deprive the candidate of that discretion essential for the unpredictable future. But when the action promised in advance is of a specific nature, which may be totally undesirable later, its character is essentially evil.

The A. F. of L. questionnaire is more discriminating than many documents of this character. No objection can be raised, for instance, to seeking to ascertain the viewpoint of candidates on the general principles of unemployment insurance, or collective bargaining. But on at least two points it demands a promise which no candidate, no matter how liberal, should grant in advance. One is the request for a 30-hour week and 6-hour day. The other is the issue of further appropriations for public works.

It may be that both these developments will prove desirable when Congress meets. But it is quite as likely that both may then be highly undesirable. The essential need of the country can quite as easily come to be greater rather than restricted productivity. It is very possible that public works will eventually prove here, as they have in other countries, a much over-advertised, costly and inefficient form of providing emergency employment.

Questionnaires which seek to hamstring our legislative system in advance are one of the danger signs facing American institutions at this time. They are an illustration of a loose thinking which can easily be fatal to much that all of us hold dear. And such loose thinking is on the increase. As an instance, one of our contemporaries has been talking about the "legal right to a living wage." As well acclaim the legal right to a happy marriage. There can be no legal rights in such abstractions unless the conditions which make them possible are present.

Unromantic?

"What is mind?" inquired a wit of the saccharine Seventies, and himself responded, "No matter." And "What is matter?" he asked, and answered, "Never mind." Now Sir James Jeans, like Bishop Berkeley before him, holds that the sole reality resides in the intelligence. It all depends, they say, on the temper of the mind. But, if reality is a question of temper, romance must surely be a question of temperament!

Romance, they tell us, is dead. "Move Up to Aid Durable Goods in Housing Plan"; only a modern Kipling—were a modern Kipling possible—could squeeze romance out of that, or out of "Richberg Holds Business Made Complex Codes." And who save Homer could pluck poetry from the headline announcing "Moley Luncheon Guest of Garner in Texas"?

But there are compensations. There are people in the news bearing such delectable names as Philip Del Fungo Giera and Theodore G. Bilbo. In Paris, the Stavisky scandal starts all over again, with a promise to tell the truth concerning the mysterious murder of that magistrate who knew too much about it. The crew of the freighter "Aliki"—Rosario for Buenos Aires—mutinies on the high seas. And Secretary Wallace, who holds power of life and death over the Nation's four-footed hogs, is accused of being a vegetarian.

All those unromantic and all these romantic events were alike chronicled in the same issues of the same journal—to wit, The Post of yesterday and Wednesday. It is safe to wager that the romantic stories were seen only by romantic eyes. Yet it is also safe to wager that none of them was missed by any such optic. Even in the midst of depression the real romantics are still, and forever will be, able to find their ration of romance.

Timely Facts From t he Packing Industry

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have been very much interested in the article "by Evelyn Harris" which appeared in The Washington Post of September 9, under the heading, "Meat Price Jump Laid to Packers," and which reflects unfairly on the packing industry. In that same connection, however, we believe that some facts not covered in the article may be of equal interest to readers of The Post.

In the first place, Mrs. Harris stated that the packers purchased drought-stricken live stock, paying "1 cent or maybe 2 cents a pound for steers and about 2 cents for hogs." She implied that the packing industry is now selling the meat from that live stock at higher levels than are justified.

It is possible that in her reference to a price of "a cent or maybe 2 cents" paid for steers, she was thinking of the price paid by the Government for drought-stricken stock, product from most of which is being canned for emergency relief purposes. These purchases should not be confused with the regular purchases of live stock by the meat packing industry and turned into commercial channels. In fact, careful precautions were taken—both in transportation and at the stockyards—to keep Government drought-stricken cattle definitely separated from the regular commercial stock.

Contrary to Mrs. Harris' figures of "1 and 2 cents," records of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture disclose that the average price paid for all hogs in the Chicago market during June of the current year was $4.09 per hundredweight. The figure in July was $4.49, and in August $5.89. The prices paid for all grades of cattle in these same months averaged, respectively, $7.34, $7.21 and $7.34.

It may prove of interest to know that if all the available pork in storage on September 1 of this year had been placed on the market, and if these supplies had constituted the only available source of pork products, the storage stocks would have lasted the consuming public only about four days, thereby showing how insignificant warehouse stocks really are in affecting wholesale or retail prices.

The foregoing facts, we believe, thoroughly refute the unfair charges contained in Mrs. Harris' article. We feel sure, however, that the inaccuracies which constituted much of Mrs. Harris' hypothesis were due to a confusion of facts on her part rather than to any deliberate attempt to misrepresent the packing industry.

Again in the matter of retail price of pork chops on September 1, Mrs. Harris contends that they were unnecessarily high. It no doubt will prove of interest, therefore, to readers of The Post to know that, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the retail price of pork chops in New York on September 1 was 33 cents per pound. This figure compares with 39 cents on the corresponding date in 1929; with 47½ cents on September 1, 1930; 36½ cents in 1931, and 26 cents in both 1932 and 1933.

At another point, the article refers to the spread between the price of hogs and the retail price of pork products. We believe that readers of The Post will be interested in the explanation offered on this point by the Secretary of Agriculture in a letter addressed to Senator Arthur Capper and published recently in the Kansas Farmer. Secretary Wallace made the following comments:

"It is important * * * to avoid the mistake of comparing the price of a pound of live stock and a pound of meat. The amount * * * of hog products obtained from 100 pounds of live hog totals only about 58 pounds. It is apparent, therefore, that if meat could be distributed from farm to consumer with no costs of any kind, it would be necessary to get a price per pound close to double that paid to the farmer in order to realize the amount paid for the animal.

"In getting the animal from the farm to the slaughterhouse and then transporting the meat from that point to the consumer's table, such costs are incurred as transportation of the meat from the farm to the slaughtering plant, transportation of the meat from the slaughterhouse to the retailer, wages for packing house and retail employes, overhead, upkeep, expense of packing plants and retail stores, rent or the equivalent thereof on capital investment in packing plants and retail stores, refrigeration, power, lighting, taxes, interest on working capital, and various other miscellaneous items.

"The amount paid for labor is probably one of the largest items in all of these costs because the processing and distribution of meats require a great deal of labor. The tremendous increase in labor costs and in taxes and rents over those prevailing prior to the war is one of the most important factors accounting for the great difference between the price of meats and the price of live stock since the war."

Secretary Wallace then made specific answer to a complaint which Senator Capper had received from F. H. Butler, of Garden City, Kans.

"One of the most common errors of those who complain about the wide spread between the price of live stock and the price of meat is that they use as their comparison the prices of the choicest cuts and overlook the fact that the least desirable cuts sell at very much lower prices than the more expensive cuts.

"* * * In comparing the relationship of hog prices to prices of hog products this year and a year ago, one must not overlook the processing tax which is now in effect. During the month of May packers at Chicago paid an average of $3.64 for 100 pounds of good quality bacon hogs. In addition to this price, they paid the Government $2.25 processing tax on 100 pounds of hogs, making the total cost of the hogs $5.89. In May last year the same weight of hogs cost the packer $4.71, or $1.18 less than in May this year.

"The packers sold the principal products out of this weight of hog to the retailer for $1.37 more than was obtained last year and the retailer, in turn, sold these hog products to the housewife for $1.40 more than last year.

Toward the close of her article, Mrs. Harris asserted that when city consumers buy pork at relatively high prices they are helping "the few men who own and operate large packing houses and cold storage warehouses" rather than the farmers.

The reference to "a few men" is quite unjustified, in view of the fact that there are literally hundreds of competing meat packing establishments, the ownership of which is divided among thousands of shareholders.

Moreover, the profits of these several hundred meat packing establishments have been exceedingly low during the past few years. Heavy losses, in fact, were incurred in both 1931 and 1932; and the profits of 1933 were barely sufficient to balance those losses. The 1933 profits represented only about 4 cents on each dollar of invested capital and less than 1 cent for each dollar of sales. These profits were so low, in fact, that if they had not existed at all, there would have been virtually no change in the price of meat to the consumer or the price paid to farmers for their live stock.

It is also interesting in this connection to know that the meat packing industry has been paying very much more for its live stock during 1934 than was paid in the corresponding portion of 1933. For example, in the first six months of the current year the packing industry paid approximately $545,000,000 for its live stock, as compared with $475,000,000 during the first six months of 1933—an increase of $70,000,000, or 15 per cent.

What the author of the article in question apparently failed to appreciate is the fact that the packers, themselves, realize that their own business can not prosper over any period of years unless the producers of live stock are also prospering.

Live stock producers and meat packers are not, as some would seem to believe, economic antagonists. Instead, they are actually partners in the business of providing and selling the Nation's meat supply. Packers do not buy live stock from farmers in the generally accepted sense of the word. Rather, all of the live stock sent to market must be purchased because of its high perishability, no matter how encumbered the market may be at the time, and the packers pay in cash, the amount depending upon the number of live stock on hand and the current demand for meat products.

In other words, the packers have no control over the live stock and meat market. Prices are determined by supply and demand: the producers regulate the supply, and the consumers determine the demand. When consumers are paying relatively higher prices for their meat and other live stock products, producers are receiving relatively higher prices for live stock. Meanwhile, the packing industry continues to operate in a highly efficient manner to the advantage of both producers and consumers and earns a very meager profit for its necessary part in the processing and distribution of meat.

The foregoing statements of fact are submitted in the belief that they will prove interesting to readers of The Post and will serve to answer the unjustified reflections upon the industry which were made in the article published on September 9.

For Cooperation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much has been said and written concerning the weaknesses of our present Government and the leaders who are responsible for making it function rightly. The public blames the few officials who are paid to do all the myriad activities of the Government for the slow return of what we call American prosperity.

Looking at the situation, I do not see how prosperity can ever come back without the enthusiastic and full cooperation of the people. The few Government officials can do no more than fill up their desks day in and day out if the public does not willingly heed the orders to bring a result.

If our Government—and it includes all the people—were only run in the manner in which a chief editor manages a metropolitan paper, with the subeditors, down to the numberless subscribers in perfect accord, then prosperity would be with us faster than we knew.

The President can apply his unselfish initiative in the distribution of wealth. All he has to do is to think and command, while the rest of public officials heed the orders, think and work fast to realize success. So, let us cooperate with President Roosevelt, while his power lasts, instead of kicking and fretting with our pay envelope or accusing others of inefficiency.

We must quit striking and go back to work. We must work so hard and so deserving that the President will take action and make employers pay us more for our services. Then, and only then, we can hope for the return of prosperity.

The Post Impressionist

Postoffice, Friday.

EVERY Washingtonian — nearly every American — is familiar with Thomas Crawford's heroic statue of "Armed Liberty," which, from a height of some 300 feet, tops the dome of the Capitol. But how many Washingtonians—or how many Americans in general—are reading the novels of its sculptor's son?

A quarter-century ago he was a rather steady best-seller. A decade ago a few people know him as "the man who wrote 'Saracenesca' and those other Italian stories." To last year's new complement of readers he was quite unknown.

And yet——

Will the present romance-course of the fiction-ship carry its passengers as far as Port Marion Crawford? Is there going to be a Crawford revival?

There are signs thereof.

Here is Hugh Walpole praising Crawford's novels of the American scene during the Gay Nineties.

To the Post-Impressionist it has always seemed that the reason for Crawford's decline was precisely those Italian novels which once won him favor. In our times, even his style and construction are dated; but many favorite modern American authors have little style of any sort, and no construction at all. Francis Marion Crawford, we used to say, was liked in an era when his countrymen looked abroad; he ceased to be liked when they grew collectively introspective—or, if you prefer, reverted to nationalism.

Although named for South Carolina's greatest general of the Revolution, this nephew of the woman who wrote "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was a cosmopolitan. He was born in Italy. He was one of the first editors of that school-magazine, Horae Scholasticae, at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., who afterward rose to popularity in fiction—an editorial dynasty including Owen Wister, Arthur Stanwood Pier and Arthur Train. Then he studied at the Trinity College of England's Cambridge, at Heidelberg and Rome, winding up his education at the American Cambridge by a Harvard course in—if you please—Sanskrit. He lived a while in New York; he lived a long while in Italy and died at Sorrento five years before the start of the World War.

Yet Mrs. Elliott contends, it appears, that he fulfilled the often quoted definition of a cosmopolitan coined by cosmopolitan Henry James, who could himself never quite fulfill it: "A cosmopolitan is a man who is at home even in his own country." We haven't seen her book, but we have seen extracts from it, and therein we find:

His "Italian novels, especially the 'Saracenesca' series, are undoubtedly the favorites (and) this accounts for there being so many more Italian than American stories. The author writes to please; the publisher prints to sell." Nevertheless, "Crawford describes the American scene in 'Dr. Claudius' . . . In 'Katherine Lauderdale' and its sequel, 'The Ralstons,' Crawford buckles seriously to his task . . . These books are among his best. They accurately portray life in New York during the fin de siecle period."

And Hugh Walpole declares that "Katherine Lauderdale" is "a remarkable book . . . It is hard to see why the book was given no sort of critical attention when a work like Mrs. Wharton's 'House of Mirth'—a not unusual story and cold at heart—has been acclaimed a masterpiece."

From what the Post-Impressionist remembers of him, Crawford ever had a good story yarn to spin and ever put into it at least one first-rate episode. We, or somebody else, once asked a somebody who ought to have known why, those first-rate episodes being really self-containing, Crawford didn't go in more for the short story. The questioned person must have benn Julian Story, painter son of poet and sculptor William Wetmore Story and husband of Emma Eames.

Anyhow, he answered:

"Well, Crawford did write one corking short story, you know; that ghastly thing about the occult after-effects of a murder at sea—a body pushed through a porthole. But the fact is I myself once put your very energy to him, and this is the way he answered it:

"'Why should I sell an idea for the low price of a short story when I can sell it for the high price of a novel?'"

It exhausts, at all events, our own Crawfordiana, whereas Mrs. Elliott's book must reveal her cousin as a human person, whatever it does for him as an artist. At least, such is our verdict, based on excerpts like the following:

"One morning he (Crawford) looked out of his window and saw walking up the road from Sorrento a man with a cape coat, a pointed beard and a slouch hat. 'Bessie,' he called to his wife, 'here comes that—Hall Caine. Tell him that I am in Constantinople, or in Timbuctoo. Get rid of him as soon as you can and have breakfast.'

"Crawford went back to his work. The morning was getting on; he was hungry. . . . He looked down below. There was Hall Caine . . . his hat off, his cape thrown back, talking to Bessie. Bessie, sitting with her face resting on her hands, looked at Hall Caine, perfectly enraptured. . . .

"At 5 o'clock in the afternoon Hall Caine departed with a great sweep of his hat. Crawford rushed down stairs, three steps at a time.

"'Bessie,' he asked furiously, 'what does this mean?'

"'I'm sorry, darling,' she replied, 'but Hall Caine was so fascinating that he really made me believe you were in Timbuctoo.'"

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

Adaptability.

Berlin.—One of the most interesting characters to me in Germany is Oscar von Hindenburg, son of the late President. He has no great ability, but to me he personifies the species we have in all countries known as the band-wagon jumpers. He has that knack of getting in with the winning crowd and making himself useful by doing little chores, without, I take it, giving any serious thought to who the winning crowd is. He is the typical "yes" man, the type politicians in all countries make use of.

BARGERON

His position is all the more disgusting, I think, because of his illustrious father. He has inherited none of the older man's characteristics. Now in the time of his country's great need his only contribution is to run errands and do other little chores for the powers that be. He is, I think, the perfect prototype of those of our so-called big business leaders, who, regardless of how things may be going in Washington, are satisfied if they can but get their fingers in the pie.

• • • •

One of the neatest little chores he has done recently for "Der Fuhrer" was on the occasion of the election to make him dictator for life. On the eve of the election Oscar made an address saying his father considered Hitler the ablest man to succeed him. The general agreement among those in position to know is that his father in the declining years of his life did not know what he wanted, that he was senile and had no mind of his own.

Von Papen is generally credited with having influenced him most in his summoning of Hitler to the chancellorship in 1933 and in his subsequent support of Hitler. But in a lesser capacity the son was also an influence.

Von Papen, with a very serious purpose and with quite definite ends in view in his support of Hitler, has now become quite apprehensive and has withdrawn to the sidelines at Vienna, it is generally believed, to bide his time. Von Papen's alarm at the way things are going is no greater, apparently, than that of the industrialists who supported Hitler, without whose support it is considered doubtful he could have ascended the throne. There are increasing signs now that the control these fellows thought they held over him is not holding up. For one thing, they are complaining over Hitler's form of NRA. He didn't go to the trouble of setting up such a structure as our NRA. He simply demanded that the big employers absorb prescribed quotas of the unemployed. With the failure of the expected recovery, they are now trying to dismiss these men, but Der Fuhrer, whom they thought they could control, won't permit them.

Little Oscar, however, doesn't share the alarm of the others. He is satisfied with playing ball. The sun shines bright enough for him. The leaders let him go around with them, let him ride in their cars; they go through all the pretense of considering him one of them, as a trusted associate of Der Fuhrer, when as a matter of fact they look upon him simply as one of whom they can make good use.

The speculation among the cynical foreign correspondents is when he will get his promotion in the army. If this is withheld it is quite conceivable that he will in time come to think Germany is lost. When he gets it, however, not only Germany, but the whole world, will be all right. One has only to know his type to appreciate this will be his attitude.

• • • •

It is difficult for me to get as indignant about Germany as some others, however. When I think of the Ku Klux Klan racing up and down our land with sheets, when I realize that there are certain of our people who consider that the greatest mistake NRA made was when it disbanded the army of "generals" and "colonels" who were to visit housewives and make them sign the NRA pledge; when I see our business men running to Washington to get what they can out of the Government, to get something the other fellow hasn't; when our whole concern seems to be whether we will swing to the right or the left without caring about the central government and bureaucracy which we seem certain to have—it's pretty hard to get up a worry about Germany.

Without doubt there is nothing more disgusting than to see a race of full-grown people throwing up their hands and saying "Heil Hitler" when they pass one another upon the street or to see them in every cafe in town and on the streets standing erect with outstretched hands at the conclusion of a Hitler speech made 100 miles away—but, oh, after the things we do I don't find it difficult to adapt myself.

$95,000,000 in Gold Safe in Denver Mint

Denver, Sept. 20 (AP).—Another gold shipment from the San Francisco mint was safe in the Government mint here today.

While a special police detail, postal inspectors, members of the U. S. Secret Service and soldiers, heavily armed, kept a lookout for George (Baby Face) Nelson and John Hamilton, who were reported seen in Denver for the second time recently, the $95,000,000 in gold was transferred from the special train that brought it here to the mint vaults.

Fantastic Words Pie For Capital Spellers

Undefeated District Club Revels in Dictionary's Strangest Products.

Homunculus, you've had a busy day.

Which is what the members of the Capital City Spelling Club could say to their president, E. C. Helm, of Brentwood, Md., for they not only can spell and pronounce "homunculus" but they know it means "little man," in Latin. Furthermore, they know lots of other overgrown words, including such tough little numbers as "maccaboy," "thalweg," "wadset," "gammacismus," "achene," "wapinschaw," "ajutage," "diastase," and "acrodome."

But Mr. Helm is one of the most industrious of them all. He takes words seriously. Twice he has gone completely through Webster's new unabridged dictionary, checking only the words he is interested in, including words like "propylon," "Grolier," and "homolous," and he is now on the third trip through, with the purpose of digesting all the checked words coming under any one letter each month. He is on the letter "I" now, and says he is having more fun than he ever had before in his life.

The spelling club meets the first and third Wednesday of every month in the basement of the Mount Pleasant Library at Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest, every month in the year.

"Hot weather never bothers a really enthusiastic speller," said Mr. Helm, and he ought to know, as he has attended and presided at every meeting since the club was organized six years ago in November. "Most of the members, once they've discovered what really exciting fun can be had from words, wouldn't stay away from a meeting for any reason short of an earthquake."

The club has a standing prize of $10 for any newcomer who can out-spell the club champion, Willard B. Smith, of Franklin Park, Va., a Navy Department worker. So far no one has come even close to threatening Mr. Smith's supremacy, according to Mr. Helm.

Can't Spell Him Down.

"And I don't think they ever will spell him down," chuckled the spell-club president. "That man just can't be caught, that's all."

Shortly after the Capital City Club was organized and running smoothly, 23 of the members challenged 23 members of the Waverly Spelling Club, in Baltimore, to a team match. This was in 1929.

"We wiped them off the map," gloated Mr. Helm. "We won all six of their prizes, and the Baltimore papers razzed them up and down, as that club has been organized for 35 years. They must have been over-confident. Anyway, we've had 11 other contests in the last six years, and the Capital Club has been the winner in eight of the matches."

Strangers who like to spell or study words are invited to attend the Capital Club's sessions, as a prize is offered to the newcomer who stays up longest. The matches are held concurrently with the regular spelling-match, which is conducted like this:

K. W. Krause, titled "The Dictator," is a man who can pronounce any word you can mention. The members, sitting in rows, spell the words, and drop out as soon as they make a mistake. In case they don't know when they've missed, Mr. Krause tells them. This goes on until only six are left, because the first six places win points toward a grand total, and the member with the largest number of points at the end of the year wins the grand prize. So far Mr. Smith is ahead.

Catch System Invoked.

When but six remain, the "catch" system is invoked. Under this method, Mr. Krause holds a rigid poker face, because if one of the final half dozen contestants errs, no mention is made of the error. Mr. Krause pronounces another word for the next person. Now comes the catch. It is the responsibility of the next in line to have noticed the mistake and now to spell the missed word correctly. If he doesn't, but spells his own word, Mr. Krause merely pronounces another word. The first person to catch the mistake and spell the word correctly automatically eliminates any who have missed it, which means keeping the ears wide open every second, and puts the members under considerable strain.

"This is the only fair way," said Mr. Helm, "as many words have only two possible spellings. If Mr. Krause said that an "a-b-l-e" ending on a word was wrong, the next person would simply say "i-b-l-e."

Ordinary words, commonly misspelled, which you can try on your friends include such words as kimono, battalion, liquefy, rarefy, vilify, lilies, parishioner, sacrilegious, piccalilli, pickanninny, repellent, lavaliere, cravenette and liaison.

"Any one who gets that list 100 per cent perfect the first time can come out and be a charter member of our club," said Mr. Helm.

U.S.-Russian Parley on Debt To Be Revived

Troyanovsky Is Believed Prepared to Offer Compromise.

(Associated Press.)

Soviet-American negotiations for a settlement of $500,000,000 in debts and claims, which collapsed two weeks ago when President Roosevelt rejected Russian demands for loans and credits of $200,000,000, will be resumed in the immediate future.

Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador, has been authorized to resume discussions with the State Department, it was learned last night. He will arrange a meeting as speedily as possible.

Resumption of negotiations resulted from a mutual desire to make every possible effort to reach an amicable agreement for payment of the American claims, together with granting of credit to the Soviet Union for purposes of trade expansion.

Rejected Soviet Proposal.

The negotiations reached a stalemate September 5 when R. Walton Moore, then Acting Secretary of State, rejected the Russian proposals for settlement.

The Soviet proposals were that the Moscow government would agree to pay scaled-down American claims and that the United States grant it $100,000,000 in 20-year credits and a cash loan of a similar amount.

The American claims would be paid, under this arrangement, from excess interest charged on the credit transactions. It was estimated that it would take $100,000,000 worth of business a year to pay off the American claims in 20 years.

Opposed to Cash Loan.

The United States, it was generally understood, was agreeable to granting credits to American firms through the Export-Import Bank for trade with Russia, but balked at any cash loan.

Troyanovsky has given no indication of any modification in the Soviet position, but it is assumed that both governments have formulated compromise proposals.

The American claims include a loan to the defunct Kerensky government, bond issues floated in New York, and damages claimed for property confiscated or destroyed during the Russian revolution or by the Soviet decree nationalizing property.

Russia has a counterclaim for damages through occupation of the Archangel region by American and allied troops in 1917.

Du Pont Bares Political Gifts

Pierre Offered $107,600 to Democratic Party in Four Years.

Pierre du Pont, of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., contributed $107,600 to the Democratic campaign chest between 1928 and 1932, he reported yesterday to the Senate munitions investigating committee.

Asked to list all advances to political parties between 1919 and the present date, the Delaware powder manufacturer cited only one gift to the Republican National committee—$12,378 in 1920.

Chairman Nye withheld the letter from the record, pending receipt of similar data from other Du Pont executives.

Contributions to the Democrats by Du Ponts were as follows: $50,000 in 1928; $25,100 in 1929; $5,000 in 1930; $12,500 in 1931 and $15,000 in 1932.

First General Snows Fall in North Rockies

Denver, Sept. 20 (AP).—The first general snow of the winter fell in the northern Rocky Mountain region today.

Snow at Denver was mixed with rain. The storm was general from the Canadian border to central Colorado along the east face of the Rockies. It struck in Montana late yesterday and today had reached across Wyoming and into Colorado. Sheridan, Wyo., was blanketed with seven inches of white, but in most other regions the snow melted as fast as it fell.

ALFRED BATSON, whose extraordinary story of a German spying expedition in Togoland—"African Intrigue"—was published last fall, is in town for the winter. The growing manuscript which occupies his days sets forth some of the adventures he has met in many parts of the world. Vancouver born, he enlisted in the Canadian army under age and saw service. In New York, he was a newspaperman, an advertising copy writer, and a "sand-hog" laboring in a caisson under the Hudson. In Nicaragua, he manned a machine-gun and won a commission as captain in one of the revolutionary armies. That over, he hiked on foot to Texas—it took him six months. For three years he worked on the North China Daily News, in Shanghai. And just this last summer he has been down in St. Augustine, Fla., observing the ways of "confidence men."

From the 1913-1921 files of that amazing pulp-paper magazine, Burton Rascoe and Groff Conklin have selected a great swatch of material which even today will seem fresh and alive. The magazine's editors—first, Willard Huntington Wright (S. S. Van Dine), and then H. L. Mencken and George Jean Nathan—knew a coming writer when scarcely anyone else could tell the fact. Among the items to reappear are a poem by Elinor Wylie which was left out of the definitive, collected edition, and the short story by Branch Cabell from which grew "Jurgen" and the kingdom of Poictesme.

Prosperity Era Near, Rail Executive Says

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, said today he believes America is on the threshold of another prosperity era. He pointed out that railroad traffic is climbing.

J. J. Zernet, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio, also said business is "a little better now as far as car loadings are concerned."

The National Gallery

ROBERT EDGAR MATTINGLY, judge, Municipal Court, District of Columbia. Annually treats Washington's newsmen with ice cream on his birthday anniversary, he is one of the best liked dispensers of sentence in the city. The only "marrying judge" in town, he is equally popular with love-smitten couples. Appointed a colonel and aid-de-camp on Gov. Laffoon's staff, he remarked, "I have long been an admirer of the State as the habitat of beautiful women, fine horses and certain other tempting productions." Veteran of political conventions, member of countless social and civic bodies, author of articles, he's been a D. C. resident from birth. Elderly, jovial with a twist of sly humor, he's quite bald and speaks mildly from beneath a stubby gray mustache. His credo: "Most of the prisoners aren't really bad and it doesn't hurt to turn a few of them loose once in a while."

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

You Can't Keep a Wildcat in a Cage With the Door Open

By Robert Quillen

The killer's chance of escaping punishment is not a matter of guesswork. Official records give the percentages.

Year before last there were 11,000 killings in the United States, and 9,000 of the killers were caught and booked for trial.

Of that 9,000, only 130 were executed.

What became of the others, Well, the total number of convicts admitted to prisons was approximately 75,000, and approximately 40,000 of these were paroled or pardoned or somehow liberated before serving their time.

If killers were turned loose in the same ratio, 4,800 of the 9,000 were set free.

What is true of killers is doubly true of lesser criminals. If they are caught, they seldom go to prison so long as they have money to pay lawyers; and of those finally landed in the jug, only one-third complete their sentences.

Dillinger was paroled, as you remember, and one of his chief lieutenants was paroled twice.

This record of leniency might indicate a commendable Christian charity in ordinary times, but something has happened since the World War to make any show of softness dangerous.

The world has learned that society can't make its members behave.

Nations learned that nobody could force them to pay their debts.

Bootleggers learned that an unpopular law couldn't be enforced.

Individual debtors learned that nobody could force them to pay.

Voters learned that nothing could prevent their pillaging of the Treasury.

In short, moral force lost its power to restrain. Men no longer required themselves to do right for right's sake, and they discovered that no power existed to make them do right.

The law survives only because the majority are willing to obey it. No police force could keep the world in order if all men wished to do evil.

There are fashions in behavior as in dress. The world is ruled by trends. And because men have learned the weakness of law, and men and nations no longer feel the old obligation to do right, the present trend is toward ever-increasing lawlessness.

It is no time to be soft. Nobody could control a frontier school until he first whaled the sin and iniquity out of the big boys who felt tough.

Octogenarians Dine At West Virginia Fair

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—An octogenarians' banquet tonight featured the sixth annual Central West Virginia Country Life Jubilee and Regional 4-H Fair in the State park at Jackson's Mill, with 25 persons ranging in age from 80 to 90 years taking part.

One of the exhibits is a modern Sunday school, shown in the Upshur County cottages.

Twenty-five CCC workers from the mountains are being housed on the grounds to enter an exhibit known as "Planned Adventures in West Virginia." One hundred and fifty teams are entered for athletic events.

No Misbehavior Seen At Camp for Transients

Danville, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Although it has been in operaton for several months and is peopled by 200 colored persons, the Pittsylvania County transient camp has yet to register a man confined for misbehavior, Maj. J. S. MacGruer, U. S. A., superintendent of the camp, reports.

The Autumnal Equinox.

This comes in the neighborhood of September 21; this year, speaking more accurately, astronomical autumn begins September 23.

The word equinox is from two Latin words aequus which means equal, and nox which means night. Ever since the summer solstice, June 21, our days have been growing shorter, though there has been more daytime than night time in each period of 24 hours; but now the daytime and the night time are equal all over the world, hence we call it the equinox. And because the earth is slightly cockeyed (which may account for the same peculiarity in so many of its inhabitants)—that is to say, it wobbles along at a tipped angle of 23½ degrees, the northern hemisphere is pointed more toward the sun in summer time, which gives six months continual daylight at the North Pole and more sunlight than dark in the United States.

And on March 21, which we call the vernal or spring equinox, the days just balance the nights; then, as autumn approaches, on September 21-23, comes the autumal equinox, when the same thing happens.

The farther north of the equator or the farther south of it you live, the greater is the change in the amount of daylight during the year; and the nearer to the equator you live, the less difference. This is a very good thing. I remember an Irishman's saying. "What a good thing it is that the night does not come until the end of the day, when you don't feel like doing any more work;" but it is certainly a good thing that the heat of equatorial latitudes is mitigated by the less amount of sun. If the sun at Panama was shining as in Edinburgh (from 3 a. m. to 9 p. m.) it would be terrible. Whereas in Edinburgh, it is very convenient and agreeable; for you can play 18 holes after the day's work is over.

One of the commonest of our common myths is about the so-called equinoctial gale, or simply the "equinoctural." The vast majority of people believe that we are apt to have high winds, storms and bad weather when the sun "crosses the line" at the equinox; indeed, if there is a storm at that time, it is often called the line storm. Now, as a matter of fact, in the equinox business, so far as the weather is concerned, there is "nothing in it."

Some mathematical or meteorological fiend has gone to work and made a careful study of the weather over a period of 50 years. Result: During the five days from March 21 to March 25 and from September 21 to September 25 there were actually less winds and storms than during the rest of the year. Another myth gone!

Marriage Failed, But Texas 'Cupid' Keeps Mule as Fee

Boyd, Tex., Sept. 20 (AP).—A matchmaker can start a couple to the altar, but he can't guarantee marital bliss.

So a Parker County farmer gets to keep the mule he received from a Wise County man for services rendered as a matrimonial agent.

In a suit tried here, the husband demanded the return of the mule he had given the farmer for an introduction to the lady.

He alleged the marriage had not been satisfactory and thought he ought to have his mule back.

The jury, however, decided the matchmaker could keep the animal.

Spellbinders Lose Control In Southwest

Primary Elections Spelled Doom for Political Standbys.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 17 (U.P.).—A summary of primary elections might be interpreted as a breakdown in the Southwest of old-fashioned spellbinding contrasted with the efficient functioning of the well-oiled metropolitan machine.

Experts say James E. Ferguson, former Governor of Texas and husband of the present Governor, is through, his political death warrant signed by Lone Star voters.

The same goes for Gov. W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray of Oklahoma, the signing likewise taking place in the State's primary this summer.

Pendergast Still Powerful.

Big Tom Pendergast's Kansas City political machine is hitting on all cylinders, his primary election triumph being the election for the first time in history, of a State-wide candidate in Missouri.

Thus may be summarized the highlights of the primaries. At least that is the status of the section's stars in political drama, those who could count on making the front page on the slightest pretext.

Ferguson thought that he—or his wife, Miriam, after he was impeached in 1917 during his second term as Governor and barred from ever holding State office again—always could count on the dirt farmer whose cause he espoused.

He couldn't. This year Mrs. Ferguson announced that "the family has had enough honors;" that she wouldn't run for reelection; and that the Fergusons would back C. C. McDonald as her successor.

Ferguson Choice Third.

McDonald ran third in the first primary, July 28. Ferguson then turned his support to Tom F. Hunter. He was bested by Attorney Gen. James V. Allred last Saturday in the run-off primary, with the Democratic nomination tantamount to election. Allred is rabidly anti-Fusion.

Murray, who has known no equal as a swashbuckling, hell-raising, rough and tumble governor, came into power in 1930 with a radical new deal in Oklahoma politics and economics.

Those who are supposed to know say his lack of diplomacy, his dictatorial methods, his battles with the Roosevelt Administration and his lack of sympathy with the National new deal undid him. That, and his stumping tour in behalf of his eight-candidate slate, including Tom Anglin, for governor. His speeches lost votes, they say.

Murray Fading.

Murray's waning power was said to have struck a toboggan last winter, when he engaged Federal officials in a tilt over methods of distributing Federal relief funds.

Baby's Grandmother Is Silent on Arrest

North Haven, Me., Sept. 20 (U.P.). Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, grandmother of the kidnaped and murdered Lindbergh baby withheld comment tonight on the developments in the case. A butler at the Morrow summer mansion, overlooking West Penobscot Bay, said Mrs. Morrow had nothing to say for publication.

Porter Browne, Author Of Plays, Dies at 55

Norwalk, Conn., Sept. 20 (AP).—Porter Emerson Browne, widely known playwright, whose play, "The Bad Man," starring the late Holbrook Blinn, ran on Broadway for a year, died today in the Norwalk Hospital, where he had been a patient since June 7. He was 55.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)
By Morgan Baker

THE District Federation of Federal Employes will launch its educational program for the winter season on the last Friday of October when the first meeting of the Educational Forum of the NFFE here will be called to order by Dr. J. Franklin Meyer.

BAKER

Dr. Meyer will preside over the Forum during the year, succeeding Ulrey J. Biller, founder of the Forum. Mr. Biller, National vice president of the NFFE, originiated the Forum under the auspices of Local No. 2, some six years ago. Later it became one of the leading programs of the entire NFFE organization here, under the direction of the D. C. Federation.

An expert on retirement, Mr. Biller has decided that he must devote his entire time to preparation of retirement statistics and data in time for the Congressional hearings on retirement legislation, scheduled prior to the convening of Congress in January. He will be sorely missed, but Dr. Meyer is well qualified to conduct the Forum in his absence. Dr. Meyer is president of the Bureau of Standards Union, No. 260, and presided over the last session of the Forum before the summer.

Prominent Federal officials vitally interested in the program of the Federal employes will be asked to speak to an open meeting each month. It is believed a Civil Service commissioner will speak on the "Merit System."

Other phases of the NFFE's locals' winter program are either under way or definitely outlined. Local No. 2 will raise the curtain on the social season with a dance on November 17 at the Mayflower Hotel. Credit unions and hospital guilds sponsored and maintained by NFFE unions are functioning with much success. Latest to report sizable gains in credit union membership are those of the War Department Local, No. 261; Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, No. 105; Treasury and Commerce Departments.

AS THE second effort since its organization, the Department of Agriculture Musical and Theatrical Gulid will present three one-act plays tonight in the new department auditorium, as follows:

"Mrs. Sullivan's Social Tea," by Laura Frances Kelley; "The Valiant," by Holworthy Hall, and "The World Agin Her," by Bruce L. Miller.

The cast for Mrs. Sullivan's party includes Viola Randolph, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; Bill Ewing, AAA; Rebecca McKinney, Secretary's office; Helen Hage, Secretary's office; Della Mae Baker, AAA; Elizabeth Knee, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; Doris Menter, Bureau of Dairy Industry; Helen Conolly, Bureau Home Economics; Edith Evers, Bureau Home Economics, and Katherine Swinland, AAA. Rose E. Perkins, Bureau Agricultural Economics, is directing the piece.

The absorbing tale of "The Valiant" is told by Helen Hage, Secretary's office; W. H. Redit, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; H. L. Chamberland, AAA; Stanley M. Amy, AAA; Edward Calkins, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and George W. Field, Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Mr. Field also is directing the play.

Appearing in "The World Agin Her" are Elsie Knoll, AAA; Robert Campbell, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; H. L. Chamberland, AAA; Bettie Roberts, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, and Harry Kabat, Secretary's office. Betty Whitfield, Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington tennis star, is directing this bit of rural burlesque.

The guild concert orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Walter Bauer (*), AAA, will play during intermissions. Louise McAllister, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, will be mistress of ceremonies.

Dynamite Bowling League.

The maples cracked and tumbled last night as the Dynamite Bowling League opened its 1934-35 season. Arthur J. Mellott, Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue, rolled the first ball for the eight teams of Internal Revenue and Justice employes.

J. J. Dapolito, Alcohol Tax Unit, Internal Revenue, is president of the league. Other officers include: J. J. Weisbach, Customs Bureau, vice president; T. L. Moffatt, Customs Bureau, secretary-treasurer, and D. H. Reichgut, Alcohol Tax Unit, official scorer.

The teams and their captains are Hill Billies, W. A. Holbrook, Alcohol Tax; Sleuths, Mr. Reichgut, acting captain; Steam Rollers, J. Clayton, Taxes and Penalties, Justice; Wrecking Crew, Mr. Weisbach; Tornadoes, T. J. Kennedy, Customs; Blow Hards, E. C. Wilcox, Alcohol Tax; Technocrats, E. G. Grigsby, Alcohol Tax.

THEN TRY TWO FINGERS OF CALVERT, THE WHISKEY THAT IS "PERFECTLY MARRIED"
PERFECTLY MARRIED

Put your throat on a peace-time basis. Whiskey is a pleasure, not a punishment now that CALVERT is here. Plenty of body to it, but it doesn't get rough about it. CALVERT feels good going down—smooth and rich. Leaves no mean after-taste; nothing but glowing comfort for the inner man. CALVERT will bring back old-time memories; and, no wonder. . .

THE STRAIGHT WHISKEY IN CALVERT IS 5 YEARS OLD
—YET CALVERT IS REASONABLY PRICED

Back in '29, whiskey made from the choicest grains was stowed away in charred oak casks to mellow into unhurried maturity. In '34, it was blended, but the blend was not hurriedly bottled. No, CALVERT was returned to the original charred oak casks so that the blend could unite or "marry." The delightful bouquet, delicate aroma, and full rich flavor so distinctive of CALVERT result from this "Perfect Marriage."

Only when CALVERT has become "perfectly married" is it bottled and sold. You can tell by the unique decanter bottle that its makers are proud of it. And why not? The name CALVERT has, for more than forty years, stood for the finest whiskey ever made in the State of Maryland; a state famous for its whiskies.

Miss Perkins And President Discuss Strike

Roosevelt Board's Report to Bring Peace, Says Labor Head.

By Leon Dure, Jr.
(Post Staff Writer).

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 20—Belief that the report of the President's special board of inquiry for the cotton textile industry will lead to a settlement of the widespread textile strike was expressed here early tonight by Secretary of Labor Perkins and Gov. John G. Winant, chairman of the board.

"Personally, I think so," declared New Hampshire's quiet, soft-spoken Governor as he left the "Summer White House" with Miss Perkins after a long conference with President Roosevelt. During the meeting the President received and accepted the report, which was made public later at Washington.

"I took no part in preparing the report," Miss Perkins commented, "but I have studied it carefully on behalf of the President. I think it is an extremely good report. It's sound, constructive and holds, I think, the seeds of a permanently satisfactory arrangement."

Summoned First.

Gov. Winant and the Secretary of Labor, arriving at Hyde Park this morning, were the first to be summoned here by the President after his return from the yacht races off Newport. Both were guests for luncheon and remained most of the afternoon, discussing particulars of the textile strike.

Gov. Winant entrained for Washington after the conference, creating the impression the board will be called on for further service before it is dissolved by the President.

Miss Perkins also left for the Capital, explaining she had tendered the report personally to the President, in accordance with his Executive order creating the board. The latter was named by Mr. Roosevelt two weeks ago when the textile strike defied the mediation efforts of the National Labor Relations Board.

Mrs. Mary Rumsey, chairman of the Consumers Board of the NRA, and Walton H. Hamilton, chairman of the NRA Advisory Board, also were luncheon guests of the President today.

After six days aboard Vincent Astor's yacht Nourmahal, during which he saw the first two races for the America's Cup, the President came ashore at Poughkeepsie this morning, obviously benefited by his voyage. He appeared in robust health and spirits as he bade good-by to Astor and his other companions.

Greeted on Arrival.

On hand to greet the Chief Executive were Mrs. Roosevelt, their daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt, and the latter's 2-year-old baby, Sarah. Several score neighbors also were present as the President came down the gangplank. Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter-in-law were in riding habits.

One of the purposes of the President's return was to preside at a big family birthday party arranged for tomorrow, the eightieth anniversary of the birth of his mother, Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt. Other members of the family whose birthdays will be observed at the same time are Elliott, the second son, who will be 24 on Sunday, and the third son, Franklin, jr., who was 20 on August 17.

Indications now are that Mr. Roosevelt will return to Washington Tuesday morning, leaving Hyde Park by train the night before. He will see a number of visiting officials before leaving and has arranged a final picnic party for Saturday noon at the Val-Kill cottage on the estate.

Italy-U. S. Trade Pact Is Predicted

Forecast Is Made by Rosso After Conference.

Early negotiation of a reciprocal trade agreement between Italy and the United States was predicted yesterday by Augusto Rosso, the Italian Ambassador, following a conference at the State Department, the Associated Press reported.

Rosso, who had been absent from Washington for more than two months, conferred with Undersecretary Phillips on a number of questions in which Italy and the United States are mutually interested. He described his conference as "bringing himself up to date" on developments during his absence.

The Italian envoy said preliminary discussions probably would start in the near future on a trade agreement.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co —Advt.

Musical Dentist Sues Over Next-Door Static

Many Strikers Seized in South By Mill Guards

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 20 (AP).—Bayonet-bordered mills and wholesale arrests of pickets today held strikers almost powerless in some sections as the Southern textile industry continued its reopening campaign.

Deaf to charges from State and National strike headquarters that constitutional rights had been abrogated, Georgia National Guardsmen continued their "clean-up" campaign against pickets, arresting more than 200.

Following the lead, Winchester, Va., police locked up 17 persons described as "nonresident" agitators and announced their intention of jailing any one attempting to picket mills there.

Approximately 3,300 employes returned to work in six mills reopening in the Carolinas and Georgia, and no additional mills were closed.

Strikers in Demonstration.

Thousands of strikers staged a demonstration at Roanoke Rapids, N. C., after it was announced a hospital, largely supported by funds deducted by the mills from weekly pay envelopes, had closed. There was no disorder. Marching through a heavy rain, the workers carried placards denouncing the mill managements. One said, "You may close your hospital, but the American Federation of Labor will open it."

The hospital's founder, Dr. W. M. Long, was reported to have made strenuous efforts to prevent its closing. The board of directors ordered it closed on the grounds that its income was insufficient since the strike cut off the 50 cents weekly it received from each mill worker, in return for which all mill families received free treatment.

Strike leaders charged the institution was closed "merely as another step in the intimidation campaign of the mill owners."

More Mills Reopen.

No serious violence was reported anywhere on the Southern strike front. The Buffalo, S. C., mill of the Buffalo-Union Mills Co. reopened behind a barrier of barbed wire hastily strung by soldiers. Pickets sought to block highways leading to the plant, but were cleared away by highway patrolmen.

The Lexington, N. C., silk mill continued operations, resumed yesterday, despite the activities of several hundred pickets, who stoned and jeered returning workers. Possibility of military intervention was seen after peace officers announced they were unable to clear surrounding roads.

The hold of Georgia's military on the situation in that State was further indicated by the arrest of 33 men at Bibb City, near Columbus, when guardsmen acted on "suspicion" that they were starting out to intimidate workers.

Civil authorities at Macon arrested 34 men accused of "planning trouble" at a strikers' mass meeting. Newman, scene of wholesale arrests several days ago, saw two men arrested for attempting to intimidate workers. Of the original Newman arrests, 126 remained in a National Guard detention camp at Atlanta.

Thousands Back at Jobs.

A survey indicated 32,000 of Georgia's 61,000 workers were at their posts in the mills, two of which, at Summerville and Griffin, reopened today.

The situation in Virginia was heightened when Gov. Peery dispatched ten State highway patrolmen to Winchester after local authorities reported an invasion by a flying squadron of unionists from West Virginia, and by an apparent conflict between the views of the State administration and police authorities at Danville.

Gov. Peery answered a protest by labor leaders against alleged oppressive measures in Danville, where picketing has been banned, with a promise of "equal protection under the law" for all Virginians.

There are 27 State policemen at Danville. Asked if the protection would be afforded even if it conflicted with city police restrictions in Danville, the Governor said:

"They asked me for protection and they were assured they would get it under the laws of the State just as any other citizens."

Today's request from Danville followed the arrest there of four visiting textile union organizers and the impounding of cars belonging to the visitors.

Thousands of persons gathered at Mount Holly, N. C., today for the funeral of Ernest Riley, North Carolina's first strike fatality, who suffered a fatal bayonet wound during a clash between strikers and troops at Belmont, N. C., Tuesday night.

Burial at Arlington Will Follow Services at Epiphany Church.

Funeral services for Dr. A. Barnes Hooe, 63, prominent Washington physician and surgeon, who died late Wednesday at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held today at 2 p. m. at Epiphany Church. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Dr. Hooe was born in King George County, Va., in 1871. He had resided in Washington since he was a young man, and received his degree from Columbian College, now George Washington University, in 1896.

During the World War, Dr. Hooe served in France as commandant of a field hospital. He was a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and a member of numerous medical society, including the American Medical Association, Southern Medical Association, Tri-State Medical Society and Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

He also was active in the Virginia and Maryland Medical Society, Medical Society of Virginia, Fairfax County Medical Society, Washington Medical and Surgical Society, and George Washington Medical Society, of which he was the founder.

Dr. Hooe was past master of St. John's Lodge, F.A.A.M., and was connected with the Knights Templar and the Shriners. He also belonged to the University Club.

Surviving Dr. Hooe are his widow, Mrs. Eliza M. Hooe; two brothers, Rice Hooe, an attorney, and Dr. Arthur Hooe, and a sister, Miss Nedora Hooe, all of Washington.

Kohler Agrees To Labor Poll

Promises, With Reservation to Aid in Election Ordered by U. S.

The Kohler Co. of Wisconsin, manufacturers of plumbing supplies, notified the National Labor Relations Board yesterday that it would cooperate in holding an election of its employes as ordered by the board September 15.

The company specified, however, that it was doing this without prejudice to its legal rights as to the construction of section 7(a) of the National recovery act. It agreed to submit its payrolls as of September 7, 1933, from which the list of eligible voters will be drawn. The election was set for September 27 and 28 and will be held under the supervision of agents of the labor board.

The Kohler Co. insists that the recovery act permits it to deal with any group of its employes and opposed the contention of the labor board that it must bargain exclusively with agents of the majority group. In support of its position, it cited a construction of the law offered earlier by NRA itself, in which section 7(a) was interpreted to mean that bargaining might be carried on either by majority or minority groups or by individuals.

28 Pounds of Pennies Helped Pay the Stork

Kansas City, Mo. (U.P.).—It took Leo Hill five years to save 4,000 pennies, but he had a good use for them. Recently he turned over a sack, weighing 28 pounds, to the cashier of a hospital and told her to apply the pennies to his bill.

"I've been saving for this event for five years," he said as he accepted the receipt for $40.

The event was the arrival of a baby daughter to Mrs. Hill.

and that they offer the possibility of a just and lasting settlement."

Without referring to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, by name, the board took issue with his statement in a recent New York speech that the union "broke faith" with him in calling the strike.

"The question has arisen," the board explained, "whether the United Textile Workers were under legal or moral obligation * * * not to call the present strike.

Made With NRA.

"While we do not consider it the function of this board to go into that question, it should be pointed out that the agreement was made not with the employers of the industry, but with officials of NRA, and that members of the union and others present at the conference contended that the agreement to 'countermand' the strike order (an earlier threatened walkout) 'without prejudice to the right of labor to strike' was intended to leave them free to enforce their demands by strike if the conditions against which they were protesting were not remedied."

Manchukuo Pay Cut To Aid Public Works

Hsinking (AP).—Fancy salaries for officials of Manchukuo are a thing of the past. A recent decree made general slashes in the official pay rolls and directed that the money thus saved be diverted to public works.

The salaries remain, however, higher than those of Japan, foster parent of the new state. Manchukuo's premier, for example, receives the equivalent of $7,200 a year. The head of the cabinet in Tokyo gets $3,200.

Train Wreck Inquiry Conducted in Virginia

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Company investigation of the fatal freight train wreck on the Virginia Central line Thursday night was held yesterday, but a complete report of the findings will not be made public for several days, company officials said yesterday.

Representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the State corporation board participated in the investigation. A fireman, Selmo Ferris, met death when the locomotive and tender of an eastbound freight train crashed through a rain-weakened trestle.

Tragic Season Of Bullfighting Ends in Spain

Six Dead, Scores Injured Left in Wake; Noted Matadors Victims.

Madrid (U.P.).—Six deaths directly attributable to bull fights have made the present season one of the most tragic in years.

The recent passing of Ignacia Sanchez Mejias marked the most important bull-fight death since that of Joselito Gomez, one of the greatest matadors of all time.

The other victims of the bull ring were Candido Roig, a spectator, who was killed in Coruna by a flying sword; Pablo Sanchez, an amateur, who was gored by a bull in the Madrid ring; Juanito Jimenez, 21-year-old bull fighter, who died of wounds received in a Valencia fight; Anselmo Manchado, bull fighter, victim of a goring received in the Castro ring; Joaquin Ascuncion, amateur, killed in a village square bull fight in Silla.

The list of matadors seriously injured in the ring so far this season is a lengthy one. It includes Nicanor Villalta, Maravilla, Rosenberg Lopez, Andres Meridas, Alfredo Corrochano, Carnicerito, of Mexico; Enrique Torres, Ricardo Torres, of Mexico, and Vincente Barrera. All except Lopez, Merida and Enrique Torres have recovered completely.

Domingo Ortega, ace of the younger fighters, was injured in an automobile accident while en route from Coruna to Madrid to attend the funeral of a brother. Ortega's cousin, Commander Francisco Caballero, was killed in the accident.

Sanchez Mejias, who substituted for Ortega at a bull fight in Manzanares, because the latter's injuries prevented his appearance, died of a goring received during the fight there.

Thirty amateurs were injured in the village of Gor when they jumped into the ring constructed in the village square and attempted to perform passes with a huge bull.

Man Shot in Lion Chase Sues Circus for $2,500

Richmond, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—John Kelley, 23-year-old tourist camp employe and the only person to be injured yesterday as result of the escape and ultimate shooting to death of a circus lion on the streets of Richmond, today filed suit for $2,500 against the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus.

Kelley received a flesh wound in the lower arm from a bullet, presumably one of those fired by Patrolman J. R. Paul, who emptied his pistol at the escaped lion after it had pulled down a circus draft horse on the crowded thoroughfare down which the parade was moving.

Alexandria Man Hurt In Collision of Autos

T. J. Murray, of Alexandria, suffered a possibly fractured skull when the car he was driving collided with another on the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard, according to a park police report yesterday.

W. J. Ashton, 700 block Quebec place northwest, was operating the other machine which figured in the crash, which occurred on the outskirts of Alexandria.

Four Conventions For Bristol in '35

Hundreds Expected to Visit Virginia Town.

Bristol, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Four major conventions will be held in Bristol next year, Chamber of Commerce officials announced today.

The Virginia Baptist Association will meet here for three days in February, with an estimated attendance of 600.

In March, the thirty-ninth district of the National society, Daughters of the American Revolution, will hold a three-day convention, with an estimated attendance of 250.

In April a convention of the National debating society for junior colleges, Phi Rho Pi, will bring approximately 200 people to Bristol from Maine to California, for a for a four-day session.

In July the fourth division, Railway Mail Clerks Association, comprising Tennessee, Alabama, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, will hold a three-day convention here. More than 300 are expected to attend, including Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Teach your daughter how to guard her health

"Caroline used to ache all over. She had cramps and severe headache and backache and would stay in bed most of the day. Your Tablets helped all this."—Mrs. Frank Quinn, 914 West 19th St., Erie, Pennsylvania.

Mother . . . You Must Do Your Part

Most girls need a tonic and regulator when they come to womanhood. If your daughter is languid, nervous and cranky . . . if she complains of new pains and aches . . . see that she takes Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly. When she is a happy, healthy wife and mother she will thank you.

"My daughter Leona is a stenographer and switchboard operator. She was nervous and weak and often had to stay home from work. Never cared to go anywhere, lost her appetite and always had headaches. Your Compound helped her wonderfully. She is more peppy and can work now every day".—Mrs. B. Trommer, 2320 W. Juneau Ave., Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Darryl Zanuck Makes Good an Early Promise

Biographers Kept Busy; Yacht Races on Screen; About Showshops.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Darryl Zanuck refuses to be swerved from his original purpose. Evidently intent upon making Twentieth Century's second year of production as noteworthy as its first, which ended in a blaze of glory with the release of "The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss, Mr. Zanuck, vice president in charge of production, has swung into action, although he has hardly had time to recover his land legs since returning to America from the European capitals and a big-game hunt in Africa.

In keeping with his early-season announcement that the lives of colorful and famous personalities will play an important part in the forthcoming production schedules of Twentieth Century pictures, Zanuck has signed three of modern literature's prominent biographers for service in his studio. They are Gene Fowler, R. J. Minney and Cameron Rogers.

Working on Screen Play.

Minney recently arrived from London for the adaptation of his book, "Clive of India," as a vehicle for Ronald Colman. With W. P. Lipscombe, also in Hollywood at the present time for work on the story of the celebrated general, he wrote the stage version of the story which has been running nearly a year in the British capital.

Cameron Rogers, author of one of the best-known books on Richelieu and his times, is now working with Nunnally Johnson in research for "Cardinal Richlieu," George Arliss' next starring vehicle.

Gene Fowler, whose biographical works, "The Great Mouthpiece" and "Timberline," have been best-sellers, is now in collaboration with Bess Meredyth on the screen play of "The Mighty Barnum." It is based on M. R. Werner's popular book, and is to have Wallace Beery in the title role with Adolphe Menjou featured.

Mr. Zanuck also makes known that Clark Gable will be individually starred for the first time in "It Had to Happen." Gable has enjoyed top billing on frequent occasions, but always has been compelled to share it with some other actor or actress. "It Had to Happen" will mark a milestone in his career in that it will impose upon him for the first time the responsibility of bearing full stellar honors unassisted by an equally prominent associate.

Tom Baily, publicity director at the Paramount studios in Hollywood, will arrive in Washington on Wednesday, October 3, for a three-day visit to meet drama editors, sales executives of his company and theater operators on matters of common interest. Mr. Baily is one of the West Coast's most helpful scriveners and will be a welcome visitor.

Dots and Dashes.

There are said to be ten persons in Washington who will have particular reason to welcome the celebration of its seventh anniversary by Loew's Fox Theater, beginning tomorrow . . . First there is Mrs. W. W. Steiner, 1353 A street northeast . . . Mrs. Steiner bought the first ticket ever sold at the Fox, back in September, 1927 . . . Second, there is Mrs. Mary C. Williamson, Portland Hotel, who bought the second ticket . . . Mrs. Williamson is Mrs. Steiner's mother . . . Then there is a group of notables still resident here who were guests of the management at a special invitational performance the night before the public opening of the theater . . . All of these have been invited by Division Manager Carter Barron to attend tomorrow night's performance as the theater's guests . . . Speaking of guests, those who attended the perfectly appointed "British banquet" preview of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," at the Shoreham Tuesday night, also had themselves a time . . . The introductory ceremonies were exceedingly ne plus ultra and the broccoli, plum pudding, champagne, et cetera, even more so, but the real piece de resistance of the evening was the screening of the picture itslf . . . Seeing it for the second time within a fortnight, I was surprised to find it better than I had thought at first . . . Which was very, very good, indeed . . . Here is a film that will be up there when it comes time to make Academy awards and choose the so-called "Ten Best Pictures of the Year" . . . You don't hear so much about them as you do of Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Sullivan and Una O'Connor, but Ralph Forbes and Flush, the spaniel, prove themselves a couple of swell actors, too . . . I trust Dick Powell, contrived to reach Washington early enough last night to get the sleep he looked forward to so eagerly in Philadelphia on Monday . . . And got it . . . In Master Powell's entourage is Bert Perkins, former picture exploiteer in this territory, with whom, in an earlier incarnation, I once plotted some of the most outrageous publicity stunts ever pulled on an unsuspecting and credulous public and press . . . And got away with them, too, without being either shot as a felon or tossed into the big house as a thoroughgoing rogue . . . All of which we recalled at some length and with great wonder at the temerity of our comparative youth over a mess of matutinal ham and eggs at Tom O'Donnell's early yesterday morning at 1 p. m. . . . Tom used to be an old film man himself, before he went comestibly maritime . . . You would think that after winding and unwinding so many reels of film, he would have gone in for spaghetti instead of ersters . . . Or maybe he thought pictures were a shell game . . . When Dick Powell opens at the Earle tomorrow, by the way, he will find himself working with practically the identical stage bill that has surrounded him at the Earle in Philadelphia all this week . . . Albertina Rasch Girls, and everything . . . All done up in georgette crepe, or something . . . Almost as concealing as cellophane!

This week's newsreels are supplanting the gruesome details of the Morro Castle holocaust with extensive footages of the America's Cup yacht races being held over a triangular course off Newport, R. I. The Metropolitan Theater began showing these pictures yesterday morning. Both the British challenger, Endeavour, and the American defender, Rainbow, are shown from many angles during the actual course of the racing.

Personal Aside.

Well, you Pierce Hall Players, you brought it on yourselves, but it isn't too late yet to stay home tonight, when this typewriter is billed to be your season's first speaker. And don't say I didn't warn you!

In Openings Today and Tomorrow

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

Dick Powell, who, since his last appearance in Washington a year ago last May, has established himself as one of the most popular young stars of the screen, will make a week of personal appearances at the Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. He will be supported on the stage by Collins and Peterson, who contribute their own familiar specialty and serve also as masters of ceremonies; the Albertina Rasch Dancers from Hollywood, and Ray and Sunshine. The screen feature will be "Desirable," a romantic drama in which the principal roles are played by Jean Muir, George Brent, Verree Teasdale and John Halliday. The program will be completed by "Good Morning, Eve," a Technicolor short, starring Leon Errol, with Maxine Doyle; the Universal News and orchestral overture with Bert Granoffs' vocal interpolations.

For the week beginning tomorrow, Loew's Fox Theater announces an anniversary bill of imposing proportions. In celebration of its seventh birthday anniversary, a gala stage bill has been assembled by Division Manager Carter Barron and Production Manager Gene Ford, including Yascha Bunchuk, cellist, a hit at the Fox last month; the Pat Rooneys, 2d and 3d; Herman Timberg and Herman Timberg, jr., and their comic crew; Arthur Godfrey, radio personality, and Eddie Perkins, the singing usher; Ernestine Gardner and Julia Cunningham, local artistes; a chorus of 24 beauties and a ballet of 65. The screen feature for the week will be "Servants' Entrance," starring Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, with Walter Connolly, Ned Sparks, Louise Dresser, Siegfried Rumann, G. P. Huntley, jr., and others in support. The Fox Movietone News and Prof. Lampkin's overture will complete the program.

"Million Dollar Ransom" is the title of the Damon Runyon story that will be presented in film form on the screen of the Rialto Theater for the week beginning today. The leading roles in this up-to-the-minute melodramatic romance are played by Edward Arnold, Mary Carlisle and Phillips Holmes, with Andy Devine, Wini Shaw, Robert Gleckler, Marjorie Gateson, Edgar Norton, Bradley Page and Henry Kolker. The program will be completed by short screen subjects, including the Universal News.

• • • •

Norma Shearer, Fredric March and Charles Laughton are the three stars who will [illegible] possession of the Palace screen tomorrow in the principal roles of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." This triumvirate of artists will be assisted in the depiction of the romantic love story of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning by Una O'Connor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Forbes and many more. Sidney Franklin, who also directed "Smilin' Thru," is responsible for the direction of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

• • • •

In "The Case of the Howling Dog," to be seen as chief screen feature of the program announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater, Warren William, Mary Astor, Helen Trenholme and Allen Jenkins are cast in the roles of prime importance. The story is a murder mystery of the most eerie sort. Grant Mitchell, Gordon Westcott and Helen Lowell are among others of note in the cast. The program will be rounded out by "Paree, Paree," a two-reel musical comedy, starring Bob Hope and Dorothy Stone; Little Jack Little in a "Pepper Pot" specialty, and a 15-minute newsreel.

• • • •

With United Artists' new screen version of Dumas' "The Count of Monte Cristo" matching the attendance records set up by such popular successes as "Little Women" and "It Happened One Night," announcement is made that this attraction will be continued for a second week at RKO-Keith's.

• • • •

"Chained," the M-G-M production starring Joan Crawford and Clark Gable, with Stuart Erwin, Una O'Connor, Otto Kruger and Marjorie Gateson in support, after having scored a two-week engagement at the Palace, will resume its F street run as foremost feature of the bill to be inaugurated tomorrow at the Columbia Theater.

• • • •

"Naughty Nifties" is the title of the burlesque attraction that will bring "Sliding" Billy Watson to the Gayety for a week's engagement beginning with the customary Sunday matinee. The star of this new production will be supported by Clyde Bates and Jack Hunt, comics; Art Nealy, singing master of ceremonies; Dan Trent, Phyllis Barron, Jean Lynn, Jackie Lamar, Peggy Hill and scores more.

Philip Fazenbaker Buried in Maryland

Westernport, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Funeral services were held this afternoon for Philip R. Fazenbaker, 72, at the home of his son, James Fazenbaker, at Beryl, near here, with interment in Philos Cemetery. The Rev. Alfred W. Eppart, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, officiated. Mr. Fazenbaker died at Potomac Valley Hospital, Keyser, of heart trouble. He had been in the mercantile business at Kitzmiller, Md., for 20 years.

Surviving besides his widow are two sons, Kemp, Piedmont, W. Va., and James, Beryl, and a daughter, Mrs. Walter Pierce, Piedmont, W. Va.

Auto Men Hear Talk By Safety Engineer

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Leading automobile dealers and inspection agents of five counties heard J. T. Wadkins, safety engineer of the Virginia State division of motor vehicles, speak and give a demonstration on safety devices on automobiles at the courthouse here yesterday in preparation for the State-wide inspection of motor vehicles beginning October 1.

Men from Loudoun, Prince William, Rappahannock, Fauquier and Culpeper Counties were present.

Interest Rate Cut Is Defeated In Maryland

Bankers in Nearby Area Decide to Continue at 3 Per Cent.

Southern Maryland banks will continue, throughout this calendar year, to pay 3 per cent interest on savings accounts, it has been decided by Group 4 of the Maryland Bankers Association.

At a meeting held Wednesday night at Upper Marlboro representatives of several southern Maryland institutions argued for a reduction to 2½ per cent.

Among these was Thomas P. Littlepage, a director in the Bank of Bowie, who declared that the banks could not afford to pay the current rate because of reduced incomes. He suggested it would be better to build up the reserves.

He also displayed compiled figures showing the total savings deposits for the five counties in Group 4 to be $11,809,122.55. The counties include Prince Georges, Anne Arundel, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys.

The matter of reducing the interest rate has been rife among the nearby Maryland bankers since Washington clearing houses reduced the rate to 2½ per cent.

Other speakers at the Marlboro meeting included Hampton Magruder, president of the First National Bank of Southern Maryland, and R. Bascom Broun, of the First National Bank of St. Marys City. Thadeus M. Jones, of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., presided.

Funeral Services Held For Mrs. Shields, 73

Bristol, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Jeannette Shields, 73, wife of former United States Senator John Knight Shields of Tennessee, were conducted yesterday at her home at Clinchdale, Grainger County, Tenn. Burial was in the family cemetery at Clinchdale.

Funeral Rites Held For Wilbur Secrist

Maysville, W. Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for Wilbur Secrist, 61, prominent resident of Scherr, Grant County, who died at his home from injuries received in a fall from an apple tree.

Surviving are his widow, two sons, Max Secrist and Roy Secrist, Hagerstown, Md., and three daughters—Mrs. Lloyd Hess, New Creek Drive; Mrs. Worley Feathers, Terra Alta, and Mrs. Brook Munsing, Scherr. He was a brother of the Rev. Dr. A. J. Secrist, Martinsburg, W. Va., and Frank Secrist, Detroit.

Heart Attack Is Fatal To William Greenhorn

Westernport, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.). William Greenhorn died suddenly yesterday at the home of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. William Dawson, Cemetery road, with whom he and Mrs. Greenhorn resided. Death was due to a heart attack. He was 64.

Mr. Greenhorn resided in Westernport a number of years, but had lived a year at Powhatan Point, Ohio, returning here three weeks ago. He was a native of Barton, Md. Besides his widow, he is survived by a son, Herbert, and two daughters—Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, Powhatan Point, Ohio, and Miss Lottie Greenhorn, Bellaire, Ohio.

Colored Youth Held On Charge of Murder

A Prince Georges County coroner's jury late Wednesday night ordered James Turner, colored, 16, of Ardwick, Md., held for grand jury action in the death of Carlton Lytes, colored, 17, also of Ardwick.

The inquest, presided over by Acting Coroner Henry O'Neill, was held at Ardwick at the scene of the alleged murder within an hour after Lytes allegedly had been slain with a shotgun as he quarreled with Turner. The youth was arrested by County Policemen Claude Reese and Albert Anderson.

Virginia Plans For Motorcade By October 15

Lee Highway Association to Invite Dignitaries to Festivities.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The northern Virginia section of the Lee Highway Association has appointed a committee to make plans for a motorcade, in which many Federal and Virginia State officials are expected to take part.

Invitations will be sent Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Mrs. Ickes, Gov. Peery of Virginia and Mrs. Peery, Franklin A. Delano, Federal park commissioner, and others. The motorcade will traverse the Lee highway from Washington to Staunton, where a banquet will be given at the Stonewall Jackson Hotel. It is planned to take place before October 15.

Serving on the committee are Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the Lee Highway Association, chairman; Dr. Thomas Evans, of Washington; J. Leo Kolb, of Washington; J. R. Mimms, of Luray, Va.; John G. Miller, of New Market, Va., and J. Green Carter, of Warrenton, Va.

A committee appointed for beautification of the highway is composed of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Fred, chairman; Mrs. Thomas Evans and Miss Margaret Venable, all of Washington.

It also was decided to hold another meeting here two weeks hence to discuss plans for the new Lee highway as a dual highway similar to the Dupont in Delaware.

Popular meetings in churches and schools at "strategic points" in the country traversed by the Lee highway will be encouraged by Mr. Smith and the publicity committee.

Micajah W. Lupton Will Wed Texas Girl

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The engagement has been announced of Micajah Woods Lupton, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frank A. Lupton, of Birmingham, Ala., and a grandson of the late Capt. and Mrs. Micajah Woods, of Charlottesville, to Miss Elizabeth Samuell, daughter of Mrs. A. Murray Samuell, of Dallas, Tex.

Mr. Lupton is a nephew of the late Mrs. William J. Rucker, of Charlottesville, and of Mrs. Martin E. Rehfuss, of Philadelphia, and a brother of Miss E. Virginia Lupton, of Birmingham, and is a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Arlington Men Talk to Peery On Line Dispute

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

In an effort to have the State assist in the District of Columbia-Virginia boundary case, local officials were in Richmond yesterday in conference with Gov. George C. Peery.

Those attending the conference were Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, former State Senator Frank L. Ball, special counsel; Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green, Chairman Lyman M. Kelley of the County Board, and County Manager Roy S. Braden.

While the county has employed special counsel to represent it before the commission which is to fix the definite boundary line between the District of Columbia and Virginia, it is the opinion of county officials that the State should step in and render its assistance. It is pointed out that State revenues as well as county revenues are endangered by the efforts of the Federal Government to lay claim to a large portion of the Washington Airport and other valuable properties in the south Washington area adjacent to the Highway Bridge on the Virginia side of the Potomac River.

Due to the recent appointment of Ball by the County Board as special counsel for the county, it is planned to seek a continuance to permit him to prepare his case. October 4 has been set as the time for the filing of Virginia's briefs.

Osseola Barnes, 11 years old, colored, of Halls Hill, is in the Georgetown Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries as a result of being struck by an automobile operated by Frederick F. Golden, of 3800 Ontario road, Washington.

The child was struck on the Lee Highway near the Glebe road, according to the police.

Scout Troops to Meet.

Boy Scout Troops, No. 103 of Lyon Village, and 104 of Clarendon, meet tonight. The Lyon Village troop meets in the James Monroe School auditorium in Aurora Heights, while the Clarendon troop meets in the Clarendon Methodist Church on Taylor avenue.

Sidewalk Project.

Failure of the county board to provide sidewalks in the vicinity of the Stonewall Jackson School at Mulhall will be the subject of a protest to be filed by the Parent-Teacher Association at the next meeting of the county board.

Mrs. Edith Rogers, president, announces the appointment of the following committee chairman: Child Welfare and publications, Mrs. Ruth Brown; refreshments, Mrs. D. W. Jones; hospitality, Mrs. Rolad Jones; membership, Mrs. Fenton Herrell; children's lunches, Mrs. Herrell; building and grounds, Mrs. O. E. Burton; historian, Mrs. Fred Kasslebaum; publicity, Mrs. A. Cartwright.

To Sponsor Bingo Party.

The Parent Teacher Association of the Cherrydale School will sponsor a benefit campfire supper and bingo party this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Inbody, 172 Ballston road, for the benefit of the library.

Supper will be from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock. Following supper bingo will be played indoors.

CCC Applications.

Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare in Arlington County, announces that she will receive applications for the CCC at her office at the courthouse next Monday morning. Young men between the ages of 18 and 25 may apply.

Peace Marks Strike Front

Troops Being Demobilized in Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP).—Comparative quiet was reported on the New England textile strike front today as Connecticut demobilized more National Guardsmen and Gov. Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island, center of rioting last week, announced that the number of guardsmen in that State was being reduced.

Maine, disrupted by violence yesterday, was peaceful as 800 guardsmen patrolled seven textile centers. Waterville, where police and strikers fought yesterday, was the scene of mass picketing outside the Lockwood Manufacturing Co. cotton mill, but guardsmen kept the crowd back.

Flying squadrons of picketers concentrated on New Hampshire during the day, visiting Gilsum, where 50 of them caused the closing of the Gilsum Woolen Co.

Woonsocket Mill Reopens.

The Woonsocket Rayon Co., in Woonsocket, R. I., employing 400 workers, reopened this morning without disorder. National Guardsmen and police patrolled the barricaded streets leading to the mill, where one person was killed and several were wounded in rioting last week.

The Sayles Finishing Co., in Saylesville, where the first victim of New England's strike rioting fell, continued paceful operation for the second day after reopening.

Gen. Daniel Needham, Massachusetts commissioner of public safety, said that "everything is quiet" in this State.

The Defiance Bleachery, of Norton, was granted a permanent injunction against the U. T. W. local union restraining members from interfering with the company's business and shipments.

Ernest M. Hood, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, said today that "cotton textile workers in New England are again to be made the goats of their union leaders."

Drunken Driving Jails 2 D. C. Men

Failed to Pay Fines in Capitol Heights Court.

Two Washington residents were given jail sentences yesterday in the Capitol Heights Police Court when they failed to produce fines for drunken driving and other charges.

Claude M. Shaw, 1220 Bladensburg road northeast, was given 15 days in the Marlboro jail in default of $105 fine, which included levy of $5 for having no registration card. He was given another five days for disorderly conduct.

Henry William Gettings, 704 F street northeast, was sentenced by Judge Waldo Burnside to 11 days in the jail in default of $101 for reckless driving and driving while drunk.

Teachers Meet At Frederick

State and County Heads to Make Addresses to Instructors.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Plans were completed today for an all-day meeting of public school teachers at the Parkway and East Church Street schools tomorrow. Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of education; Dr. William C. Bagley, professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City, and others well known in the field of education from out of the city will be the speakers.

Eugene W. Pruitt, superintendent of schools of Frederick County, with school superintendents of adjoining counties, members of the faculty of Hood College and former school instructors have been invited to attend. Following the opening session, which will begin at the Parkway School at 9:30 a. m., Dr. Bagley will make an address to high school teachers on their problems. Groups of elementary teachers will be addressed at the Church Street School by Miss Helen J. Woodley and Miss Drucilla Worthington, county school supervisors; Miss I. Jewett Simpson, assistant State superintendent of education, and Miss M. Theresa Wiedefeld, State supervisor of elementary schools. A meeting of the Frederick County High School Association will also be held at the Parkway School.

Dr. Cook and Mr. Pruitt will address the high school teachers at the Parkway School. Other speakers will include T. G. Pullen, Catonsville, Md., high school supervisor for the central Maryland territory, who succeeded the late William K. Klingaman, at one time principal of the Frederick High School. There are about 290 white school teachers in the county.

Mrs. Mary Day Dies in Florida

Member of D. C. Chapter of D. A. R. Had Served as Treasuory Clerk.

Mrs. Mary Shepherd Wright Day, former resident of Washington, died Wednesday after a brief illness at her home in St. Petersburg, Fla. She was the daughter of the late Rev. Thomas S. Wright, of Essex County, Va., and later of Holmes County, Miss., and of Mary ElizabethElizabeth Walton Wright.

After graduation at Richmond College, Richmond, Va., she taught school for many years in Mississippi, and later became a clerk in the First Auditor's Office Treasury Department, for several years. She was married to James Henry Day in 1883. Mr. Day died in 1913 and Mrs. Day will be buried beside him in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Day was a member of the First Baptist Church in Washington and also of the First Baptist Church in St. Petersburg, and a member of the District Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She is survived by her sisters, Mrs. Daniel W. Hopper, of Baltimore; Mrs. Lincoln Smith, of Chicago; Mrs. Charles Carnahan and Miss Eunice Wright, of Washington, and by two brothers, John B. Wright, of Jackson, Miss., and Harry S. Wright, of St. Petersburg.

League Police To Patrol Saar

German-Speaking Veterans to Preserve Peace in Plebiscite.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Saarbruecken, the Saar, Sept. 20. A tiny army of German-speaking war veterans—the League of Nation's first international police force—will be recruited to keep Nazis and anti-Nazis from clashing during the forthcoming Saar plebiscite.

Soldiers of fortune will be called by the league's commission now governing the Saar, to guarantee freedom at the polls January 13.

Residents of the Saar, rich industrial area, will vote that day whether to remain under league mandate, join France or reunite with Germany.

German citizens will be barred from the league's "shadow army" and Austrians, officials said, will not be favored.

Khaki uniforms trimmed in green with the letter 'S" on the caps are now being made and barracks built for the mobilization of this force of approximately 1,000.

Maryland Gives Promise of Aid To Roosevelt

Democratic Convention Nominates Ritchie for Fifth Term.

Baltimore, Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie was nominated the Democratic candidate for a fifth term as Governor of Maryland at the State Democratic convention here today.

Ritchie had captured 116 convention votes to 43 for Dr. Charles S. Conley, when the Frederick delegation moved that the election be made unanimous. The motion was seconded by the Wicomico County delegation and then unanimously adopted by the convention.

George L. Radcliffe was nominated as Democratic candidate for Senator; Herbert O'Connor was nominated for attorney general and W. J. Young, clerk of the court of appeals, was renominated.

Senator Millard J. Tydings was elected chairman of the convention. No action was taken on election of a successor to J. Enos Ray, who before his death was chairman of the Democratic State central committee for Maryland.

U. of M. Team Places in Test

Dairy Cattle Judging Unit Second in Contests at Springfield.

The University of Maryland dairy cattle judging team has been awarded second place at the intercollegiate judging contests at Springfield, Mass., it was announced yesterday at College Park.

First place in the contests, which were opened last Monday morning, has been given the team from Cornell University. The Maryland team was defeated by only four points, having amassed a total of 2,193 points to Cornell's 2,197.

Members of the Maryland team were John L. Hull, Union Bridge; Frederick C. Downey, Williamsport, and Daniel B. Johnson, Riverdale. All are students of the College of Agriculture of the State university. The team was coached by Prof. Leroy W. Ingham and Dr. DeVoe Meade, head of the dairy department.

As a team the Marylanders stood highest among the teams judging Jerseys, and Downey was high man in judging holsteins. In judging all breeds, Downey ranked third among the contestants and Johnson placed tenth.

Gold Lure Draws Hundreds to New Canadian 'Find'

Jellicoe, Ont., Sept. 20 (AP).—The magnet called gold today drew mining scouts, prospectors, geologists and all the rest of the colorful crew that makes up the traditional Canadian gold rush into this district.

A belt 56 miles long and 16 miles wide, the Sturgeon River area, saw the hunt for the magic metal reach feverish proportions, with nearly 240 square miles of land already staked out.

Since January 1 of this year 3,800 claims have been recorded. The mining recorder's staff at Port Arthur, increased three times, is issuing an average of 30 licenses per day and recorded 450 claims from September 1 to September 15.

H. C. Rickaby, provincial geologist, and Dr. E. L. Bruce have returned to Toronto after hurriedly surveying the Long Lac area for the Ontario Department of Mines. The two men used planes of the forestry department.

Hundreds of men set forth daily from this town, chief "jumping-off point" for the new field.

Way of Flesh!

So Goes Alexandria's Famous Dummy, New Hat and All.

Alexandria's famous dummy has bowed to the era of modernity, and disappeared—just after having received a felt hat for fall.

He sat for many years in a window of the former Express Spark Plug Co., plainly to be seen by passing motorists. The advance notice of autumn by the Weather Man caused his owner, John Loughlan, to replace his straw hat with a natty autumn one.

Where did he go?

Fact is, the abandoned factory is about to be renovated and made into a modern apartment house.

Hazen to Judge Hunter Show Near Norbeck

Judge Alexander Also to Pass on Entries of Redland Hunt.

Commissioner Hazen and Judge J. I. H. Alexander, of Leesburg, Va., will be judges at the yearly hunter show offered tomorrow by the Redland Hunt at N. O. Turpening's Rock Springs Farm, near Norbeck, Md.

Competition will be in 15 classes, and a final championship event will decide grand first and second winners, judged for conformation and suitability of type.

An outside hunt course will feature the Corinthian and Challenge Cup events.

Mrs. Ralph P. Counselman, Rockville; Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, Bethesda; Robert D. Hagner, Bethesda; Whitney B. Leary, of Washington; the Montgomery County Sentinel, Rockville; Harry Whitlock, Rockville; Stedman Prescott, Rockville; Thomas T. Mott, M. F. H., Bethesda; Mrs. C. D. Herron, Bethesda; H. G. New Dock War Holds 2 Liners

1,000 Union Men Picket Dollar Piers in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—Two hundred union seamen and longshoremen tied up two steamships here today when they struck in protest against the retention of nonunion sailors employed during the three-month maritime strike.

The walkout threatened to create a new issue in Federal mediation of issues involved in the strike, which was halted pending arbitration.

The vessels affected are the Dollar liners President Taft and President Wilson. Strikers on the President Taft, which was scheduled to sail at 5 p. m. for New York, said part of the crew was hired during the coastwise marine strike.

They demanded that the line discharge the men immediately, saying Dollar officials had promised to discharge the nonunion workers when the vessel returned to Los Angeles and New York, where they were hired.

One thousand longshoremen picketed the Dollar Line docks, refusing permission to trucks to enter or leave.

Gliders Tested Atop Mountain

Big Meadows, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—Assembly of two gliders and a test flight of one of them today marked the opening of ten days of activity here by the Soaring Society of America.

In succeeding days more than 100 members of the society are expected to come to this spot on top of the Blue Rridge for flights or for observation of the fine points of glider flying.

Mountain residents also made a holiday of the occasion and gathered in considerable numbers.

An east wind today prevented any real record trial flights, but this afternoon Donald Hamilton went into the air for a demonstration and test flight, flying with the wind in a direction opposite from that of the usual take-off.

Richard Chichester du Pont, holder of American records for distance and altitude, will arrive tomorrow morning by airplane from Wilmington, Del, and, if weather conditions are favorable, may try for a new record during the day.

"20-Cent" Painting Worth $50,000

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 20 (AP). A nondescript painting in the shop of a junk dealer appealed to Dr. George Gombosi, youthful art historian, and he bought it for 20 cents. Experts who removed the centuries-old surface of the picture today pronounced it a genuine Titian, worth about $50,000.

New Deal Law Fails to Offset Farm Eviction

Belongings of Maryland Man Put on Road as Suit Fails.

Baltimore, Sept. 20 (AP).—Within less than 24 hours after a Federal judge declared unconstitutional the New Deal mortgage moratorium by which Charles A. Compton hoped to save his Carroll County (Md.) farm, deputy sheriffs, armed with a writ of eviction, today dumped the 61-year-old farmer's furniture on the side of the road.

Shortly thereafter, attorneys for Compton announced they would appeal from the ruling of District Judge W. Calvin Chesnut that the five-year clause of the farm mortgage moratorium amendment to the bankruptcy act was unconstitutional in that it discriminated against mortgage holders in favor of bankrupt farmers.

The case, they said, would be carried to the Supreme Court if necessary.

Compton and his son were in Washington, conferring with attorneys, when the deputies forced their way into the empty house and removed the furniture.

Deputy Lee Crawmer, in charge, acted upon a writ of eviction secured by the Bernie Trust Co., of Taneytown, Md., which held the $7,400 mortgage on Compton's farm and bought the property at the foreclosure sale.

The officers said they were pressed to act on the writ as soon as Judge Chesnut denied the petition for stay.

"My God, what did they do with the 56 head of Government cattle I was feeding on the place," said Compton when he received news of the eviction.

Neighbors reached by telephone said the drought cattle were still there.

Yesterday Judge Chesnut made his ruling in connection with the jointly heard petitions of Compton and William W. Bradford, Belair farmer who sought stays of foreclosure under the Frazier-Lemke act. Judge Chesnut refused the Bradford petition on the grounds of unconstitutionality and the Compton case on the double grounds of unconstitutionality and the fact that the foreclosure sale had been ratified and a writ of eviction granted in the State courts.

Bradford's attorneys said today they would confer with Compton's attorneys to make arrangements as to the appeal. It was not stated whether the cases would be appealed together.

Three Up Today In Hijacking Case

Accused of Bladensburg Crime Last Month.

Three Washington men will appear today before United States Commissioner J. Frank Parran at Upper Marlboro on a charge of conspiracy. The men were arrested after an alleged hijacking attempt at Bladensburg August 26.

The accused are Oscar Downs, John L. Bailey and Anthony Faber. Three others also have been arrested, but no Federal warrants have been sworn.

Prince Georges County Constables Howard Slater and Warren Peake, called by Town Bailiff Lawrence Dayton, experienced a running gun battle before the arrests were made, they reported.

Retiring Postmaster Feted by Employes

Manassas, Va., (Spl.).—Robert Newman, who had been postmaster in Manassas for 12 years, was entertained at a surprise reception by postoffice employes tonight. Mr. Newman was presented with a chair.

His resignation took effect September 1, when Hawes Davies, jr., assumed the duties of temporary postmaster.

Reformatory Aid, Shot, Recovering

La Verne I. Dolph, 56, chief electrician of the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va., who shot himself in the head early yesterday in the garage of his home on the reservation, probably will recover, attending physicians at the Alexandria Hospital said last night.

Dolph, who is said to have been despondent because of overwork and ill health, used a .38-caliber pistol. The bullet glanced to one side and did not penetrate the brain.

Dolph is a veteran of the Spanish-American War.

Preparatory Schools Open in Waynesboro

Waynesboro, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Boys and girls from 40 States and several foreign countries arrived in Waynesboro yesterday and today for the opening of Fishburne Military School and Fairfax Hall School for Girls. The enrollment at the two preparatory schools is larger than any year since 1929, it was announced by officials.

Two faculty changes were announced yesterday at Fairfax Hall. Miss Emily Post, Princeton, N. J., has been appointed dean and Mrs. June Elson Kunkle, Columbus, Ohio, will head the voice department. Miss Post succeeds Miss Carrie Vaughn, who has assumed the deanship at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga.

County Agents to Meet At College Park Today

A Maryland State conference of home demonstration agents will be held today and tomorrow at College Park, Md. Conducted by the State home demonstration agent, Miss Venia Kellar, the gathering will formulate the year's program.

The State food specialist, Miss Margaret McPheeters, and the State clothing specialist, Miss Helen Shelby, as well as Miss Florence Mason, Eastern Shore district agent, will assist in the conference.

Democrat's Aid Will Address All-Day Fete

Mrs. June Fickel, of Iowa, on Women's Program at Upper Marlboro.

Mrs. June Fickel, of Iowa, assistant to the director of the women's division of the National Democratic committee, will be one of the principal speakers at the all-day meeting to be held Tuesday at the Upper Marlboro courthouse under auspices of the southern Maryland division of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Maryland.

The meeting will start at 10:30 a. m. with an address of welcome by State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer. A business session will follow, with reports by the following county directors: Mrs. Harry Nalley, Prince Georges; Mrs. G. Abram Moss, Anne Arundel; Mrs. Aubrey Gardiner, St. Marys, and Mrs. Elva S. Bohannon, Charles.

Gov. Ritchie will be the principal speaker of the afternoon session, which will also include talks by Miss Lavinia Engle, Montgomery County member of the House of Delegates; Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menafee, Democratic National committeewoman from Maryland; Miss Mary H. Duvall, of Baltimore, president of the United Women's Clubs; Mrs. Charles E. Roach, of Chevy Chase, past president of the United Women's Clubs, and Judge Joseph C. Mattingly.

Various candidates in the coming State and county elections will be introduced at a luncheon in Trinity Hall at 12:30 p. m. Mrs. Lansdale G. Sasscer is chairman of the luncheon committee. Mrs. Joseph C. Mattingly is chairman of the reception committee.

"Mix up more Martinis, Darling—"

—these people are simply devouring that Fleischmann's Gin"

A Martini should be stirred or mixed with a slow waltz-like motion—never shaken

It takes an American Gin to make this smooth American Cocktail

ONLY 10 months since Repeal—yet already Fleischmann's has become one of America's biggest selling gins—everywhere! Here's the reason! Fleischmann's Gin makes a smooth, delicious Martini—without the slightest trace of bite or sting.

The Dry Martini is America's No. 1 drink today! It is by far the most popular drink in restaurants, hotels and cocktail bars—in homes, too.

To make a smooth Martini requires a smooth American gin—like Fleischmann's. A gin specially distilled to blend with other liquors and fruit juices.

Fleischmann's is an American gin—distilled from American grains—by an American company that makes gin—and nothing else.

Buy a bottle for your next cocktail party. Mix up a shakerful of Martinis. You'll see why "it takes an American gin to make a smooth American cocktail."

The correct way to mix 3 Popular Gin Drinks

MARTINI (Use mixing glass.) A dash or two of Orange Bitters, two-thirds jigger Fleischmann's Gin, one-third jigger French Vermouth (Italian for a sweet Martini), a piece of lemon rind, ice. Stir in glass and serve with an olive in cocktail glass.

TOM COLLINS (Use Tom Collins glass.) Juice of one lemon, heaping teaspoon powdered sugar, jigger of Fleischmann's Gin, ice, fill balance of glass with club soda and stir.

PINK LADY (Use mixing glass.) Juice of one-half lime, equal amount of grenadine, tablespoon sweet cream, jigger of Fleischmann's Gin. Shake in cocktail shaker and strain and serve in cocktail glass.

with Capt. Warms. He told him that conditions in the radio room were unbearable and that the operator couldn't hold out much longer.

After several minutes, Alagna testified that Warms asked:

"Can you send a message?"

"That's what I'm here for," Alagna replied.

"Then send an S O S," the captain said.

Alagna said that by the time he started back to the radio room, flames were so high and smoke so dense that he passed the radio room and did not realize it until he was faced with a wall of flame.

After the S O S had been sent, Alagna and Rogers went back to the bridge, he testified, and there shortly after they saw Capt. Warms leap over the bridge rail to the fore deck.

"Look at the yellow rat leaving us here—deserting us," Alagna said he exclaimed to Rogers.

On direct questioning by Hoover, Alagna said that he still thought Capt. Warms had abandoned them, but admitted that in his bewilderment he might not have known what he was doing and been only going to the forepeak.

New Gold Rush Booms Old Town; Tents Spring Up

Cripple Creek, Colo. (AP).—On a reduced scale Cripple Creek looks somewhat as it must have appeared in the feverish months after a cowboy found gold nuggets in a grazing meadow near here half a century ago.

In Moffat gulch a new tent colony of gold seekers has mushroomed. Whole families live there, daily washing the sediment of mountain streams in the simplest search for the yellow metal. Some assert they have found pay dirt and are steadily enlarging their operations.

One settler, disdaining canvas, has erected a house of pine boughs in the stye of an Indian tepee.

W. S. Moore, Cripple Creek assayer, helps the prospectors market their gold by smelting their metallic sands into "buttons" and sending them to the mint at Denver.

Gold Coast Nations May Learn English by Radio

London (U.P.).—Wireless will be used to teach English to dusky young natives of the African Gold Coast.

Nana Sir Ofori Atta, the paramount chief of the Gold Coast, visited the great radio show at Olympia, and bought a seven-tube set for experimenting among the more advanced pupils in his country.

Sir Ofori is well known for his modern outlook in the matter of education. Nevertheless he clings to tradition in the matter of dress. He never appears without his gold crown, flowing robes, and large, fringed umbrella held over him.

Cat and Crow Great Pals In Massachusetts Home

Westfield, Mass. (U.P.).—A cat and crow are inseparable companions at the home of Clarence Axlerod.

A neighbor saw the crow in a cornfield and wounded it with a rifle. He took the crow home, nursed it and it recovered eventually from the wound. Later he gave it to Axlerod.

Now, the crow, named Pete, plays in friendly fashion with the Axlerod family cat, Teddy. They eat from the same dish. Pete has been taught to catch coins tossed into the air. The crow hides them as a dog would hide bones.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Jocko Grows as High as the Kitchen.

If ever a man earned his meals for a day, Jocko Monkey earned his yesterday. After playing his part at the pepper party over at Mr. Man's house, he had to go to Cool Spring and get that bag of things out of the wagon, so by the time he reached Blackie's house he was just about ready to call it a day. But it was fun! When he thought about the bold way in which the whole crowd of Creek Folks had picked out the things they wanted while Mrs. Man was looking at them it did seem like playing a pretty good joke. And when Who Who Owl told him about the way Rover Dog howled and turned around and went back home and dipped his head in a tub of water "to put out the fire," Jocko almost did some howling himself. Just plain laughing didn't seem enough to do.

Whippoorwill was over there when Mr. Man got home that night, and he heard and saw everything, and carried a lot more fun to Jocko when he told him how big he was. "As high as this kitchen," Mrs. Man had told Mr. Man, and it certainly did seem funny to Jocko when he thought about how awfully big he was. "Mrs. Man must have eyes like a horse," said Who-Who Owl. "You know, things look to a horse to be about ten times as big as they are. That's the reason a horse thinks a man can manage him. A man looks a lot bigger to a horse than a horse does to a man."

Anyway, while Jocko was gone to Cool Spring to get the bag out of Mr. Man's wagon, Blackie and Doctor Coon and the others fixed up a supper that was good enough to pay Jocko for doing two days' work in one. There was just one dish that would have been worth all the trouble, even if there had been nothing else. It was the "turnover." That bag of dried apples was the thing that Jocko had wanted most, and he grabbed it that morning before he got the pig. They certainly had a supper that was big enough and good enough to be called a party, but they were all satisfied to let it be called just a plain supper. But that was mighty good coffee that was in Mr. Man's bag, and the smoking tobacco, too, was better than the other. Mr. Man must have spent some more of his "donkey money" to buy better things than he used to get. The only unhappy thing about the supper was what Whippoorwill told them about the way Mrs. Man cried when she got through telling Mr. Man about it.

"Oh, well," said Blackie, "she isn't as bad off as Rover was, for she didn't have any red pepper in her eyes."

'The Forty Thieves' Music to Be Played

The United States Army Band will play the overture and dance music from "The Forty Thieves," recently presented by the Washington Summer Festival Association, tonight at 7:30 at the Capitol under the direction of Capt. William J. Stannard. The Washington Community Players, who appeared in the dramatized version of the production, will attend the concert.

Continued interest in the production may result in a special matinee for boys and girls to be held early in October, it was announced.

Accused Man Flees Gallinger Hospital

A missing Gallinger Hospital patient was sought by police last night. Awaiting trial on false representation charges, Harry F. Stinson, 22, formerly of Strasburg, Va., was transferred to the hospital from the District Jail. He disappeared early yesterday.

Stinson, police said, posed as a detective to "arrest" and make improper advances to a young girl. He was taken ill at the jail and sent to Gallinger.

Inquest Called For Tonight in Slaying of Two

Man Who Found Bodies of Mother and Son Is Summoned.

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Lulu Pyles, 20, and her 2-year-old son, Vernon, will be held tonight at the Tuxedo (Md.) Firehouse by Acting Coroner Henry O'Neill, of Bladensburg.

Ernest Loor, 28, who last September 7 led police to a lonely hideout near a railroad track spur in Tuxedo where the two were found shot, is expected to attend the inquest. He has been in Casualty Hospital recovering from a gunshot wound in the hip.

O'Neill and Prince Georges County Policeman Arthur Brown, investigating the case, declared it has been impossible so far to tell by whom the shooting was done.

According to Loor's story, he had met Mrs. Pyles for several nights prior to the shooting. On the night of the tragedy the woman, at mention of her suitor's wife, suddenly drew a gun and started shooting, Loor said.

The gun, police said, belonged to David Dudley, of Tuxedo, at whose home, Mrs. Pyles had been staying. Loor gave it to authorities after he stumbled into a nearby filling station and asked that police be called.

Culbertson on Bridge

Masking Batteries.

There are any number of ways in which the Declarer, being faced with a hopelessly lost contract, may cause his opponents to present him with an extra trick or two which he could not develop by straightforward play. In order to pull the wool over the eyes of his adversaries he usually adopts an unsound line of play. The defending team, thinking of course that he is playing his cards according to conventional methods, receive an altogether erroneous impression of what cards he must hold in his hand, and this may tempt them to make an incorrect lead or play.

For many years bridge players, when playing a notrump contract, have attempted to conceal their weakness in a suit in which they hold no stopper by immediately playing that suit. If, for example, Declarer holds J x x and Dummy 10 x x, Declarer leads that suit to convince his opponents that he is trying to establish it. The opponents may as a result be afraid to play the suit themselves for fear that they will further Declarer's cause.

Declarer may also lead a suit in which he has a single stopper, giving up that stopper and leaving himself totally unprotected. Unfortunately, this method (which is merely refinement of the course of deceptive play described in the preceding paragraph) is so obvious that it is too deep even for some of the most clever players to think of.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1◇	1♠	Pass	Pass
1NT	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's bidding was somewhat optimistic; the contract for nine tricks, after his partner had been unable to raise him on the first round, was very dangerous. Fortunately for bridge literature, however, it gave him an opportunity to make a superb psychological play.

West opened the spade King and South took the Ace right away; to hold up would cost him a trick if West continued with a low spade. It was now obvious that there was hardly any chance for the contract, since two finesses must be taken in diamonds and one in hearts. This would require three entries to Dummy, whereas only two were available. West surely had two spade tricks, and one club lead would establish at least three club tricks for the adversaries, in addition to the diamond which South must be prepared to give them. There was a glimmer of hope, however; if the adversaries could be persuaded either to lead a heart, or to establish a spade trick in Dummy after winning their first diamond trick, then the contract would be made. A lead to the King of hearts would assuredly discourage them from leading that suit, however; so South immediately and with a great air of assurance played the club 5, took Dummy's club Ace, and led a diamond. East played low and the Jack was finessed to West's King.

West could not lead spades, since that would set up Dummy's Ten; and he was afraid to lead clubs because it did not occur to him that South might so boldly have given up his only stopper. So West shifted to hearts right into South's A J, and the nine tricks were automatically developed. South won with the Jack of hearts, went over to Dummy's King and took another diamond finesse, and then ran down his diamond suit and his Ace of hearts. A club lead by West would have defeated the contract two tricks.

East might have dropped a hint to his partner by playing the club 6 when North took the Ace, but he did not want to reveal to South (whom he, of course, thought to have the King and Ten) that he had the Q J. Anyway, the club 6 might not have meant a great deal to West, since the five, three and deuce were showing and it was quite possible that South had the four, in which case East's six would be his lowest and convey no signal.

Colonel, on Tour, Fails to Hear of Kidnaping Arrest

Los Angeles, Sept. 20 (AP).—Jack L. Maddux, air transport executive and host of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, said today that as far as he knew shortly before 1 o'clock Col. Lindbergh had no information about the arrest made in New York in connection with the kidnap ransom money.

Lindbergh, who arrived earlier this week with his wife, was on a tour of inspection of aviation activities today. Maddux, upon being informed of the arrest in New York, sought to reach the colonel by telephone, but was unsuccessful.

Whether the Lindberghs would leave for the East when informed of the developments was not known by their host.

If you feel low—

don't gamble

Life insurance companies tell us that the gradual breakdown of the human body causes more deaths every year than disease germs

1 If your physical let-down is evidenced by lack of appetite... loss of weight... nervousness... sleeplessness... paleness... a tired feeling or lassitude caused by a lowered red-blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin content in the blood—then S.S.S. is waiting to help you... though, if you suspect an organic trouble, you will, of course, want to consult a physician or surgeon.

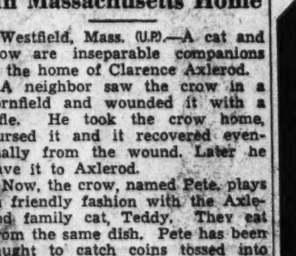
Make S.S.S your health safeguard and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... and renewed strength.

2 Take a course of S.S.S. Remember, your present run-down condition may have been a slow, gradual process. Likewise, a reasonable time is required to rebuild full strength. S.S.S. is not a miracle worker—no rebuilding tonic is—but it is a scientifically proven and time-tested medicine. This is your guarantee of satisfaction. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring.

3 Moreover, S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic. It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood. This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

If your condition suggests a tonic... if you feel low... get a bottle of S.S.S.... take an appetizing portion just before meals. You will find it is truly a blood and body tonic. You should feel and look years younger with life giving and purifying blood surging through your body. You owe this to yourself and friends.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today. S.S.S. is really an inexpensive way to better health and more happiness. So many have said— "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again"



Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest that you gamble with substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

Two Nuptials Recorded in D. C. Society

Miss Margaret G. Winn Is Married to Mr. Land.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Yesterday two more autumn weddings took place. At high noon Saint Matthew's Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Eulalie de Lassus Mehlhop, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Warren Mehlhop, to Mr. Henry Spencer Powell, son of Mrs. Henry S. Powell.

The church was decorated with white asters and white gladioli arranged against screens of palms. Father Edward L. Buckey performed the ceremony. The bride was escorted by her uncle, Mr. Frederick W. Mehlhop. She was wearing a becoming gown of eggshell chiffon velvet made on severely simple lines, with a high neck and long fitted sleeves. With this she wore a large hat of brown velvet and brown slippers and carried a bouquet of cream and brown gladioli.

Mr. Guy T. Scott served as best man and the ushers were Mr. Peter Grogan and Mr. Edward S. Northrop.

Informal Reception Held.

Following the ceremony there was a small informal reception at the home of the bridegroom's mother on Cathedral avenue. The drawing rooms were decorated with clusters of white blossoms.

Later Mr. Powell and his bride left on their wedding trip; the latter was wearing a tailored frock of henna wool crepe, with brown hat and accessories. Upon their return from Bermuda they will make their home at 3034 P street.

At an informal wedding yesterday morning Miss Margaret Goode Winn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Arthur Winn, became the bride of Mr. Robert Clayton Land, son of Mrs. Lila Wyche Land, of Emporia, Va. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents by Dr. John B. Winn, uncle of the bride, in the presence of members of the families and intimate friends.

Attended by Sister.

The bride wore a smart traveling suit of navy blue and had a blue hat and matching accessories. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Madeline Winn, who was attired in wine-colored satin trimmed in cream satin.

Mr. Wyche Land served his brother as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a breakfast after which Mr. Land and his bride left on a motor trip through the North. After October 10 they will be at home at Emporia, Va.

Among the out-of-town guests were Miss Lila Lee Land, Mr. Gene Vincent, of Emporia; Mr. and Mrs. Homer Cline, of Warrenton, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whaley, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Winn, of Petersburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Jenkins, of Burkeville, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Ralph Eubank, of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. C. D. Gaver, of Danville, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Guerrant, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Students of A. U. Guests of Honor

Are to Be Presented to Liberal Arts Faculty.

The student body of the college of liberal arts of the American University will be the guests of honor at a reception in the Women's Residence Hall parlors on the campus this evening, at which time the faculty will greet them.

Mr. Scott Crampton, president of the student council, and Miss Emily Coleman, president of the Women's Self Government Association, will introduce the students to Chancellor and Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray, Dean and Mrs. George B. Woods and Dean Mary Louise Brown. The assisting hostesses will be Mrs. Will Hutchins, Mrs. D. O. Kinsman, Mrs. A. E. Zucker, Mrs. Walter Shenton, Mrs. Pauline Olds, Miss Ruberta M. Olds, Miss Sara Dow, Miss Georgianna Ferguson, Miss Cornelia Cotton and Mrs. Wesley M. Gewehr.

In the dining room, at the table, these ladies will preside: Mrs. Charles C. Tansill, Mrs. John E. Bentley, Dr. Jessie M. Ferguson and Miss Mary M. Galt. They will be assisted by Mrs. Sarah Sumner, Mrs. Walter Young, Mrs. Herbert Walter, Mrs. Lowell Huelster, Mrs. William B. Holton, Mrs Glenn House, Mrs. Arthur Jackson, Mrs. Edward Engel, Mrs. Raymond Baeth, Misses Irma Zink, Ethel Myers, Sara Ann Stover and Louise A. Morse.

Klaths Will Make Home In Capital for Winter

The former United States Commercial Attache at Stockholm and Mrs. T. O. Klath have come to Washington to make their home for the winter and are occupying the house of Mrs. Joseph Maxwell at 2338 Windon place, North Cleveland Park.

Capt. and Mrs. Hickey At Home in Capital.

Capt. and Mrs. Andrew S. Hickey are now at home at the Hay-Adams House. Mrs. Hickey has recently returned to this country after spending two years in Rome as the guest of her mother, Mrs. Joseph Crawford. Capt. Hickey is on duty at the Naval Observatory.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Perfier, of Cleveland, Ohio, are spending a few days at the Shoreham before going to White Sulphur Springs.

On Wedding Trip to Bermuda

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

MRS. HENRY SPENCER POWELL,

HE'S THE CLEVEREST CRIMINAL EVER CREATED!
THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES
A trusted friend turns into a cruel, conscienceless criminal . . . gruesome murders appear as suicides . . . huge sums of money vanish into thin air . . . as a "man without nerves" puts the finishing touches to his amazing, breath-taking scheme! Again and again he strikes—this fiend who kills his fellow man as coolly as he would swat a fly . . . and with as little feeling.

A Distinguished Novelist Sandwiches Writing Between Domestic Activities

Sees About Menus and Laundry Before Attending to Plots.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE interviewer and the man to repair the garden fence arrived at Grace Zaring Stone's house in Georgetown at the same time.

And while the distinguished novelist, author of "The Cold Journey," just published, gave instructions to the man about the fence, the interviewer waited for her in the attractively furnished living room. So even this woman, recently acclaimed by a critic as "the most distinguished of the younger American women writers" had to devote some time to the ordinary things that occupy the ordinary housewife.

A few moments later, Mrs. Stone was relating how she has combined a career with the normal existence of a naval officer's wife, and had made them both jell.

"A married woman," she explained, "must write with one hand and manage a house with the other" putting aside her make-believe world and her manuscripts any time social and domestic duties beckon her back to the business of everyday living.

Those Domestic Interruptions.

"When I begin writing in the morning, for instance, I know I may be interrupted any time by the maid asking about the menu for dinner, the laundry, or to order for the next day. Not that I mind so much, but that's not exactly conducive to turning out a set amount of work day by day.

"Men writers don't have that difficulty, even when they happen to be married," she went on. "They go about authorship as they would about any other business, working a certain number of hours each day. But I can't do that, and I don't try.

"Soon after I began writing I found I couldn't have regular working hours. And there have been times," she added, her eyes twinkling, "when I've wished I could retire to a secluded attic in Paris to lead the proverbial writer's existence—drinking coffee and writing all night by the guttering glow of a candle, and having a whole chapter finished each morning by dawn.

"But instead of that, I've spent most of my time working almost everywhere except in a Paris attic—in a hotel in Sicily, in a room in China, in a house in New England, in Canada, in Mexico."

West Indies Started.

As the wife of Commander Ellis Stone, U. S. N., she has lived almost all over the world, and her varied habitations and contacts have proved most stimulating to her career.

"Perhaps if I hadn't lived in the West Indies I would never have begun writing," she said. "And if we hadn't gone from there to China, I might never have finished the stories I began in the West Indies."

The interviewer sought to learn how and why Mrs. Stone first began to write.

"I can't remember when I didn't want to be a novelist," she said. "But I was beginning to feel I'd never find time to get down to it when we moved to the West Indies. There I had plenty of servants, plenty of time and plenty of things to write about."

Stories begun there and completed in China, she said, were sent back to the United States, and some were eventually accepted by the editor of one of the leading "quality" magazines.

"Then a book publisher saw some of those stories and gave me a contract for three novels. I've been writing ever since."

But the "ever since" is not so long. A matter, in fact, of only about eight years. A surprisingly short time, it would seem, for one to write a number of short stories and five novels and to become so firmly established in the literary world.

Ideas Came from Trip.

The conversation turned to Mrs. Stone's latest novel, "The Cold Journey." How did she get the idea for such an unusual book? How did she decide on the setting, which shifts from a frontier village in New England to a frontier fortress above the St. Lawrence?

"For a long time," she said, "I had no idea where the story would be set. Concerned only with the characters, I felt they were universal enough to fit into almost any setting. Then, while I was letting the story work in my mind, we took a trip through New England and into Quebec. I decided both of those settings would be ideal for my characters. I don't believe, however, the interest of the novel depends very much on either the setting or the plot, but rather on the characters."

Were any of the characters in "The Cold Journey" prototypes of persons she knew?

"No. Each character is, rather, a composite representation of a number of persons," she said. "I think the same is true of characters in almost any novel."

"The most distinguished of younger American women writers." A widely known critic recently said this of Grace Zaring Stone, whose fifth novel, "The Cold Journey," has just been published.

A London Grape Vine Surprises by Producing

For the first time in many years, says The London Daily Telegraph, the old grape vine in the little garden of the Girdlers' Company, in Basinghall street, has yielded a few bunches of grapes. Here, too, is an old mulberry tree which escaped the great fire. It continues to produce a good crop, although the state of the tree is such that it is dangerous to pick the fruit. So it is allowed to drop. A fig tree in the same garden produces a great deal of foliage, but no fruit.

Mulberry trees abound in the city, and they are producing much fruit, but the pigeons eat most of it and little is gathered.

Moderns Look Back.

Many of the new fashions date from the 1890 and 1900 periods, showing clearly the desire of women to be feminine in their return to these periods of richness and femininity in fashion.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: How can a girl convince a man she is telling the truth? For some unknown reason the men I go with doubt my word. I didn't care so much until recently. Then I started going with a young man whom I sincerely like, yet he does not think so.

* * * *

When he asked me if I liked him I admitted that I did, but he still doubts me. There are other things he has asked and I have answered truthfully, yet he refuses to believe.

It seems that all my answers are taken for "line." I kid and joke, but I am serious at times also.

* * * *

Will you please tell me what to do to convince men I can tell the truth? It is only the men who seem to doubt me. PUZZLED.

Try Silence.

DEAR PUZZLED: Of course you have heard the proverb: "Actions speak louder than words." And it may be your actions contradict your words, thus keeping your men friends eternally guessing at just what you really mean and feel.

* * * *

There is wisdom, also, in the couplet: "The truth itself is not believed, in one who often has deceived." It is possible you have gained a reputation, deserved or not, of being a flirt; of lightly assuring your every beau you like him a lot.

Men are prone to compare notes with each other concerning their impressions of girls who interest them. If they find one who has given several men approximately the same assurances regarding her feeling for them, they are apt to discount her remarks thereafter.

* * * *

While men accomplished in the social graces may feel it their chivalrous obligation to pay duplicate court to every charming girl who crosses their path, they seldom appreciate similar tactics on the part of women. Rather, they prefer to think a woman's interest in them is something very special and different.

On the other hand, it could very well be that this man, in professing to disbelieve your admission of affection, is taking refuge behind a "line" of his own.

* * * *

At the risk of sounding ironic, which I do not mean to be, I would say one effective method of convincing men you are telling the truth would be to tell them nothing. Evade their questions. Keep you own counsel. After all, until they have declared themselves, they are definitely not entitled to know what you are thinking or feeling.

Let them read into your silences or your noncommittal sentences whatever they choose. They will probably rationalize either offering into something affirmative, flattering and consoling.

It is not improbable you have been somewhat too fluent to be wholly convincing, in stating your likes and dislikes. No doubt you know, if you have ever experienced deep emotion, how very difficult, how almost impossible, it is to express it in words. It is then that actions and the involuntary betrayal of the eyes speak far more eloquently than words. And since every intelligent adult possesses this knowledge born of experience, it is not surprising that easy words should fall on heedless ears.

M. H.

A Stiff Spine Indicates Age Creeping Up

Keep Yours Limber With Exercise; Youth Will Stay Longer.

By Frances Mangum.

ONE OF the first signs of age is a stiff spine. Stiffness creeps up on a person who does not keep limbered by exercise. Before she knows it, her gait is slowed down and her movements are awkward and restrained. She lacks spring, and she moves her feet as though they were leaden weights. Frequently her shoulders sag in unbecoming roundness. Her general appearance undergoes a change for the worse.

A stiff spine is not a necesary affliction. It can be easily and permanently avoided by exercise of a scientific kind consistently taken.

Walking Is Efficacious.

Now exercise does not mean intensive gymnastics. There are hundreds of exercises adapted to women, old and young, lithe and supple. And there is always walking—one of the best exercises for anything and everything.

By walking two or three miles every day a woman can keep herself lithe and in excellent trim. But when she starts out for her walk she must really walk, not amble. She should throw out her chest, hold her shoulders back and her head up. The muscles in her body will respond quickly. Almost before she knows it she's feeling better and looking younger, with no suggestion of stiffness in her movements.

Spine Controls the Person.

A stiff spine is not a necessary tioning of the vital organs, of the nervous, circulatory and muscular systems. Almost every cell, hair, nail and pore of the entire body is affected. Consequently, it stands to reason that a spine kept flexible means a clearer skin and a clearer brain, grace and health.

An effective exercise for limbering up is: At night and in the morning stand with the feet a few inches apart and clutch the floor with the soles of your feet. Lean over, letting the head and arms hang limp, fingers touching the floor as nearly as possible. Now try to undulate the spine so every vertebra feels the motion. Sway right, left, front, and repeat. This swaying done to music in a certain rhythm is easier and more pleasant.

Skirts and Blouses Seldom Same Color

One of the most attractive for young girls has a skirt of dark blue velvet, with a jacket-like top of taffeta lame in a gingham pattern.

Another interesting model has a skirt of black silk crepe, topped by a hip length jumper decorated with jet sequins and cut with a sailor collar at front and a V decolette at back. The sequins are pointed in shape, save for those on the belt and border which are round.

Little Woman's Raincoat.

Katherine Hepburn has a reversible raincoat in tweed and gabardine. Cut in a modified Balmacaan style, it has a line checked tweed on one side and tan gabardine on the other.

PILLAR to POST

DROPPING the handkerchief is an old game that will be played in a new way on September 25, the day of the dance to be given at the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Miss Margaret Richardson from Raleigh, N. C., who recently won a State-wide beauty contest.

"Miss North Carolina" will ride about the city in a canary-colored car and will drop her handkerchief 12 times. The retrievers will be rewarded with tickets to the dance. "Miss North Carolina" is a tall, dark beauty who tied with a girl from Rockland in the contest which was decided only after the two girls donned bathing suits.

* * * *

This new beauty queen with the superb figure will be escorted to the dance by Sam Caldwell, designated recently as Washington's "most outstanding North Carolina boy." He is tall, well built, and attractive, so will compliment the willowy brunette. Former Gov. Angus McLean will introduce the pair at the dance.

Golf for Warriors.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Harold Fawcus, K. C. B., C. M. G., D. S. O., who recently stopped in Washington on his way from London to Tokyo as head of the British delegation to the International Red Cross conference, thought up a new way for ending wars while playing golf at the Burning Tree Club as the guest of Judge John Barton Payne. His plan is simple; just get all the leading contenders upon a golf course together and mutual understanding would be bound to result.

Fish Prophet.

"Commodore" Harold Phillips has been given another chance to make good on his boast that he can pick the day when the fish are biting down at Solomons Island.

* * * *

The Harold Braymans, the Eddie Lewises, the Herbert Plummers and the Warren Francises swallowed the bait held out by the self-styled great fisherman, Phillips—namely, that he had caught 92 fish in one day down there and that he could pick the day when they could do likewise. Each man and wife had visions of catching 92 fish apiece and permitted Harold to pick this piscatorial heyday.

* * * *

He chose last Sunday, fine for fish but hardly for humans. Despite the equinoctial storm the four brave couples set out in a 45-foot launch. Nothing happened except that five became violently seasick. Oh, yes, Katie Lewis caught three small croakers.

* * * *

Champion's Baby.

Edwin J. Vare, jr., two months old, doesn't give a hang about his mother's (Glenna Collett) golfing form, or her figure either. Suppose she does moan about her gain of 20 pounds which is all she has to show for the loss of a little of her old time cunning at golf.

* * * *

Saying such a thing is belittlin'. After all hasn't she got him? He likes her just as much as she is. What more does she want? It's a lot of nonsense, this business of naming only orange juice for breakfast, and then going out to practice some of those shots that made her famous. Being a champion five times ought to be enough for any woman.

And those two days she just spent here with that General's wife, Mrs. F. R. Keefer, seemed like they never would end. Now that she's with him again in Philadelphia she threatens to go back next week to attend the championship matches at some old club called Chevy Chase. What a world!

Petite Mlle. Benoit Studies Revival of American Banking

Resembling a Vivacious French Doll, She Bears a Lengthy List of Degrees; Says Her Countrywomen Are Becoming Economics-Conscious.

FROM Paris, bearing news of the French woman's rapidly growing interest in economic and social problems, comes Mlle. Simonne Benoit, who is in the United States studying the reorganization of the American banks, following the bank holiday.

Little and brunette is Mlle. Benoit, and as pretty as the loveliest French doll any little girl ever yearned for. Her vivacity charms while her intellect compels admiration. She bears her long list of degrees lightly, but gray-bearded professors listen respectfully to her views on economics.

Mlle. Benoit is docteur des lettres de l'Universite de Paris, diplome de Ecole des Sciences Politiques, and her present study is being made for the Department of National Education of France.

She made her first visit to America two years ago, when she made a study of the history of the American tariff and its effect on the economic crisis, and the levy of prices. She has written a book on this subject, which will be published within the next six months.

"No woman had ever attended the School of Political Science in Paris before 1915," said Mlle. Benoit in her room at the Dodge Hotel yesterday. "It was that year the first woman attended school. She was not a French woman. I do not know what country she was from. Today 250 women every year go to that school.

"When they graduate they are lawyers, or work in banks or libraries, or do administrative work in the government. But there are no women judges. I think it just as likely there will be soon a woman President of the United States as a woman judge in France. But many women teach political science in the universities in France. There are three ladies now teaching law in French universities."

The average housewife in France is interested in economics only as her husband's salary is affected, Mlle. Benoit admits.

"But they are becoming more interested," she said, "although today there are two men to every woman in our universities, more and more women are taking up serious studies."

Mlle. Benoit will be in Washington a week, and then will return to New York to continue her studies at the National Bureau of Economics.

"Then I return to France to make my report," she said. "The people of France are eager to know the new things that are being done in this country."

Man Loses to Bear In Climbing Contest

Prince Rupert, B. C., Sept. 20. When it comes to tree climbing cubs have it all over human beings, as George Olson, Skidgate, B. C., knows, reports the Canadian Press. For Mr. Olson matched his tree-climbing ability against that of a bear cub and lost the decision. He is in a hospital here suffering from a fractured leg and other injuries.

Olson shot and wounded the cub, then pursued it after he had run out of ammunition. He followed the bear up a tree, and attempted to club it from its perch. He failed and fell. The cub got away.

Wood Carver Seen in Action In Washington

A CRAFT that is widely known but seldom seen in action is wood-carving. This week, in the window of the Biggs Furniture Co., a man, his eyes covered with a green shade, transforms a slab of mahogany into scrolls and shells; intricate lines of beauty grow beneath his skillful hands.

Dan Arluck learned his trade in Leningrad. He doesn't remember how he became interested in wood-carving—"perhaps I whittled a stick with a knife, and my parents saw and said, 'He'll be a carver.'" Perhaps someone spoke to him of a master carver under whom he could serve an apprenticeship.

"I was an apprentice for four or five years," he says. "Some trades can be learned in a shorter time, but wood-carving takes years, even a life time, and still there is much to learn. Too, there are men who are artists in the work. I remember one——"

Flowers for the Czar.

There was an order from the Czar for an ornamental post decorated with "flowers all around." St. Petersburg was searched, an artist must be found. Finally from another city the carver came, and with his sensitive hands and finely-made tools he carved flowers for the Czar.

"As for myself, I have carved all my life, and I know how much I must learn. I am a good carver, yes; I make a good living, but I am not an artist."

"Most carvers today are from the old country. They are French, Italian or Russian—I am Russian. Americans do not carve.

No Carvers Here.

"I don't think there is a carver in Washington today. In New York, Philadelphia and other big cities there are many and there is a demand for their work. It is strange that so many people have never seen a man carve. Most people think it is done with kitchen knives!" He laughed.

His own tools number about 200. There are many sizes, shapes and types. Those tools are exactly like the ones used hundreds of years ago. Modernization has not changed them. Mr. Arluck explains, "they were different, they wouldn cut!"

Tuesday he was working on headboard of a bed, an order fro a Washington customer. Each curv must be smoothly finished, ea scroll turned just so. "It shou take me about three days."

He works eight hours a da standing. He says he couldn carve sitting down. Once sneezed while he was shavi brown curls on the wood. T wood dust perhaps?

"No, just a plain Washingt cold. It is better today."

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. Are such expressions as any place and every place correct?

2. "Please tell me the difference between the use of may and can." M. R.

3. What is an epergne and how is it pronounced?

4. Define the italicized word in this sentence from a popular contemporary novel: "Having been away to college, Julie returned home to find many things annoying, particularly the patois of her native village."

5. What is the difference between contemptible and contemptuous?

Answers Here.

1. No. Anywhere and everywhere are the correct words to use.

2. Can denotes ability, physical or mental. May is used to denote permission, possibility or probability. Thus one says correctly, "I can carry the load," or "I can finish the task;" but "May I go?" And "I may go if it can be arranged," and "I may be there, but don't expect me."

3. An epergne (ee-PURN or ay-Purn) is an ornamental stand with a dish and branches for holding flowers.

4. Patois means provincial dialect. It is called pa-TWAH. The first "a" is short. The last syllable rhymes with the interjection, "ah."

5. Contemptible means "deserving contempt." Contemptuous is "showing contempt." Thus, a scoundrel is contemptible and many persons have a contemptuous attitude toward him.

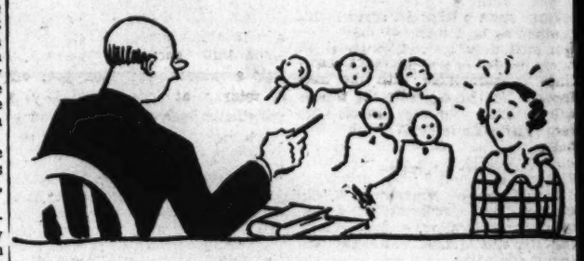
"Miss Jones, what was the effect of the Maine Election on the Fall political trends?"



Poor Mary Jones! She doesn't even know Maine had an election, nor is she sure that politics have trends. And the professor's question goes unanswered.

For Mary, in her rush to leave Washington for old Collegetown, forgot all about having The Washington Post sent to her each day by mail. And without The Post each morning, how is a girl to know about such things as elections . . . and the latest gyrations of the NRA . . . and what's going on in Hollywood . . . and if Rudy Crooner ever got his divorce?

The little coupon below will solve her problem. Mary should fill it in and mail it to The Post . . . or just telephone NAtional 4200. And The Washington Post will come to her each day.

Dogs Groomed And Handsome For This Week

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF THE pet poodles, big Danes, and all other dogs in town have looked particularly sleek and well groomed this week, there's a reason why. Canine fanciers have declared this to be National Dog Week and are urging more combing and brushing with an extra biscuit for compensation.

Some of the stores, in recognition of the occasion, have devoted showcases to dog displays, featuring a variety of harnesses, rubber bones, little sweaters, and an assortment of dog regalia. One new dog toy has gone over unusually well. This is a hard rubber ball inclosed in leather straps to which two plaited leather thongs are fastened. It rolls and it floats and cuts a number of capers the better to please a playful pup. It is especially useful in teaching a dog to "run and fetch."

Rivaling this in popularity is a dog dry cleanser. It's a powder that should be sprinkled over the animal from his nose to his tail and allowed to remain on for about an hour. When it's brushed off, all the dirt comes with it. Those who keep dogs in an apartment will be gratified to find the powder annihilates that doggy odor.

Plants Forecast Weather.

Rain or shine is accurately forecast by the barometer plant. This is a queer little artificial flower resembling a real forget-me-not. When it indicates dry weather the petals are a lovely deep blue. To prophesy rain and dampness they change to a vivid pink.

It's fun to keep one on the table by the window and check its forecasts by the weather man's reports and the actual turn of the weather. According to the manager of the store which sells them, they never make a mistake. She says she seldom makes an engagement for the next day without first consulting her barometer plant.

Never Too Thin.

Frequently a slender young lady will remark, "Why should I wear a girdle? Heaven knows I'm thin enough as is!" And then she wonders why her new evening dress doesn't look as smart as she expected.

The truth is this: Many thin women have hips or tummies out of proportion to the rest of their bodies. Just a little holding in is all that's needed to give perfect streamlines to harmonize with the new frocks. The ideal girdle for this is a light little, two-way stretch Lastex, drastically reduced for the time being.

Candle Snuffer.

Quaint early American candle snuffers have long, silver plated handles mounted with John Alden and Priscilla heads. Or there are some which have queer looking old-time silver jugs to do the snuffing. These do the work while the person sits across the table. Blowing spatters the wax against the wall or over the floor. The snuffers put out the flame quickly and safely. Besides, they're quite ornamental.

Collegiate Lamps.

The college student will find the small lamp which clamps on the edge of her book a marvelous saving on her eyes. It is shaded from above with a small, bell-shaped shade which directs the light down on the print. It may be fastened on the back of the book so it doesn't interfere with the turning of the pages.

It has a marvelous advantage inasmuch as it allows one roommate to read with good light and yet does not keep her partner awake.

The lamps sell for 98 cents, and they're well worth it!

Ahead of Time.

Here's notice ahead of time. Tomorrow a certain cosmetician sponsors a special sale of her powder and cleansing cream, both for the price of one.

Her powder is a blend of no less than 14 colors, and for that reason suits any type of skin. It seems to take on the natural skin tone, while imparting its own soft shade.

The cleansing cream is ultra liquefying. From the moment it is applied it melts into a soft soothing lotion-like substance that is particularly efficacious.

This sale only holds good for tomorrow.

Not Loud but Alive.

Men who want originality in their ties will find it if they stop by an F street gift shop and ask to see the new cravats. These are made of a fine silk and hand-dyed in interesting marble designs. The background color gives way to intricate streaks and curly-cues on a lighter shade. There is nothing loud about them, but they are quite alive.

Necessary Annoyance.

Alarm clocks may not be pleasant to have around, but for those who must rise at an early hour they're a downright necessity. That awful sinking feeling that comes from oversleeping! If it takes an alarm clock to ward it off, alarm clock it must be!

A local store is selling these little mechanical chanticleers for $1 a piece. They come in colored cases with large square faces, on which the numerals are printed boldly.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

GUEST dinners need not be a problem nor an expensive venture. If the meat course is chosen with care and prepared with caution, the rest of the dinner will slip along gracefully.

Mint Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb.

1 lamb shoulder (boned)
2 cups dry bread
¾ cup butter
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon chopped mint leaves
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning

Have the lamb shoulder boned at the market.

Make a stuffing of the dry bread broken into small pieces and mixed with the seasonings and just enough boiling water to moisten slightly. Stuff the shoulder and sew or skewer it together at the opening. Bake uncovered for 30 minutes at a temperature of 500° F., then cover and reduce the oven temperature to 300° F. Roast 30 minutes to the pound.

Chicken a la King.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups evaporated milk
½ cup water
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
Dash of paprika
1 cup diced mushrooms
1 chopped green pepper
1 pimento cut in narrow strips
2 cups diced cooked chicken
2 egg yolks

Make a cream sauce of the butter, flour, evaporated milk, water, salt, pepper and paprika. Add the mushrooms, green pepper, pimento and chicken. Cook over a low flame heated through. Then add the slightly beaten egg yolks and cook for a moment, stirring constantly. Serve immediately on a deep platter in patty shells or croustades. Garnish the platter with whole glazed carrots, tufts of parsley and rings of green pepper.

How to Keep Well

Tic Douloureux or Facial Neuralgia.

IN 1773 John Fothergill described a painful affliction of the face.

He related that he had seen 14 cases in the course of his practice and that he observed it was more common in women than in men. He says: "The pain comes suddenly and is excruciating; it lasts but a short time, perhaps a quarter or half a minute, and then goes off; it returns at irregular intervals, sometimes in half an hour, sometimes there are two or three repetitions in a minute."

Trigeminal (three twin) neuralgia, or tic douloureux, is one of the most common types of facial neuralgia. However, it is one of the most painful and difficult to treat. The pain is spasmodic in character and travels along the the course of one or more branches of the nerve. Periods between the paroxysms may be as short as a few seconds, although months may intervene. If the level of the general health of the patient is lowered from any cause the attacks tend to increase in frequency and in severity. In extreme cases the lightest touch or even an attempt to speak or chew may be sufficient to start an agonizing spasm. The patient attempts to learn what brings on the pain and does everything he can to avoid that stimulus.

In an attempt to relieve this most distressing condition every possible focus of infection has been investigated; teeth and tonsils have been removed, sinuses drained, and every effort made to eliminate infection. While such procedures have in some cases improved the general health and lessened the frequency of attacks, yet the disease has not been conquered.

The branch of the nerve most frequently affected is that which travels along the lower jaw. The middle branch, which supplies the upper jaw, is usually affected later, and the ophthalmic division, which supplies the area about the eye, is usually the last to become involved.

There are many neuralgias that must not be confused with tic douloureux. Inflammation of any sort along the course of a nerve will result in pain. These minor pains about the head—minor by comparison—are usually differentiated from tic douloureux by their steady rather than their paroxysmal character. There is another characteristic of tic douloureux which distinguishes it from other types of facial neuralgia—namely, the attacks usually cease at night. As a rule, once the patient gets to bed he has a good night's sleep. To this nocturnal cessation of pain there are exceptions.

Trichlorethylene has been used as an inhalant with some success. Cutting the branches of the trigeminal nerve as they emerge from the skull has been performed, but with only temporary relief. The nerve regenerates and the paroxysms recur.

Richet, a French writer, tells us that strolling mountebanks and itinerant surgeons occasionally cut for neuralgia, making an incision on the side of the face in front of the ear. The cut was no doubt made in an effort to sever one of the branches of the trigeminal nerve.

Concluding that further surgical attack upon a branch of the nerve was useless, William Rose, in 1890, removed the Gasserian ganglion. This is the structure in the brain from which the trigeminal nerve emerges. Improvements have been made in the surgical treatment of the ganglion, particularly by Hartley, until today operation is essentially safe in the hands of a highly trained expert. In practically every instance it is followed by complete relief of symptoms.

HUNDRED GRAND

By Erle Stanley Gardner

CARLTON Lanlic nodded. "Now then," he said "what do you suppose it was that Barclay Temple discovered?"

Roger Terry said slowly, "I think I know."

"It becomes somewhat important to find Oxeman," Lanlic said, "and I'm not so certain that the way you have it figured out Oxeman had enough motive for murder."

"Oxeman had a chance at one hundred thousand dollars," Terry said slowly, "You should know Oxeman better."

Lanlic frowned thoughtfully.

The pair were standing in front of police headquarters. The morning sun was tingeing the towers of the skyscrapers, filtering into the dark concrete canyon. A plain-clothes detective appeared in the doorway.

"You're wanted on the telephone, Mr. Lanlic," he said.

Lanlic excused himself and went back into the stuffy, stale air of headquarters. The plain-clothes man led the way to the desk. A telephone was on it with the receiver removed from the hook, standing on the desk.

Lanlic picked up the receiver, said "Hello," and heard Ellen Claire's voice in a swift rush of breathless speech.

Start Immediately.

"Chief, a man by the name of Sarcon telephoned and said that he was authorized to take you to the man you wanted to see. You are to get your car out of the garage and drive to the Green Mill. A man will meet you there and show you where to go."

"When am I supposed to start?" asked Lanlic.

"Right away," she said.

She gave an exclamation of delight. "Chief, you're a wonder."

"I'm glad you got me in on it," he told her, "it confirms a theory I had. I'll be on my way now. If anything breaks, telephone me at the Green Mill."

He hung up the telephone, rejoined Terry, and said, "I've got another case I've got to go out on."

The Government man looked at him thoughtfully.

"Will you tell me something before you leave?" he asked.

"What?"

"Why is it that since about midnight last night you've been packing an automatic in your right hand hip pocket?"

Must Go Alone.

Lanlic turned swiftly to the Government investigator, started to say something, then caught his breath and smiled.

"As I told you, Terry, I advise my clients to keep their own counsel. I think this once I'll follow my own advice."

"Can I," asked Terry, "go with you?"

Lanlic shook his head slowly. "No, Terry, you can't. It's a private matter. I've been nursing a rattlesnake through the cold night I'm the one that has to throw him out."

"Taking a cab?" Terry asked.

"No, I'm going over to the garage and pick up my own car."

"It'll take you some time to get to your garage," he said.

"I'm calling a cab."

Terry shrugged his shoulders. "Well, if you won't take my assistance I can't force it on you."

"Thanks, Terry. As I told you before, this is a private matter. I've got a chance to handle it myself. If I took some one with me I wouldn't have any chance. Least of all would I have a chance if I took you with me."

Terry moved back toward police headquarters.

"I've got a call of my own I'd like to put through," he said.

Planes Ordered.

But Roger Terry didn't use the open telephone at the front office. He moved rapidly down the corridor until he came to the telephone booth and, having closeted himself in the booth, telephoned his office. "That Morton case is going to break," he said. "I want you to get two airplanes with twoway radio controls. Get them cruising over the city right away. I want you to rush a man down to the Central Garage, where Carlton Lanlic keeps his automobile. When Lanlic shows up to claim his automobile have the garage attendant stall him along for a few minutes. Have your man take some bright orange paint and paint a big circle on the top of Lanlic's car. Have our airplanes, each equipped with an observer and binoculars, take off in exactly 20 minutes. Have them scour the city until they find that automobile. When it parks I want to know it. And remember that seconds are precious."

He hung up the telephone and looked at his wrist-watch. A slow grain relaxed his features.

"It won't be long now," he said.

Lanlic Arrives.

Manley Sarcon stood close by Carlton Lanlic's side as Lanlic slid from behind the driver's seat. Sarcon guided him up the steps to the place which the gangsters referred to as the "Thirty-eighth street hangout."

Jimmy Cordell opened the door.

"Hello, Lanlic," Cordell said; "come in. I hear you have been looking for me."

Lanlic followed him into the front room. Cordell coughed twice. A door opened and Loretto entered the room.

"You had somehting you wanted to see me about?" Lanlic moved casually toward the window as though interested in the scenery, then turned to face Cordell. He now had the wall of the room at his back.

Ultimatum Given.

"Yes," Lanlic said, "I've got something to say to you. I may as well say it to you all. I've been your lawyer. I've acted for all of you. I've defended you when you were arrested and I've kept you from being arrested. Your life has been outside the law. You have, in effect, used my brains to help you violate the law. I wouldn't violate the law myself. In a way I've always looked down on you because you're making a living out of law violation. I realize now that I might just as well have been a criminal myself."

Cordell's face was cold and hard. "Getting rather moral all of a sudden, aren't you, Lanlic?"

Lanlic's voice, vibrant with that peculiar timbre which made the minds of his listeners shiver with some subtle nerve vibration, went on speaking. "Yes," he said, "perhaps I'm getting moral. Perhaps I didn't see things clearly before. It was a prohibition law that you were violating. I didn't take it seriously. Lots of people didn't take it seriously. We saw only the question of 'to drink or not to drink.' We lost sight of the question of law enforcement. We didn't realize it was a case of whether laws were to be respected or utterly disregarded.

"Now, then, prohibition has gone. There's still money in the booze racket. It won't last long. You know it. You've turned your criminal activities to something else. I want you to know that I won't stand for it. I want you to know that we're finished. Do you understand that? We're finished. you and I and the rest of the boys are all through, all washed up."

Charges Made.

Cordell moved a step forward. "What," he asked, "are you talking about?"

"When you met me in the cabaret," Lanlic said slowly, "you knew I was going to be there. You came there to meet me. There was only one person who knew that I was going to be at that cabaret. That was the person who was to take dinner with me. That person was Sylvia Galen. Therefore, if you knew that I was at that cabaret, you got the information from her lips. You knew she was coming to my office. You knew that she was bringing Annette Morton with her. You made certain that I would be out of the office by giving me a routine criminal case in Judge Karpin's court. You got my secretary out of the office through a clever bit of forgery. After she left, you picked the lock and walked into my private office. You left the door unlocked. You had planted packing cases in the corridor the day before. Sylvia Galen and Annette Morton came to my office and sat down in the entrance room. Your men came out of my private office.

"Sylvia Galen and the girl were either knocked unconscious, bound and gagged, or chloroformed. They were put in the packing cases. The packing cases went down the freight elevator and were loaded into a van. I'm here to get them back."

One Against Three.

Jimmy Cordell turned to Manley Sarcon.

"Did any one follow you, Manley?"

"No."

"Did he know he was coming here"

"No."

Cordell swung back to Lanlic. "You're all alone. You must know enough of me by this time to know that I'm not going to let you walk in here and run a bluff like that. You're one against three."

Lanlic said slowly, "I'm not bluffing."

"Just what do you think you're going to do?" Cordell asked.

"I'm probably going to die," said Lanlic slowly, "but in dying I'm going to see that Sylvia Galen gets her liberty. Your men can probably get me before I've done very much damage, Jimmy, but I think I can get you before I cash in."

"Sort of a grand stand?" asked Cordell with a sneer.

The drone of an airplane motor penetrated to the room. Cordell licked his lips. Loretto fidgeted uneasily. Sarcon remained motionless, his face a mask, his right hand concealed in the pocket of his coat.

"I've got only a word to say," Cordell said, "and then you die instantly."

"You can say a word," Lanlic told him, "which is going to start a lot of shooting."

Cordell hesitated.

Sarcon glanced swiftly around the room, looked casually out of the window, suddenly stared with wide, startled eyes.

"What is it?" asked Cordell nervously.

"Look at the top of his car!" Sarcon shouted.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

IF September 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. until 1:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

On this date influences conducive to good humor and fellowship may prove helpful in establishing better understanding and closer relations on a social basis, with some business acquaintances. Good judgment, however, should be exercised that nothing is done or said that might lead to the impression you are taking advantage of their good nature. Money should circulate freely and financial troubles greatly eased, if it is handled judiciously.

Care should be exercised in the selection and buying of food, as there may be a great variation in grades offered the public. Unless you are watchful you may find that instead of receiving the quality paid for, a poorer one has been substituted. An attempt may be made, by a stranger, to flim-flam you through the telling of a tale of woe, so it possibly may prove wise to be careful how readily you reach for your pocketbook.

Social contacts are likely to be made that may renew old friendships or probably create new ones, which in time may turn out to be very delightful. Married and engaged couples, as well as those aspiring Romeos and Juliets longing for ladders to climb or balconies to enable them to look down upon ambitious swain, will do well to remember "pride goes before a fall," or the indulgence in being self opinionated, may prove a dangerous pose on this date.

If a woman and September 21 is your natal day, you have been blessed with a marvelous capacity to love and a great reluctance to hate. You should have an unusual number of devoted friends. If you will use common sense in protecting your heart from sullying germs, the right man will help you keep it uncontaminated and filled with the glow of a mighty love. Dame Fortune may treat you most graciously.

The child born on September 1, when it reaches school age, may surprise its family by its sense of responsibility and steadfastness of purpose.

If a man and September 21 is your birth anniversary, your high ideals can be developed to the degree where they will have the power to overcome any little weaknesses. Strength of character is all you should require to enable you to see your dreams for successful accomplishment realized. A good woman can prove more helpful to you than money. Love is essential for your complete happiness.

Successful people born on September 21:

Louis Jolliet, explorer.
Gideon F. Thayer, educator.
Dougles Houghton, physician and naturalist.
Abraham H. Cassel, antiquarian.
Edward R. Dalton, physician.

A Boom on Rice Is Forecast Here

(Associated Press.)

Department of Agriculture scientists recently predicted a wider home market for American-grown rice as a result of experiments just completed.

Jenkin W. Jones, and J. Taylor, the scientists, announced their findings indicated rice equal in cooking quality to that imported from India can be produced in the United States and the production of white milled grains, called "head" rice, can be increased about 25 per cent in certain of the best quality long-grain rices grown in this country.

The studies by Jones and Taylor showed making and par-boiling ruff rice before milling cut down breakage of kernels and reduces the tendency of the rice to become ragged in cooking or when foods are sterilized in the can. The Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, under whom Jones and Taylor work, has applied for a public service patent on the process, which will make it available to all millers.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

AS THE Lindbergh kidnaping case reopened with announcement in New York that kidnap money had been located and an arrest made, all three net works went after the story on the radio angle and hit a practical stone wall.

WRC's doughtiest delegation of diplomats and fixers rushed en masse on the local Department of Justice . . . took with them transmitting and broadcasting equipment and offered all manner of inducement to Attorney General Cummings to go on the air. But he refused.

Police Commissioner O'Ryan, of New York, was corralled, however, and announcements that he would go on the air came through with the speed of press dispatches. He told the New York angle of the story at 5:35 p. m. yesterday on WMAL and C. B. S. networks.

Meanwhile WJSV's Ted Church sped to the Department of Justice. Sounds through the phone indicated that "everybody's working their heads off," as an excited switch operator put it.

WOL phoned to announce that WMCA, the A. B. S. New York outlet, had set up lines in New York's police headquarters immediately after the story broke. Frank Knight, who handled the Morro Castle investigation, went on the air with news as it broke.

Coincidence stalked C. B. S. last night when Col. Breckinridge, the Lindbergh counsel, broadcast at 7:45 p. m. His broadcast had been scheduled for weeks but concurred almost exactly with the case whose fortunes he closely followed as Col. Lindbergh's personal adviser.

A VAUDEVILLE impersonator whose accents bore very definite traces of New York's elegant East Side clack, recently screwed his face up in a painless contortion and attempted an "impression" of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It sounded like he was trying to gargle an oyster. And the reason he failed . . . though an actor on the "March of Time" succeeded . . . was because President Roosevelt, according to Vida Sutton, noted speech expert, "is the master of the art of correct speech."

Miss Sutton, who starts her seventh season of weekly "Magic of Speech" broadcasts over WRC today at 1 p. m., points out that "the President possesses almost perfect speech technique. That is, he keeps the vocal passage well open, the tongue well forward, and the lips neither too open nor too closed, so that sounds are effectively made. His voice is well modulated and is used at the proper pitch, and he has an easy speaking rhythm. Mr. Roosevelt also has the nearest to perfect cosmopolitan speech of any of our public figures," she concludes.

During her coming broadcasts Miss Sutton will tell listeners what must be done to attain the correctness of enunciation and pleasing quality that the Chief Executive has . . . and certain local radio announcers would like awfully to have.

WHEN the Apache, revenue cutter which has been used many seasons for aquatic events, is anchored with pennants flying in midstream Potomac tomorrow afternoon, judges, timers, starters, District officials and Jim McGrath will jam its narrow decks to watch the President's Cup Regatta contestants rip the waves.

Practically every announcer in town is playing a part in broadcasting the regatta . . . but at this writing only Zeus and Joe Kaufman know where they will be. Larry Elliott, Arch McDonald, Ted Austenkamp, Arthur Reilly, Stanley Bell and our Jim will all contribute.

The ship to shore description for people lining the banks of Haines Point will be carried through a marine cable scraping the bottom of the river. This portion will be heard from loudspeakers pointing at the crowd. And the radio broadcast description of the event will be relayed through the same underwater cable attached to the Apache. This Jim and Stanley Bell will handle for N. B. C. listeners at 4 p. m. tomorrow on WRC.

And if Arthur Godfrey weren't romancing with Ernestine Gardner from the stage of the Fox Theater . . . we suppose he would be there, too. But there'll be enough symphony as it is with the succulent accents of Reilly, the roustabout roistering of Elliott, the clear bell canto tones of Bell, the outboard motor exhaust of Ostenkamp, the intimate touch of McGrath and the sports jocularity of McDonald.

LISTENING to the daily gamut of programs that is radio, is the chief diversion of Mrs. A. J. Sucrow, of Wheaton, Md., who writes pleasantly about "those fine people out there who visit me each day in my home."

"I have a long list of favorites from little tots to heavy dramas and I have made some wonderful friends, though unseen," she confides. This department promises her continued enjoyment and many thanks for the good wishes.

A SHORT, be-grizzled Puerto Rican sailor climbed the steps to WMAL's studio yesterday morning and in excellent Spanish explained that his ship, a pleasure craft, had gone back to its port without him.

Ted Kimball, announcer, understood the language but couldn't speak it. He discovered, however, that the sailor wanted to sing Spanish songs on WMAL to earn enough money to get back to Baltimore, whence his ship had sailed.

Ted harangued him in nautical French and said that WMAL didn't have enough spare air for salty songs . . . so the young mariner left the studio with his fare back to Baltimore . . . which various kindhearted announcers at WMAL dug up for him.

RETURNED yesterday from mingling with over 300 radio station managers and executives representing nearly all of the 600 broadcasting units in the country in convention at Cincinnati, Messrs. Berkeley and Callahan, of Washington's office of N. B. C., find that "the most active year they've ever had" is coming up for the fall season.

Vince Callahan, who is assistant to Frank Russell, head of N. B. C. here, found particular interest in the report of Judge Davis, of the Federal Communications Commission, which has been examining examples of radio continuity from all stations during the past month. Out of 70,000 pieces studied by the commission, very little objectionable material was found.

Commercial prospects are excellent and the general tone of the convention was highly "optimistic," reported Mr. Berkeley. Much was said concerning the hearing scheduled before the commission on October 1 and new efforts are being made to clear up copyright confusion.

Harry Butcher, manager of Columbia's local office, was elected a director of the National Association of Broadcasters, under whose auspices the convention was held.

Candidates Get Anne Arundel Questionnaire

Better Government Group Adopts Platform of Reforms.

Annpolis, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The Better Government League, a nonpartisan organization formed a year ago, in Anne Arundel County to promote efficiency and economy in county government, and seeking men of the highest type to run for public office, had adopted a platform and also submitted a questionnaire to the various candidates in the Neovember election.

The league has indorsed ten candidates, regardless of party affiliation, whose names will appear on the November ballots as "league" candidates. The platform, in addition to demanding that all candidates pledge themselves for a strictly business and economic administration, urges that all county commissioners pledge themselves to serve the county as a whole, rather than their respective districts; that all purchases over $100 be submitted to competitive bidding; that the post of counsel to the commissioners be abolished and the State's attorney be required to perform such duty; that the sheriff's office be kept open dy and night, and all law enforcement officers be appointed by the sheriff with the approval of court.

Other points that would require legisltive approval are that excess revenue from the offices of court clerk and register of wills be returned to the county rather than the State, and that special privileges be charged against the respective districts.

The questionnaire sent candidates asks specific questions as to qualifications for the offices sought.

Power Firm Official Shifted to Maryland

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—It has been announced that the assistant manager of the Potomac Light & Power Co., Frank D. Town, has been transferred to Union Bridge, Md., where he will be manager. He has been associated with the local company for the past three and a half years. The change is effective October 1. He came here from Mount Airy, Md.

Strange as it seems, the world's greatest authority on his own special subject wrote the most authoritative book ever written explaining his profession—then he destroyed his book to keep the world from reading it.

The author was Charles Courtney, of New York. The subject of his book was safe-cracking.

Courtney, unlike most men who follow the profession of safe-cracking, does his work entirely legally. He opens stubborn safes, damaged safes, safes with lost or unknown combination. He has been called to all parts of the world to open strongboxes — many secret and mysterious trips have been taken by him to pick locks on treasure chests.

As the world's best authority on how to open safes, Courtney wrote a book to explain his profession. He told all of the tricks of the trade. It was the best book of its kind ever printed—but it worried police. They pointed out that it was a perfect handbook for criminals. Courtney agreed. He gave a few copies to his closest friends and burned the rest of the first edition in his furnace.

Grand Jurors Attack County Jail Conditions

Fredericksburg Inquiry to Be Made as Result of Charges.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Inquiry into allegedly objectionable jail conditions was recommended by the grand jury, and two youths received three-year suspended sentences for check forging in a special corporation court session today.

Judge Frederick W. Coleman, after hearing the grand jury's recommendation, said that such conditions in the jail could not be tolerated. He cited City Manager L. J. Houston, jr., to appear before him October 4 and show cause why certain conditions in the city jail should not be corrected.

The grand jury's report criticized the lack of separate accommodations in the jail for women prisoners.

Lonnie Musante, 18, Stafford County, and Charles Fugett, 23, Fredericksburg, pleaded guilty to charges of check forging and received suspended sentences of three years each.

Musante is a brother of Caroline Musante, whose kidnaping twice within a few weeks aroused interest here last spring. Immediately after being freed, Musante was served with a warrant on another check forging offense in Prince William County.

The grand jury returned a true bill against Alexander Zakos, charged with absconding with funds of a restaurant where he was formerly employed. His case set for trial at the regular October session of the court.

Grand jurors were J. W. Cox, foreman, E. A. Gibson, John M. Evans, George E. Hicks, L. E. Layton, and Joseph Walker, the latter man colored.

Winnipeg Plans Huge Radio.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, (U.P.).—Winnipeg will have the largest radio station in Canada shortly. The Manitoba Telephone Commission plans to erect a 15,000-Watt station to replace their present CKY plant. It will equal some of the largest in the United States and surpass all radio station in Canada.

FINE WHISKIES SINCE 1857

gives you the answers to six questions about bottled-in-bond whiskies

1. What is the difference between American and Canadian whiskey? What are examples of each?

The difference lies in the way the whiskies were made rather than where they were made. Canadian whiskies are generally of light body, subtle bouquet. American whiskies are traditionally richer, more full-bodied, stronger.

Seagram's offers both kinds.

In Seagram's famous V. O. and "83" you can have bottled-in-bond Canadian whiskies of superlative character and excellence. In Seagram's "Ancient Bottle" Rye and Seagram's Bourbon you can have bottled-in-bond whiskies distilled and matured in the finest American tradition.

2. Where are the world's largest stocks of fully aged Rye and Bourbon whiskies of true American character?

The House of Seagram holds the world's largest stocks of fully aged whiskies distilled in the American tradition. They were distilled and matured in Canada, where their manufacture and sale were legal during Prohibition here. They are American in all save geography—their distillation supervised in every detail by American experts according to American formulas. Through Seagram's foresight it is now possible for Americans to enjoy fully aged American-type whiskey, when domestic bonded stocks are virtually exhausted.

3. Just what is meant by the term "bottled in bond"?

Whiskey may be labeled bottled in bond only after it has been aged for a prescribed number of years in charred oak casks in a bonded Government warehouse under continuous Government supervision.

Seagram's V. O., Seagram's "83", Seagram's "Ancient Bottle" Rye and Seagram's Bourbon are all bottled in bond under Government supervision, their age attested by the Canadian Government seal.

4. How old must whiskey be before it is bottled in bond—and why?

In the United States, whiskey must age in casks at least 4 years before it can be "bottled in bond." Experience has shown that whiskey requires 4 years to reach maturity.

Every drop of Seagram's fine bottled-in-bond whiskies has aged in charred oak casks at least 5 years.

5. Is all bottled-in-bond whiskey the same?

Decidedly, not! Time works wonders. But even Time cannot turn poorly made whiskey into fine old whiskey. The quality of the ingredients, the skill used in distilling and aging are all-important factors in whiskey's final flavor.

6. How can I be sure of getting fine, bottled-in-bond whiskies?

Say Seagram's and be sure. Seagram's famous whiskies come to you from a vast supply of rare old whiskey. Until sufficient stocks of American distilled whiskies have aged in bond for 4 years, Seagram alone can assure you so wide a choice and so continuous a supply of fully aged whiskey.

Rainbow Overcomes Big Lead to Beat Endeavour by 3:26 Minutes

First Victory Registered By U. S.

ton Light Ship—for the 15-mile run to leeward and the beat back the same distance against the wind, the big cup defender gave a miserable display to the outward mark.

The air was fluffy, puffing out of the northeast, exactly the same sort of conditions under which Vanderbilt, in the first race last Saturday, piled up a lead of almost a mile before the 5½-hour time limit caught him two miles short of the finish line and made it "no contest."

Instead of taking the lead today, or even giving the swift-running Endeavour a fight of it, Rainbow slipped steadily astern in the run southwest by south toward a point off the southerly end of Block Island. They went over the line together in bright sunshine, and a sparkling blue sea, both under mainsails and jibs, but once the maneuvering for the start was over, out came the parachute spinnakers, the "Mae West" on Rainbow, the "Annie Oakley" on the Blue Bolt, and away went Endeavour.

That was the first astonishing development of the day, for this sort of thing was supposedly Rainbow's last hope. Beaten Monday in a whanging breeze over the windward-leeward route, trimmed again Tuesday in a fine sailing breeze over the 30-mile triangular course, American hopes rested on light airs. Here they had them, and yet Endeavour steadily opened more and more water until she rounded the 15-mile buoy at 1:27.17 (p. m.) exactly 2 hours 27 minutes and 27 seconds after the start at 10:40 a. m. (Eastern standard time) with Rainbow 6 minutes and 39 seconds, about a mile of rolling sea, behind.

Makes His Choice.

Once around the mark, Vanderbilt looked at the deal and made his choice. He went off to port looking for wind and soon found it—wind in gusts. And then with the big Genoa jib he had set after rounding the mark pulling perfectly, the Rainbow started up. The wind had hauled around so that the trip home, instead of being a beat against the wind, was really a close reach with the breeze, freshened to about 8 knots, coming in southeast by south.

Almost before Sopwith realized what was happening, Rainbow came sliding upon his stern, and the wind, bouncing off the defender's sheets, was hitting back against Endeavour's sails, offsetting the drive from the other side.

Again Loses Distance.

Sopwith had to tack again, and in coming around twice he again lost distance but he made certain of fetching the mark. All the way down through the stretch, with Rainbow now over half a mile in front, the only question worrying the Americans was whether Vanderbilt in the end would have to tack to get over the finish line between the Wilhelmina and the final buoy.

He hit it smack on the nose, at 3:15:34 p. m., with Endeavour crossing at 3:19:00, 3 minutes 26 seconds later. Both times were slow and came nowhere near the records. Rainbow's elapsed time was 4:35:34; Endeavour's, 4:39:00.

There will be no race tomorrow, as Sopwith asked for a postponement as soon as today's race was over. It is believed that he wishes to work out the problems his big reaching jib developed today.

Gate Receipt Tax Test Case Filed

West Virginia University Claims Collection Illegal.

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 30 (AP).—The Government's right to levy a tax on the gate receipts of football games and other collegiate athletic events will be tested in Federal Court by West Virginia University.

Walter R. Thurmond, collector of internal revenue for West Virginia, has filed a lien against the property of the university's athletic committee, claiming unpaid taxes for three years amounting with interest to $5,732.34.

University officials take the position the Government is not entitled to tax college sporting events. Athletic officials say they have received the support of several other colleges faced with the same problem.

Logs Imperil Cup Regatta Today

Little Hope Held Course Will Be Clear in Time for First Race.

DANGER, even more ominous than always lurks in the path of speedboat racers, was skulking in the course of the President's Cup Regatta last night on the eve of the Capital's annual water classic.

Driftwood, swept into the Georgetown Channel by the recent heavy rains, constitutes the jeopardy of the game already fraught with peril. Harbor Police worked long and hard last night in an effort to sweep the course clear of half-submerged logs which to speedboats are as icebergs to Titanics, but little hope is held out that the channel will be clear by noon today, when the first speedcraft is scheduled to spurt into action.

So hazardous was the Georgetown Channel yesterday that many of the Gold Cup drivers who will participate in the President's Race refused to pilot their boats over the course. Most of them did, however, zip around the Eastern Branch in practice runs.

El Lagarto Preps.

George Reis put his cup-winning El Lagarto, defending champion in the President's Race, through a long, stiff workout. Reis gave the Gold Cup champion the gun frequently and slipped it around imaginary buoys in manner to bode no good for his competition.

Miss Saranac, formerly the El Lagartito, was given a brief practice run by Pilot Bob Purdy, under the watchful supervision of Edmond Guggenheim, whose property she recently became. The Miss Saranac competed in Gold Cup racing for the first time in 1930, with a time for best heat of 54:08 S. M. P. H. at Red Bank, placing third. The boat did not finish in the Gold Cup race at Montauk Point in 1931, but reports of Miss Saranac's performances in preparation for the President's Cup Race indicate she will be a strong contender for El Lagarto's honors.

Louisa, the J. L. M. Rutherford-John Wanamaker, jr., entry, was not put in the water yesterday because of the dangerous condition of the course. J. L. M. Rutherford and Mrs. Rutherford puttered about the craft in her stanchions and plan a trial run early this morning.

Neither did the Hornet, Aaron DeRoy's entry, touch the water yesterday. The DeRoy boat, which formerly was the Delphine VI of the Dodge fleet, competed last year as the Ethel Ruth, under the banners of John Shibe. After setting a lap record of 58 miles an hour in last year's President's Cup event, the boat was forced out by motor trouble.

Jack Dunn's Jay Dee, which will be raced for the first time under his colors and that name today, is expected to arrive sometime this morning, as will William Horn's recently acquired Delphine IV and the Arctic Tern, belonging to E. T. Chase, of Baltimore.

Ethel Ruth Withdrawn.

The first race on today's program, which is scheduled to open at noon, is a Class B amateur outboard affair. The first 15-mile lap of the President's Cup race is scheduled for 3:40 p. m., and the remaining two 15-mile laps will be run tomorrow afternoon.

Reserved seats are available along Hains Point and a public address system will keep spectators on shore informed of the progress of the competition in the back stretches.

Cumberland Booters Meet Washingtonians

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.). Announcement has been made by Boyd Payton, manager of the Celanese A. A. soccer team, that the locals, coached by William (Scotty) Orr, will inaugurate their home campaign on Sunday, September 23, against the German-American Soccer Club, of Washington, D. C.

Indians Pound Cohen; Trim Nats, 6-1

LEAGUE PARK, Cleveland, Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The American League champions' bitter struggle to forge into sixth place was balked today when they ran into a stunning set-back here.

The Nats' running, as a matter of fact, was confined chiefly to the outfielders. The Indians attended to the bulk of the footwork on the bases and checked in with a 6-1 victory.

It was the big league pitching debut for Sid Cohen, late of Chattanooga, who started on the mound for the Nats and finished there by the grace of Manager Joe Cronin's patience.

Averill Hits Homer.

There were three flies in the ointment for Cohen—all hit by Earl Averill. The first landed in the street beyond the right-field wall, the second fell safely in the outfield for a double and the third was an equally effective two-bagger.

Averill had a large afternoon, anyway you view it, with his three hits, all for extra bases, driving in three runs.

Mel Harder also was present this afternoon—present with a seven-hit performance that rendered the Nats runless after the first inning.

It was a tight ball game for two innings. The Nats scored a run off Harder at the start when Bluege doubled, took third on Averill's fumble and crossed the plate on Myer's fly. After that they rolled over and surrendered almost completely to Harder.

Tie Count in First.

The Injuns didn't tarry with Cohen. The rookie gave up the tying run in the first inning when Averill banged his twenty-fourth homer of the year and boosted the score to 3-1 in the third when Averill scored Harder with his first double, and scored himself on Trosky's single.

After that, with Harder pitching the way he was pitching, the lone issue in doubt was the size of the Injuns' score. They picked up another run in the sixth after Trosky led off with a double, and tossed in a single run each in the seventh and eighth.

Manager Joe Cronin took his broken arm for a workout before the game but is definitely relegated to the sidelines for the rest of the Season.

Cards Take 2, Moving Up On Giants

BOSTON, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Cardinals continued their pennant drive with a double victory over the Braves, 4 to 1, and 1 to 0, today, as the clubs closed out their season's rivalry. The two triumphs put the Cards a half game closer to the Giants, leaving them 3½ games behind the league leaders.

Excellent pitching on the part of Tex Carleton and Bill Walker carried the Cards over today's difficulties in the face of rather sparse hitting. Carleton limited the Braves to three hits in the opener to beat them for the sixth time this season. Then Walker came through with a shut-out, although touched for eight blows, one more than the Cards made off Fred Frankhouse.

Ed Brandt's wildness proved costly to Bostotn in the first clash. He forced home the first run in the second inning, issuing successive passes to Davis, Fullis and Durocher after Jim Collins had singled. The second tally scored on a force-out in the infield.

Liverpool, England, Sept. 20 (AP). Freddie Miller successfully defended his claim to the world's featherweight boxing title tonight, when he easily outpointed Nel Tarleton, British champion, in a 15-round bout before a crowd of 50,000, the largest ever to attend a boxing match in Great Britain.

Errors Costly To Detroit in Final Game

Broaca Yields 14 Hits; Marberry Is Pounded From Hill.

DETROIT, Sept. 20 (AP).—After three tight, well-played games, the Tigers and the Yankees let down today and engaged in a session of heavy hitting and loose fielding which ended with New York the winner, 11 to 7. This gave the Yanks an even break in the series and reduced the Tiger lead to five and a half games.

Johnny Broaca pitched the full game for the Yanks and further distinguished himself by making his second hit of the season, but it took a lot of clouting by his mates to keep him on the hill. He gave up fourteen blows, including a homer by Goose Goslin and Charley Gehringer's 200th hit of the year.

Marberry Is Pounded.

The Yanks took a 2-1 lead off Fred Marberry in the first and scored six times in the third to settle the argument then and there. They sent ten men to the plate, collected five hits and two walks and the Tigers made two glaring errors. After two passes and hits by Rolfe and Gehrig had brought two tallies Fred Marberry was replaced by Luke Hamlin but he didn't fare much better.

Tony Lazzeri met Hamlin with a single; Pete Fox let the ball go through him then Hank Greenberg muffed the return throw and Tony trailed home behind two teammates. Doubles by Chapman and Jorgens accounted for the sixth run. The rest of the game was an endurance test.

A crowd of 29,000 cash customers turned out for the season's final clash between the pennant rivals to establish an all-time record for a singles series at Navin Field. In all 121,000 fans saw the teams play four games and the Yanks have played to a grand total of 356,000 here this season.

Credulous, Fourth Straight Favorite, Barely Lasts, Wins Graw Feature by Neck

Star Shadow Beaten Off At Wire

HAVRE DE GRACE, Sept. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Louise Viau's Credulous just lasted to stave off the belated charge of Star Shadow to snatch a neck victory in the Penn A. C. purse, a six-furlong dash for juveniles which featured a racing program dominated by favorites here this afternoon. Arbitrary was third in the field of seven, a scant half length back of the front pair.

Credulous was the fourth straight public choice to register, paying $4.10. Beside the purse his owner received a handsome piece of silver plate presented by the noted athletic club of Philadelphia.

Winner Always Ahead.

The winner was always in front. Under Eddie Arcaro's rating the Omar Khayyam gelding disposed of Tempestuous' challenge in the run through the back stretch and rounding the bend opened a comfortable daylight lead.

Star Shadow, in close quarters in the early running, was taken to the outside on the turn, and when straightened out he closed with a powerful rush which had him in front two strides past the wire.

After riding four winners yesterday Jockey Johnny Gilbert came right back to win with his mounts in the first and second races. With better racing fortune he would have completed a triple in the feature on Star Shadow.

Jockey J. Cassard was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding astride M. J. Brennan in the first race.

War Dancer Easy Victor.

Glen Riddle Farm's War Dancer, the favorite, paying $3.90, coasted to an easy victory in the first race, a test for maiden juveniles at 5½ furlongs. It was the daughter of Man o' War's second start, her first being during the latter days of the Saratoga August session. She came from back of a brisk pace set by Golden Scepter to finish two lengths in advance of the latter. Iwintoo, a rank outsider, paid $20.70 to show.

Gilbert scored his second victory on Chirac, which was claimed out of his last race by Mrs. M. Nelson Bond, in the 6-furlong second race. The Syrian booter handrode his mount to a scant head victory over Squeeze Out. A length and a half away from the latter, Black Song was third. Chirac was the second straight favorite to win, paying $4.50.

Shasta Star Wins Sprint.

Another public choice stepped home for the form players when Shasta Star, paying $5, got up in a hard-fought stretch tilt to win the 6-furlong third race. Whirry was second, Tuleyries Wand third and Shenvalee fourth, half lengths separating the quartet. Gilbert took the assignment at the last minute on Tuleyries Wand and had her in the thick of the fight throughout.

Jimmy Hunter's whip ride brought home Aegis, an outsider paying $19.80, a head in advance of Believer in the fifth race, of six furlongs, to break the succession of winning favorites. Toytime, a lukewarm favorite, was third. Seven started.

Justa Teacher, the longest shot of the meeting, paying $70.80, set all her own pace to win the mile and a sixteenth sixth event. Bokie B. was second and Inflee third. The winner took command at the barrier and under perfect rating had plenty of speed left at the end to win by a length.

Potion won the mile and a furlong seventh, the second award going to Syriac and Retribution taking third.

Outsider Is Winner Of Detroit Feature

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP).—Zenka, an outsider, captured the Northway Handicap with a $1,000 purse at the Michigan State Fairgrounds today, beating Amazing by three-quarters of a length, with Bright Bubble third, two lengths farther back. Zenka, a 5-year-old bay mare, was saved during the first half-mile and shot into the lead in the final jumps.

She covered the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 4-5 and paid $11.60 for a $2 ticket.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR DANCER, $3.90, $3.50, $3.10; GOLDEN SEPTRE, $6.40, $5.30; IWINTOO, $20.70.

WAR DANCER, quick to begin and following GOLDEN SEPTRE closely, gained command approaching the home stretch, was kept under stout urging and drew out nearing the finish. GOLDEN SEPTRE raced IWINTOO into submission after a half mile, saved ground and continued with good courage after being displaced. IWINTOO went strongly until reaching the home stretch, then weakened gradually. TIPPO TIP overcame early interference and closed fast on the outside. SIEMPRE had a rough trip.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. First division. Purse, $600 (claiming price, $1,200). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:52½. Winner, Mrs. M. Nelson Bond's b. g. (3), by Masked Marvel, II—Leap Year. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $450; second, $100; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIRAC, $4.50, $2.80, $2.50; SQUEEZE OUT, $3.10, $2.70; BLACK SONG, $3.70.

CHIRAC responded stoutly after being straightened into the home stretch and then outstayed SQUEEZE OUT. Latter, rated forwardly, found room to come through on the inside at stretch turn, drew abreast of the leaders at midstretch and then fought it out courageously. BLACK SONG showed nice speed while setting the pace and held on with good energy. MAD EAGLE went wide all during the last five-sixteenths.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Second division. Purse, $600 (claiming price, $1,200). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:26. Winner, D. McVey's ch. m. (7), by Harmonique—Hetty M. Trained by W. G. Merion. Value to winner, $450; second, $100; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:14.

†Allen Getz-Mrs. B. Serio entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHASTA STAR, $5.00, $4.60, $2.80; †WHIRRY, $4.80, $2.90; TULEYRIES WAND, $2.60.

SHASTA STAR went to the outside entering home stretch, then closed resolutely and just lasted to withstand WHIRRY. Latter improved his position with a rush on outside, then closed stoutly, waiting the winner down steadily. TULEYRIES WAND was racing fast at end. SHENVALEE circled her field and closed with good speed. SCOTT DON was stoutly ridden from beginning. He weakened, as usual, during closing stages. THIS PLAY was going gamely at finish.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Penn Athletic Club Trophy. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:59½. Winner, Mrs. Louise Viau's ch. g. (2), by Omar Khayyam—Better Believe. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $160; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

BEYOND DOUBT	106	4	7	7	7	7	7	Decamillis	38.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREDULOUS, $4.10, $2.70, $2.40; STAR SHADOW, $7.30, $4.20; ARBITRARY, $4.40.

CREDULOUS, running freely in early stages to dispose of TEMPESTUOUS, went into a clear lead straightening into home stretch, began tiring thereafter and had to be aroused sharply to stall off STAR SHADOW. Latter, forced back when TEMPESTUOUS fell back, went to the outside when reaching home stretch, then closed strongly to finish, catching the winner rapidly. ARBITRARY improved his position on outside and came courageously when straightened into home stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000 (claiming prices, $1,500 to $2,000). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:33. Winner, Mrs. H. L. Ughetta's b. g. (6), by American Flag—Florence Webber. Trained by F. E. Kraft. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AEGIS, $19.60, $9.90, $4.70; BELIEVER, $7.00, $4.40; TOYTIME, $3.60.

AEGIS held on determinedly under a strong drive and barely lasted to stall off BELIEVER. Latter challenged when entering home stretch, then finished wearing the winner down. TOYTIME saved ground and came with good energy. POSTSCRIPT worked his way up, but could not threaten the leaders. IDLE FLIRT showed speed rounding the turn, but fell back. FERVID tired fast after going a half mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800 (claiming price, $1,200). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:07½. Winner, A. H. Utterback's b. f. (3), by Bud Lerner—Neva Cook. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47 3-5.

†B. F. Stephenson-Mrs. E. I. Shewbridge entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA TEACHER, $70.80, $22.50, $8.40; BOKIE B., $7.70, $4.30; †INFILEE, $2.90.

JUSTA TEACHER shook off HARKY after first seven furlongs, then held on strongly to resist BOKIE B. Latter, kept forwardly placed, came around leaders and finished gamely. INFILEE, after running to outside, continued to make up ground until the finish. HUT moved into contention with a rush when midway of final turn, and was steadily making up ground. HARKY failed to rally when put to a drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and one furlong. Purse, $800 (claiming price, $1,200). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:42½. Winner, Mrs. T. W. Durant's ch. g. (3), by Pot Au Feu—Peace and Plenty. Trained by John Rosley, jr. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POTION, $10.50, $5.00, $4.70; SYRIAC, $3.60, $3.10; RETRIBUTION, $5.80.

POTION, restrained back of leaders while full of run, went to the pacemaker without any effort midway of curve, drew into an easy lead and finished with much in reserve. SYRIAC, taken into a brief lead and rated until challenged, rallied momentarily, but was no match for winner. RETRIBUTION could not threaten leaders after entering a forward position.

Scrivener Allows Only One Hit, Hurls Brewers to 2-1 Victory Over G. P. O. Nine

Grace Beats Federals, 11 to 8

HELD to one hit by Southpaw Archie Scrivener, the Government Printing Office team, winner of the Departmental League title, bowed to Heurich Brewers, 2 to 1, yesterday's feature game of The Post Association interleague week-day series at Griffith Stadium. The game was called in the seventh to allow ball park attendants to erect temporary stands for the night's wrestling matches.

The victory in the other series contest, decided on the South Ellipse, went to the Grace A. C., which eliminated the G. P. O. Federals, 11 to 8, in a loosely played game.

Kann's, champion of the Department Store League, and Acacia Insurance, flag-bearer of the Capital City loop, meet this afternoon at the stadium in another test. Each has already suffered one defeat, and the loser today faces elimination. Play will start at 4 o'clock.

Campbell Also Aids.

Sharing hero honors with young Scrivener in the Heurich-G. P. O. battle yesterday was Officer "Rip" Campbell, who had a big hand in the scoring of the Brewers' runs. Campbell scored the deciding run in the seventh, when he crashed into Catcher Sole, who dropped Wilner's throw under the impetus of the hefty Heurich right fielder. Campbell had opened the inning with an infield hit, gone to second on Rake's hot smash to Willner, and advanced to third as Doffiemyer forced Radke out at second on a grounder to Gartland. Scrivener then tapped a roller to Willner and Campbell headed for the plate.

Campbell's bat also accounted for Heurichs' initial run in the fifth, when he singled home Knight, on second base by virtue of a base on balls and a theft of the middle bag. Radke followed with another walk.

Harding Gets Single.

Harding was the only G. P. O. batter to find Scrivener for a safe blow. He started the second with a base knock to center, went to third on two infield outs and tallied on Ev Russell's bobble of Willner's tap.

Both Scrivener and Corkins gave great pitching performances. Corkins had a slight advantage in the strike-outs, fanning 9 to 8 for Scrivener. It was Scrivener's second series triumph. On the merits of his pitching in these championship games he has materially enhanced his chances for selection of the outstanding sandlot player in The Post Association competition. The sandlotter chosen will receive a six-weeks' trial with the Washington baseball team in its spring training camp in the South.

Errors Aid Enemy.

Pitcher Vernon O'Meara, of Grace, weathering an early batting attack, hurled scoreless ball for the final five innings. Miserable support by his teammates was a big help to the Federals, who managed to make 8 runs off 4 hits. Marion Couzzins, Charlie Plumb, Francis Gibson and O'Meara himself led the assault on the Federal pitchers.

Londos Throws "Strangler" Lewis

Wrigley Field, Chicago, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—The ten-year wrestling feud between Jim Londos, of Greece, and Ed (Strangler) Lewis, of Beverley Hills, Calif., was settled tonight when Londos retained his world's heavyweight wrestling championship by throwing the former title holder before a crowd estimated at $33,000.

Marshall Beats E. Dusek Here

Earl McCready, of the Oklahoma McCreadys, humbled Dick Stahl in 12 minutes of a semifinal scheduled for 45. Both contestants moved about with remarkable agility, considering their ages, and both were SO tired at the finish—and so was the audience.

Henry Graber, the Iowa idol, and Dr. Karl Sarpolis, the Pennsylvania palooka, went 30 minutes to a draw in a slow canter that offered few thrills for the elite.

Occoquan Books 2 Foes.

The Occoquan Athletic Club will face two strong foes on the diamond over the week-end. Mount Vernon Independents will furnish the opposition tomorrow, while Emergency Works Administration will be met Sunday. Both games will be played at Rust Field, Woodbridge, Va., at 3 o'clock.

White House Will Entertain International Golf Players

British to Arrive Here Sunday for Chevy Chase Matches, Sept. 27-28.

MEMBERS of the British Curtis Cup team who will engage the American women stars in the international golf matches at Chevy Chase Club on September 27-28, will be received at the White House by President Roosevelt and at the British Embassy by Sir Ronald Lindsay, it was announced yesterday by the U. S. G. A. committee.

Receptions in their honor will be held at both places between practice rounds next week. Their visit to the White House, however, is contingent upon the return of President Roosevelt from Hyde Park.

The English stars, who defeated an all-star team from Canada recently at Toronto, will arrive in Washington at 10:45 o'clock Sunday morning. They will be quartered at the Shoreham Hotel as will the American players, whose full force will not mobilize here until Monday.

Captaining the British players will be Miss Doris Chambers. Other members are Miss Diana Fishwick, Miss Pamela Barton, Mrs. George Coats, Miss Molly Gourlay, Miss Wanda Morgan, Miss Diana Plumpton and Mrs. J. B. Walker.

Mrs. Vare Is Captain.

Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, five-time American champion, will be the nonplaying United States captain. Mrs. Vare was in Washington Monday inspecting the course and directing the placing of the tees. Miss Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, National title holder; Miss Marian Miley, of Miami; Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City; Miss Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines; Miss Charlotte Glutting, West Orange, N. J.; Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Haworth, N. J.; Mrs. L. D. Cheney, San Gabriel, Calif., and Mrs. Frank Gollthwaite, of Fort Worth, Tex., will compose the regular American team.

During her brief visit, Mrs. Vare indicated that she would not select a definite starting line-up until the day before the matches started.

Expected in advance of the rest of her teammates is Marian Miley. She will arrive Saturday afternoon and will join the British stars in practice rounds at Chevy Chase Sunday.

Lott, Stoefen Eke Out 3-Set Coast Victory

Los Angeles, Sept. 20 (AP).—George Lott and Lester Stoefen, world's doubles champions, encountered difficulty today before they eliminated Bob Riggs, local high school boy, and Gerald Bartosh, Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—8, 7—5, in the Pacific Southwest men's doubles.

In the second set, which they lost, the champions showed a display of temper as they alternately tossed their rackets to the court, and otherwise showed disgust over their own inaccuracy. They settled down later in the third set, however.

In the singles, third round, John Van Ryn, Philadelphia, won over Vernon Kirby, of South Africa, 6—1, 6—2.

Mrs. Small Is Victor In Cumberland Golf

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Posting a net score of 76, two under women's par, Mrs. Fred T. Small won the first 18-hole handicap golf tournament of the season held yesterday at the Cumberland Country Club. Mrs. Small had a gross score of 92, while her handicap was 16.

Runner-up honors went to Mrs. Charles Richards, who turned in a net score of 89. Mrs. Goodman, Mrs. W. W. Brown and Mrs. Thompson were tied for third place with 90s.

Bob Wilson Faces Macedon, Holder Of 42 Knockouts

Bob Wilson, pink-thatched Floridian, will be facing his supreme local test when he squares off against Jay Macedon in the ten-round main event at the Riding and Hunt Club Monday night.

Macedon boasts a record of 42 knockouts in 62 fights. He is under the management of Max Waxman, who books Jack Dempsey among other ring luminaries.

While only 32 years old, Macedon is old in ring experience, having campaigned within the squared circle since he was about 16. Many notables and erstwhile notables of fistdom have capitulated to his flying fists, but his most noteworthy achievement is an eight-round knockout over Ruby Goldstein in 1931.

McElvenny and Phillips Are Doubles Winners

Ralph McElvenny and Larry Phillips defeated Harry Goldsmith and Ivan Edwards, 6—1, 6—3, and Allen Staubley and Hi Ritzenberg defeated Joe Couley and Gene Allen, 6—4, 6—4, yesterday in the resumption of play in the Government tennis championship.

The doubles semifinalists will clash at 4:30 today at Potomac Park courts, while the singles finalists, Frank Shore and Don Garber, will clash half an hour later.

Griffith Will Attend Game at Alexandria

Clark Griffith, ever on the alert for promising material, will be a spectator at tomorrow's benefit game between the all-star teams of the Northern Virginia and Departmental Leagues at Baggett's Stadium, in Alexandria.

Between the Lines . . .

By Lewis F. Atchison.

HEADED for another college round-up. Here goes:

Scrimmage, scrimmage, everywhere but at Catholic U. and Maryland, where the lads are taking their meals off mantel-pieces, a result of Wednesday's gruelling interclub skirmish.

At Georgetown, in keeping with a moss-covered tradition, the freshmen yesterday stood the varsity on its collective heads in their first hand-to-hand engagement of the season. The Frosh always come off best in the initial scrimmage—then the varsity goes to work.

Wally Herron and Bill Duff, a couple of nice looking ball toters, dove through for nice gains, despite some excellent defensive work by Shuker, freshman center. Herron's cutback galloping was of high order, while Duff's best effort was a straight buck over guard.

Fusco's blocking and the forward-passing combination of Chubby Parcells to Mike Chappa evoked a smile from the coaching staff, but it disappeared as the coaches watched Frank Williamson's below-par play at center. The gloom deepened when it became known that Ed Ragis, sophomore end, Joe Mlynarski, regular guard, and Charley Merkle, sophomore end, will be out for the season because of injuries. Ragis' shoulder, broken in the Maryland frosh game last season, is ailing again; Merkle has a broken collar-bone and Mylnarski a dislocated shoulder.

Tuffy Leemans, George Washington's hard-running half back, returned to the line-up in time to reel off a couple of long runs against the Freshmen in scrimmage. Leemans has been out with torn leg ligaments. Arnold Benefield rang the alarm bell when he crashed into an immovable object believed to be Ed Watts, nose first. At a glance it looked very much like the 1933 broken nose jinx was back on the premises, but a more thorough examination of the proboscis revealed nothing more serious than damaged dignity.

Harry Deming ripped huge holes in the line for ball carriers and played an all-around good game. Nick Nicolopolous, former Central High School star, got in a few good licks for the yearlings. Sikd Kolker and Hank Strayer, varsity guards, were off stride and were threatened with demotion to the second team.

Catholic U. and Maryland indulged in light workouts and were dismissed early. The Cardinal coaching staff devoted the rest of the afternoon to the freshmen, a likely looking squad of young huskies who open their season next week against the Navy Plebes.

Jack Faber, Terp coach, spent most of the afternoon instructing the varsity in pass defense, a phase of the game his men are not well acquainted with. Maryland tackles C. U. again tomorrow and expects to win its first unofficial decision. Remember, Rainbow tried twice before succeeding.

Gallico Feels Ross Won, But Sees No Particular Scandal

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (Spl.).—What with yacht races and polo there has been no time to pay my respects to the general indignation over the McLarnin-Ross decision at the Madison Square Garden the other evening, when Jimmy McLarnin, looking like the victim in a bad automobile accident, was adjudged the winner by Referee Arthur Donovan.

I can not say that I shared this general hubbub, although I thought that Ross won and scored him so. When the brisk and stimulating 15 rounds were over and McLarnin was named the new champion, I found that I was not seething internally, but quite philosophical about it all.

Mr. Ross is after all a lightweight and lightweight champion of the world. When he won the welterweight championship from McLarnin I figured he had acquired something to which he was not entitled, because in my books Ross never won that first fight. When he got it back I merely figured that it was now all even-stephen, the customers had had two very entertaining evenings, the young athletes were considerably richer and everything was in status quo.

In the first fight I picked Ross to win, and thought that McLarnin was entitled to the decision. In the second fight I picked McLarnin and thought it should have gone to Ross. In the first fight, Ross ran all night. In the second he bounced enough right hands off McLarnin's jaw to have won any fight.

But particularly is Ross a better finisher than McLarnin. According to my score sheet they came into the thirteenth round all square. Ross won the fourteenth and fifteenth with a blazing attack beautifully sustained and deadly in its effect. McLarnin's left eye was completely closed and his head swollen until he looked like Shakespeare from the nose up. There was a great to-do because an Irish referee voted for the Irish fighter, but I thought that was about the natural thing to do, especially since Donovans score sheet seemed to make some sense, while that of the referee of the first fight made none at all.

It was a hard, even fight and the rounds scored by many of us as "even" might have gone one way or another, so that I saw no particular scandal connected with this fight. Any time an Irishman sees eye to eye with another Irishman that's not news.

Mrs. Mackenzie Is Corby Cup Winner

Shoots 87-8 for Victory; Mrs. Quinter Awarded Low Gross Honors.

MRS. ROLAND MACKENZIE, of Congressional, winner of The Washington Post Trophy, added to her golfing laurels yesterday at Columbia Country Club by capturing the Corby Cup with an 18-hole net score of 79. Mrs. Mackenzie, wife of the Congressional professional, had a gross of 87, with an 8 handicap for her winning score. She toured the first nine in 45, and the incoming side in 42.

Low gross honors were awarded Mrs. H. R. Quinter, of Columbia, who shot 48—43—91. Mrs. Mackenzie had the lowest medal score, but elected to accept the low net prize which entitled her to the Corby Cup.

Mrs. Mitchell Second.

Mrs. R. Carl Mitchell, of Beaver Dam, won second low net prize with 50—47—97—14—83. Mrs. H. M. Brundage, of Columbia, with 49—50—99—15—84, was third. Miss Nellie Mae Neff, young Manor Club golfer, with 49—51—100—14—86, captured fourth low net prize, and Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, of Congressional, 44—49—93—7—86, fifth low net. They won in the draw from Mrs. H. A. Knox, of Congressional, who scored 47—51—98—12—86.

Sixty-five golfers competed, but the scoring was so high that few turned in their cards.

Mrs. McKenzie, former California debutante, who within a few months sliced her handicap from 14 to 8, succeeds Miss Neff as champion.

Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional, former Colorado State champion, did a 93, but her 4 handicap prevented her from winning a prize.

Off to Bad Start.

The low gross winner, Mrs. Quinter, started raggedly, with a couple of sevens and an eight adorning her card. A feature of her round was the scoring of 3s on the fourth, eighth and thirteenth holes, and a birdie deuce on the tricky sixteenth, where she sank a 10-foot putt.

Prizes were presented by Miss Elizabeth C. Harris, president of the association.

Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely will meet Mrs. W. C. Goodwin in the finals of the women's golf championship at Washington Golf and Country Club today. Mrs. Tschiffely yesterday defeated Mrs. C. B. Stewart, 4 and 3, and Mrs. Goodwin turned back Mrs. J. P. McCabe, 1 up. Mrs. Tschiffely sank long putts on the eighth and ninth holes, to take a 2-up lead at the turn

In the first flight consolations, Mrs. W. F. Draper defeated Mrs. C. H. Merrillat, 2 up, and Mrs R. N. Sutton defeated Mrs. G. C. Roney, 1 up in 19 holes In the second flight, Mrs. Otto Thacker defeated Mrs. Frank Nesbitt, 2 up, and Mrs. P. A. McLendon won from Miss Katherine Thacker, 2 and 1.

Golfers at Columbia Country Club started an intensive practice campaign yesterday shortly after Chairman George P. James announced the dates and plans for the club championship. The 18-hole qualifying round will be held October 2 and 3, with the first and second rounds of match play in all flights on October 4 and the semifinals and finals October 5. A gala dinner the night of the finals will top off the program and wind up golf activities for the season. Miller B. Stevinson, five-time winner, is the defending champion.

Semifinals in golf championships for women at Kenwood and Manor will be held today.

Coeburn, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—The 1934 Wise County football season opens tomorrow night when Appalachia High School comes to Coeburn to play under the lights of Coeburn High School's improved field. Both teams have been working hard for the past two weeks.

Hot Fight Seen In Conference

North Carolina and W. & L. Promise New Trouble.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—A Kilkenney cat fight for the Southern Conference football championship looms today, with several of the erstwhile weak sisters of the loop apparently big enough and bad enough to take care of themselves.

Although there is a noticeable concentration of strength in the southern half of the circuit, Old Dominion and Maryland teams on the whole appear a bit stronger.

The expected rise of North Carolina's Tarheels and the pennant bid of Washington and Lee's courageous Generals promise dire trouble from two new quarters.

Furthermore, North Carolina State's Wolfpack, the team that never found its stride last year, under the direction of Coach "Hunk" Anderson is expected to be at or near the top when the championship is decided in late November.

Meanwhile, Wallace Wade, picked by a majority of the Southern Conference coaches, as the man who'll direct the Duke Blue Devils to the title, has his work cut out for him.

Clemson's Tigers, rugged and ferocious, promised trouble for the title contenders, as did the Old Liners of the University of Maryland who'll show a stout forewall and a well-trained back field paced by the sprint sensation, Earl Widmyer.

Some indication of the strength of three of the conference teams will come Saturday when Clemson tangles with Presbyterian College at Clemson, Washington and Lee entertains Wofford at Lexington, and Virginia Tech takes on Roanoke College's Maroons at Blacksburg.

Isherwood Cancels.

Isherwood Athletic Club has canceled its game with Fairfax Station for Sunday. Instead, the Isherwood players will journey to Herndon to meet the fast Herndon Market nine in a double-header, starting at 1 o'clock.

Stocks Crawl Up Fraction In Quiet Sales

Several Issues Advance as Trading Is Cut to 486,900 Shares.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Stocks backed and filled quietly today. Scattered selling in the forenoon gave the list an irregular appearance.

The mixed tendencies continued into the late dealings despite some buying in rails.

Light Gains Result.

Small gains were recorded by shares of Armour of Illinois preferred (new) and Howe Sound, both ex-dividend. Loew's, Sears Roebuck, General Motors, Chrysler, Westinghouse, Reynolds Tobacco B and Alaska Juneau were a trifle firmer. Homestake Mining dropped 3 and United States Smelting was off about 2. American Telephone lost more than a point, while Consolidated Gas, American Can, Western Union, United States Steel, Case and United States Steel preferred eased. The rails, including New York Central, Santa Fe and Union Pacific, were virtually unchanged.

That the margin situation may be clarified soon was seen in advices from Washington stating that the Federal Reserve experts had completed their recommendations on credit extension by brokers' dealers and bankers for securities trading and that the matter was up before the Reserve Board officials for final action.

The market was not especially affected by the announcement of Francis J. Gorman, chief of the textile strike forces, that individual settlement of the controversy with different mills was now being considered where union proposals can be agreed upon and where a special adjustment would not interfere with the strike as a whole.

Freight Estimates Higher.

There were some estimates that railroad carloadings for the last week, which will be reported tomorrow, will show a more seasonal increase. Carrier equities, however, did not appear to be particularly stimulated.

Much interest was expressed in the settlement credited to Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, that what the railroads need is more traffic and not an increase in freight rates.

Financial observers, holding that business generally is much better than Wall street sentiment, were cheered by another gain in bank clearings in the principal cities of the country. For the week ended September 19, Dun & Bradstreet found that clearings totaled $4,863,357,000 and were 4.9 per cent ahead of the aggregate in the same week last year.

In addition to the rise in bank clearings, the Engineering News-Record reported that engineering awards this week would amount to some $27,945,000, an increase of 18 per cent over the previous four-week average. Of this total, it was said, Public Works would account for about $20,866,000.

Issues Registered Total $1,161,375,431

(Associated Press.)

Securities valued at $1,161,375,431 were registered with the Federal Trade Commisson durng the 14-month period between enactment of the securities law and the transfer of its administration, September 1, to the Securities Exchange Commission.

The Trade Commission reported this week that during August, the last month of its jurisdiction, 50 registration statements filed with it under the 1933 act became effective, representing $92,191,258 in issues.

During the Trade Commission's administration of the act, it said, 793 registration statements filed with it became effective, bringing $120,863 in fees into the Federal Treasury.

Boot and Shoe Industry Protest Eliminates Federal Competition

Government Relief Administration Abandons Plans for Converting Hides Acquired Through Live Stock Purchases Into Footwear for Unemployed.

By Anna P. Youngman.

As a result of protests received from the National Boot & Shoe Manufacturers Association and other interested groups, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration has abandoned its ambitious plans for converting hides and skins acquired through purchases of live stock in drouth area into shoes, gloves and other products for distribution among the unemployed.

The fact that this change of policy has been announced by Relief Administrator Hopkins following conferences with representatives of private industries is an encouraging evidence of official open-mindedness in face of legitimate criticism of this latest proposal for putting the Government in business in competition with private industry.

The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation recently agreed to take over the Government's holdings of hides and skins in response to appeals from tanners, who feared complete demoralization of the market if the drouth supplies were not withheld. However, the contemplated conversion of hides into finished goods for distribution among relief recipients would also have had disruptive effects upon private industry. The Boot & Shoe Manufacturers Association, for instance, protested that "if the announced policy of the Government providing for the processing of these hides prevails, it will be disastrous for the business of many retailers, will vitally affect the solvency of others and will demoralize the orderly and regular channels of the manufacturing and distributing of the leather and shoe industries and of 40,000 retailers and their employes. "We earnestly urge," they concluded, "that these hides which have been and are going to be purchased by the Government, be held and released from time to time, as they may be absorbed in an orderly and normal way by the leather and shoe industries."

Competition Is Averted.

In this particular instance Government competition in manufacture of goods to be consumed by the unemployed has been averted at least for the time being, since Administrator Hopkins has promised not to process or otherwise dispose of cowhides and calfskins "in the near future and probably not for a period of several months." The protests of the threatened industries, however, calls attention to the generally disruptive effects of all kinds of relief activities that deprive private industries of orders upon which profits, hence work and wages for men in private employment, depend.

The desire to make the unemployed self-supporting as far as possible by finding useful work for them to do is understandable and the problems that confront relief agencies in their search for such openings are admittedly difficult. However, well-meant efforts to provide suitable employment for the idle will do more harm than good in the long run if they result in taking away business from those actively engaged in industrial operations.

There is a great deal of misunderstanding of the reasons for opposition to government invasion of the industrial field in the name of relief. Apparently it is not generally realized that people on relief rolls are consumers whose demands for goods provide a stimulus to business in no respect different from that afforded by consumers who pay for what they buy out of their own incomes. The chief difference is that the group on relief rolls are supplied through public outlays of funds instead of private spending. Consequently, all plans for satisfying their needs without reliance upon existing productive and distributive channels to furnish required supplies of goods means loss of trade for private industries and further additions to the numbers of idle workers.

Plans for Satisfying Needs.

It might be possible, of course, to satisfy the needs of millions of unemployed through Government-operated agencies that enabled them to produce for themselves without allowance for the profits without which private employers would cease to function. Upon Sinclair, the Democratic nominee for Governor of California, aims at this sort of solution of the problem of unemployment. He recognizes the affinity between his plan for making the unemployed of California self-sustaining and proposals of the Federal Government to set up industries to support the idle. His EPIC plan proposes that "the State shall purchase idle lands and factories at the present bankruptcy prices, and shall immediately institute a State system of production and exchange whereby the unemployed may produce what they consume."

Theoretically it is conceivable that a form of State socialism of the Sinclair type might be evolved in this country that would exist alongside and independent of our present system of private ownership and control, but it is highly unlikely that such a dual system would long endure. In proportion as State ownership and control expanded, the opportunities for private business to produce and sell at a profit would shrink, as Mr. Sinclair undoubtedly hopes and believes. As yet the invasion of the field of private enterprise by the Federal Government has been opportunistic in character, giving no indication of deliberate intention to advance socialized production through relief agencies. The success of the efforts of the boot and shoe industry to protect itself against governmental encroachment should encourage other industries to offer stiff resistance to any future attempts of similar nature to take away their business on the plea of making work for the idle.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Cotton goods markets were moderately active today. Demand for spot lots of wool goods was brisk. Rayon and silk fabrics were in active demand and raw silk prices were higher. Burlap was quiet and steady.

Federals Lead Bond Market In Sharp Rise

Trading Gains on Upturn to Turn Over Total of $15,704,000.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—United States Government securities led another rally in the bond market today and trading expanded appreciably on the upturn.

Transfers totaled $15,704,000, par value, against $11,744,000 yesterday. Of the day's aggregate, Federal Loans accounted for some $8,070,000, compared with $3,230,000 in the previous session. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans was up four-tenths of a point, at 82.3.

Railroad bonds were the best of the corporate groups. Gains of 1 to 3 points or so included some issues of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern; Erie, Great Northern, Missouri Pacific New York Central, Nickel Plate, Pennsylvania, Pere Marquette, Southern Pacific, Southern and Texas & Pacific.

The financial district expressed much interest in the calling by the Chrysler Corporation of $10,000,000 of Dodge Bros. 6s which were not due until 1940. Callable at 104, the bonds were not exceptionally active today and closed one-fourth of a point higher, at 105½.

In the foreign section the South Americans continued to display a firm tone.

Wall Street Briefs

(Associated Press.)

A definite check to the advancing trend in commodities, especially foodstuffs, was noted by the Dun & Bradstreet index, which declined from 120.95 on August 29 to 117.20 on September 14. In the foods division, advances numbered only 11, compared with declines of 18.

Stocks of Cuban raw sugar are moving from New York licensed warehouses into refiners' plants at a heavy pace, according to the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange. In the period since the signing of the new Cuban treaty, stocks have dropped 244,027 bags, to 1,317,311 bags, compared with 1,561,338 bags on August 24.

Curb's Prices Stage Rallies In Brisk Sales

Specialties and Industrials Load Advance; Alcohols, Oils Decline.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Specialties and industrials led the curb market in a substantial rally today. Utilities showed improvement, but alcohols and oils were slightly reactionary. Trading was brisk.

Aluminum Co., Commonwealth Edison, Glen Alden, Montgomery Ward "A," Sherwin Williams and Swift Internacionale advanced around a point, while Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Safety Car improved around 2, and Pepperell was more than 3 better.

American Gas, Electric Bond & Share, Newmont Mining and Wright Hargreaves sold fractionally higher. Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation, Seagrams and Niagara Hudson Power were somewhat soft.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

The British pound tumbled sharply yesterday, while other foreign currencies were slightly easier in terms of dollars.

The pound fell a full cent in New York, to $4.99¾, and lost 25 centimes in relation to French francs, at 74.75 francs to the pound. The dollar closed at 4.99¾ to the pound in London.

French francs were .00¼ of a cent lower in New York, at 6.67¾ cents, while the dollar closed the Paris trading at the equivalent of 6.67¾ cents to the franc.

The price of gold in London advanced a penny, to 140 shillings 9 pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $35.20), and bars valued at $2,746,029 changed hands.

Sales volume decreased to 486,900 shares.

Bonds—Government loans led the market in a lively rally. Home owners loans and farm mortgage bonds gained more than a point. Corporate lists advanced a point.

Curb—Specialties and industrials led a substantial rally on the curb. Oils and alcohols turned slightly reactionary.

Wheat—Broader buying power went hand in hand with higher prices for grains, a result largely of right-about-face action of European markets. September wheat sold at 1.04; December at 1.04⅛.

Cotton—Early advances in cotton prices were lost in later trading. Liquidation and selling continued and October closed at 12.62. Futures were steady. December sold at 12.75.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.86; refined sold at 4.75.

Gold—Bar gold sold in London at 140 shillings and 9 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was higher on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.99½ to the English pound; 6.67¾ cents to the French franc, and 40.48 cents to the German mark.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages Four Million Higher

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended September 19, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,473,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000 compared with the preceding week, and of $109,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1933

On September 19 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,466,000,000, a decrease of $3,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with decreases of $59,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $12,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and an increase of $4,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increases of $66,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $3,000,000 in money in circulation and a decrease of $2,000,000 in Treasury and National bank currency.

The system's holdings of bills discounted and bills bought in open market remained practically unchanged. An increase of $97,000,000 in holdings of United States Treasury notes was offset by decreases of $70,000,000 in holdings of United States bonds and $27,000,000 in Treasury certificates and bills.

Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended September 19, 1934, were as follows:

Offer Made to Buy Norway Deposits

New York, Sept. 20.—Following the recent formation of Avviklingsinstituttet (The Settlement Institute) with headquarters in Oslo, Norway, for the purpose of arranging for a final settlement of a group of banks in Norway, which have been in liquidation since the banking crisis in that country in 1922-1923, the institute announced today, through its American representative, Douglas Bradford, 120 Wall street, New York, its offer to purchase for cash the remaining balances of old deposits in these banks at a rate slightly lower than the amount of the calculated dividend remaining ultimately to be paid. Funds have been deposited in New York for this purpose by the institute.

Payments to date have ranged for the individual banks from a minimum of 5 per cent to a maximum of 78 per cent. In some cases, payments to be made will run as high as 40 per cent with a majority ranging between 5 per cent and 6 per cent.

Many depositors of those banks are resident in the United States, particularly in Brooklyn and Minneapolis. Brooklyn, incidentally, is known as the fourth largest Norwegian city in the world.

Canada Dry Votes Dividend Of 25 Cents

National Cash Register Co. Declares Return of 12 1-2 on Common.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Directors of Canada Dry Ginger Ale Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share, payable October 15 to stock of record October 1.

National Cash Register Co. declared a dividend of 12½ cents on the capital stock, payable October 15 to stock of record September 29. A similar dividend was ordered three months ago. The company stated that orders received are running well ahead of last year.

Directors of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. today declared a dividend of $2.50 a share on the 5 per cent preferred stock, the first payment since May 10, 1932. The board also declared 2 per cent interest on the certificates of indebtedness, the first since May 1, 1932. Both payments will be paid only when earned, but the directors set November 10 as the payable date to stock of record October 24.

Oppenheim, Collins & Co. reports for the year ended July 31 net loss of $267,290 after expenses and taxes against net loss of $515,535 in the preceding fiscal year.

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Kansas City Southern showed a net operating income of $153,701, a new peak for 1934 and the largest figure for that month since 1931, officials said today.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—The stock exchange was cheerfully active today, with Wall street advices having a good influence. Transatlantic issues advanced, and mining stocks and foreign securities, especially South American bonds, were also better. Gilt-edged securities and Argentine rails reacted slightly on profit takins. The market closed firm.

Paris—Rentes and French industrials on the bourse weakened today under political uncertainties, while international issues were stronger in response to Wall street's optimism. Mexican securities improved on prospects of a settlement of the Mexican foreign debt. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Stimulated by activity in mining stocks, the boerse registered a cheerful tone today. The closing was steady.

Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—The Boston market for domestic wool remained practically inactive and unsettled because of the lack of a sizable demand. Mills that occasionally needed small quantities of wool covered their requirements at odds and ends offered at prices that had little significance in relation to nominal quotations on sizable lines of wool. Cable reports from foreign wool markets indicated a steadier tone abroad.

Silk Market.

Wheat Values Advance on Buying Drive

European Markets Stage Right-About-Face Action.

Abrupt upturns of wheat quotations at Liverpool in particular were attributed to a natural rally after a decline of 8 cents there in the last nine days.

Word that fully 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been taken today for shipment overseas was also a strengthening influence, together with Canadian harvest delays because of wintry conditions.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat in Chicago closed firm at nearly the day's top level, ⅞ to 1⅜ above yesterday's finish; December, new, 1.04⅛ to 1.04¼. Corn, 1¾ to 1⅞ up; oats, ¾ to 1¼ advanced, and provision unchanged to a rise of 5 cents.

Cables from Liverpool said recent setbacks in wheat prices had brought forward more buyers and that a still better demand was expected shortly.

Likelihood of seasonal crop scares in Argentina were also regarded by some Chicago wheat trade authorities as an additional bullish factor. There was talk, too, that by the end of this month the brunt of the Canadian wheat crop movement will have been felt, with approximately then only 120,000,000 bushels to be marketed in Canada during the ten months afterward.

Furthermore, considerable notice was taken of Kansas reports that subsoil moisture reserve supplies for wheat were yet meager.

Cash Basis Lower.

Contrasting with the increased strength of wheat futures, the cash wheat basis here was ¼ to ½ cent lower, the first recession witnessed in weeks.

Although cash offerings were scarce, buyers of cash wheat were inclined to hold off. Only one bidder was in the market for cash wheat here today. On the other hand, no enlargement of the primary movement of domestic wheat was in evidence.

Forecasts of freezing temperatures over parts of the corn belt tonight tended to give independent strength to corn and oats prices.

Industries List Wider Activity After Holiday

Strike Handicaps Reduce Employment; Food Plants Run at Capacity.

New York, Sept. 20.—Most of the leading industries were on wider schedules than in the period immediately preceding, when the Labor Day holiday interrupted operations, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. The strike of textile workers, however, not only had a disturbing influence on that industry, but on others as well, with the result that the decline in employment was abrupt.

With both wholesalers and retailers increasing their volume of purchases, most manufacturers of foodstuffs now are operating at capacity. Orders for specialties have accumulated so rapidly, in many instances, that factories are running several weeks behind in their deliveries.

Many of the candy manufacturers also are operating at capacity, with the increase in volume thus far this year around 50 per cent, when compared with the total of 1933. With the opening of schools, the cooler weather, and the steady inflow of holiday orders, capacity operations in candy factories are expected to be general before the close of the current month. Orders for office equipment and supplies during the past 30 days have been reported by some manufacturers as the largest for any comparative period since early in 1932.

Loans on Homes.

While proceeding so quietly as almost to escape notice, there has been a phenomenal gain during the last two weeks in the money loaned to home owners under the provisions of the National Housing Act. This is giving a decidedly stronger impetus to the movement of building materials, and in this division the best fall business in four years seems assured.

The outlook for the other durable goods, however, has not improved, as orders being received for machinery and tools, transportation equipment, and railroad materials give little indication of an early resumption of buying.

In the machine tool trade, much store is being set on the early release of orders from automobile centers, but demand for most types of machinery continues light, and most of the big equipment programs, which were in prospect a few months ago, have not been carried out. With manufacturers of agricultural implements, there has been a decided falling off in both sales and collections since the early part of August.

Steel Operations Increase.

There has been a slight increase in operations of steel mills, but the current rate continues under that of a year ago, with the usual fall rise lacking, as buyers hesitate to build up stocks. The tin plate and pipe mills are maintaining the highest rate of production.

The settlement of the strike in the aluminum industry has resulted in a resumption of operations in that line, but full employment has not been resumed, as yet. There has been a seasonal decline in the production of safety glass, but operations still are higher than last year at this time.

Both sales and production in the container glass line still exceed the 1933 figures. Production of electrical equipment still is making a better showing than most industries, as schedules are being maintained well above the level of a year ago.

Shoe Orders Light.

Although wholesalers throughout the country have booked a good volume of business for late September delivery, manufacturers of shoes find new orders extremely light. The situation has been further confused by the price situation, and manufacturers are finding it difficult to meet the requirements of their large quantity purchasers for price concessions.

Further price reductions have been reported by the shoe chain groups, and the pressure for price concessions continues strong. Tanners also have been pressed for lower quotations, but consider that any further reduction would mean selling below cost. The hide market continues firm, but the turnover for the week was small. Sales of leather rose slightly.

Because of the current interruption of production by the strike, cotton textile mills and their selling agents are reluctant to take on new business.

Working Force Increased.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 20 (AP).—The Acme Finishing Co. stated it had increased its working forces and that between 125 and 150 of the 250 normally employed in the plant were working, although practically all other plants in the area were closed.

New York Produce.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—EGGS—14,581, steady to firm. All mixed colors unchanged. White eggs, Pacific Coast, fresh, shell treated or liners, fancy, 35@36; Pacific Coast, standards, 32@35; other whites and all browns unchanged.

BUTTER—8,854, firm. Creamery, first (88-91 scores), 24½@25¾; seconds (84-87 scores), 23@24; centralized (90 score), 26½; other grades unchanged.

*Bid; †Nominal.

SUGAR—Raw sugar was unchanged today and although no sales were reported, refiners were still interested at last paid prices of 2.86 for Cubas from store. It was the general impression that sales were going on at this level and not reported.

Futures were narrow. After a steady opening, prices declined under further selling by producing interests, the market closing net unchanged, to 1 point lower. Sales were 11,200 tons.

Park Officials To Be Honored

Fredericksburg Citizens to Dine National Battlefield Board.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—More than 250 guests will assemble at the Stratford Hotel tomorrow night for a dinner honoring National Park Service officials, held under the auspices of the Fredericksburg Battlefield Park Association.

The dinner will be the first official good will gesture by local residents toward park officials since the local battlefield park was transferred from the War Department's jurisdiction to that of the Department of the Interior.

Officials attending will be Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service; S. Otis Bland, First District Representative; Henry G. Shirley, commissioner of the State highway department, and members of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania Battlefield Park Commission. Commission members are R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State; James A. Somerville, United States commissioner, and Joseph C. O'Mahoney.

Dr. W. C. Bryant, assistant director of the division of education and research of the Interior Department, will be the principal speaker at the dinner. He will give an illustrated lecture on work in the National parks throughout the country. He will be introduced by C. O'Conor Goolrick, former State senator and present head of the Virginia State Bar Association. Frank M. Chichester, arrangements chairman in charge of the dinner, will serve as toastmaster.

Indorsement of the dinner has been received by leading civic organizations. The Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs have postponed their regular weekly meetings until Friday night, so that members may attend the event as a part of their lodge activity.

NEAR OLD GEORGETOWN.
A detached house of brick and stone or all brick of the Flemish early American design will be built to your order on a corner lot 125 by 115. On a corner of the lot there is an enormous walnut tree about 150 years old. The handmade face brick to be used was taken from an old mill built in 1750. Old wide pine floors, old mantels and other interesting features can be incorporated in the house to make it unusually charming. The price will depend upon the size house you desire. Preliminary drawings can be seen by addressing Box 129, Washington Post.

The Blessed Relief.

"From this sad life I'd find release," said James Adolphus Grigson-Grease, "methinks the boneyard's calm and peace would be a boon; I have considered, since my birth, the life we lead has little worth, and all things on this pain-racked earth are out of tune. All men are fakers, I maintain, and women are not safe or sane, and all we do is done in vain, it's all a frost; we struggle hard to gain the prize that flaunted is before our eyes, and it's a bauble we despise, not worth the cost. It always rains on picnic day, our cigarettes are made of hay, and all our gods have feet of clay, all things are cheap; the auto has a busted spring, its fenders fastened on with string, and men beneath our window sing when we would sleep. The things we eat are full of germs, described by docs in Latin terms, a fellow eats and then he squirms and promptly dies, and he who dies is better off than is the sad discouraged toff who hangs around to whoop and cough with rheumy eyes. This world's a most disgusting joint that's made to chafe and disappoint, and so I say to it, 'Aroint, you make me tired;' it is a world of toil and sweat, where mortals rend their robes and fret; I'll be impatient till I get the rest desired." And then one day I found him ill, he had a fever and a chill, and he was pale around the gill, and sick with fear; he said, "I fear I'll die tonight, my vitals are not acting right, go, round up all the docs in sight, and bring them here."

Reserve Board Urged to Ease Industry Loans

Stricter Entry Rules for Banks Into FDIC Also Suggested.

Expansion of industrial loans to stimulate business recovery and tightening of entry requirements of banks into the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation through new legislation were urged last tonight upon the Federal Reserve Board.

The recommendations were made after a two-day session of the Federal Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve Board. The council is composed of a leading banker appointed by the reserve board from each district. Its functions are purely advisory.

Money Stabilization.

Acting Federal Reserve Board Gov. J. J. Thomas, who received the report, said it contained no recommendation for immediate stabilization of the dollar to end business uncertainty.

It had been reported reliably that this was one of the points considered during the two-day session, some of the members holding that uncertainty regarding possible future devaluation of the dollar was retarding business progress.

Recommendation for expansion of loans dovetails with the policy set down by the Administration months ago. The Government, through a $580,000,000 fund approved by Congress, has been attempting to make industrial loans through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Federal Reserve System.

Response, statistics showed, has been lagging, largely because of stringent requirements for would-be borrowers fixed by bank examiners. Means or relaxing these restrictions to meet today's requirements were discussed last week at a National conference here of banking and Federal financial agency examiners.

Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau is expecting a report from this group through Dr. Jacob Viner, Treasury economist.

Reports that the advisory council had discussed dollar stabilization brought the comment "very interesting' from Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

He pointed out that the bankers represented an "important group" and that their views should be "given the consideration they merit."

Miss Kennon Wed At Charlottesville

Becomes Bride of R.S. Hill in Home Ceremony.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 30 (Spl.).—Robert Eelden Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hill, and Miss Jean Elizabeth Kennon were married this evening at Kenlodge, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ashby Randolph Kennon. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Henry Alford Porter, pastor of the First Baptist Church, assisted by Dr. George E. Becker, of the First Methodist Church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Ashby Kennon, wore white mousseline de soie and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. William Hill, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

Dr. E. Alvey, Jr., Accepts Fredericksburg Post

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 20 (Spl.).—Dr. Edward Alvey, jr., instructor in secondary education at the University of Virginia and critic teacher in English at Lane High School, this city, has accepted a position as professor of education and director of teacher training courses at the State Teachers College in Fredericksburg. He will assume his new duties immediately.

Dr. Alvey received his doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Virginia in 1931. For the past six years he has been connected with the department of education staff and with the faculty of Lane High School. He also was instructor in the university summer quarter. Dr. Alvey is a native of Richmond and a graduate of John Marshall High School.

Rock Creek Park Hike Sunday To Include Indian Quarry Visit

11 A. M. Set as Starting Time; Route to Be Taken Listed.

By Robert Shosteck.

The five-mile hike through Rock Creek Park planned for Sunday includes a visit to a little-known Indian quarry where tons of half-finished artifacts lie about, and a view of the Joaquin Miller cabin as well as several famous Civil War fortifications.

Readers of The Washington Post and members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club planning to go on this trip through the scenic Rock Creek Valley will meet at the end of the Mount Pleasant car line at 11 a. m. Sunday. From here the group will proceed down Park road to the bridge over Piney Branch. Crossing this bridge, the group will descend into the valley, going upstream about 2,000 feet to a ravine on the left. The old quarry and workshop lie a few hundred feet up this ravine, about the base of several dead chestnut trees. Here one may find turtle stones, from which arrowheads were fashioned, and partly completed arrowheads and knives. Occasional perfect specimens may also be found. According to museum ethnologists, a camp of many houses was located on the Blagden plateau, high above this quarry. Many interesting implements were found in this camp before the tract was built up.

Retracing their steps, the hikers return to Park road, crossing over to a trail which leads to a foot bridge over Rock Creek. The trail leads to the Pierce Mill picnic ground, where water and tables are available. Here the club will lunch. Near the bank of the creek, at the bridge, are several fine specimens of butternut trees which, later in the season, produce an abundant crop of luscious nuts.

Crossing Rock Creek at the old mill, the group will follow the trail above Beach Drive to Military road. Just before the road is a fine spring maintained by the park authorities. Continuing for half a mile along the path between the road and the creek, the Joaquin Miller cabin is reached. This home of the famous poet was brought to Washington from California and is now occupied during the summer by the artist cousin of Joaquin Miller. A fine spring is located up a ravine across the road. Beyond the ford, several bridle paths lead off to the left. One leads to Fort DeRussey, standing in a commanding position over 300 feet above the valley; another passes Camp Good Will, the summer camp for underprivileged children, maintained by the Associated Charities. Fort DeRussey is one of a series of Civil War fortifications built at impregnable positions about Washington, North of Military road, beyond Daniel road, lies Battery Smeade, another Civil War breastwork.

The group will reach Connecticut avenue, about one half mile down Military road. Street cars going downtown run at frequent intervals. This hike should be over by 6 p. m., another half hour being allowed for the street car ride to downtown section.

Hikers are urged to write in suggestions for interesting places to which to hike, accompanying such suggestions with maps and pertinent information. Recommendations to repeat particularly interesting trips will be given serious consideration.

Virginia Builders League Planned

Contractors and Engineers Meet at Richmond.

Richmond, Sept. 20 (AP).—Plans for the development of the Construction League of Virginia were formulated today at a meeting of contractors and engineers of the American Institute of Architects. A committee was authorized to work out details for a meeting to be held here October 25.

The "joint committee" of the American Institute was represented at today's meeting by Pendleton S. Clarke, of Lynchburg, chairman; M. G. Belser, Blacksburg; S. K. Makielski, University of Virginia; Philip N. Stern, Fredericksburg; Marcellus E. Wright, Richmond; S. J. Collins, Staunton, and Merrill C. Lee, of Richmond, president of the Virginia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Mr. Lee said the purpose of the construction league would be "to unify the various groups of the construction field into one industrial body for the advancement and betterment of the industry in Virginia."

Red Men Will Convene Here September, 1936

The annual convention of the Grand Council of the United States of the Improved Order of Red Men will be held here in September, 1936, the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade announced yesterday.

Probable attendance will be between 400 and 500. Herbert F. Stetser, of Philadelphia, is grand chief of records of the Grand Council and W. M. Alexander, of 4106 Fifth street northwest, is in charge of the reception committee.

Woman SuesShoreham; Hurt in Swimming Pool

The Shoreham Hotel was named defendant in a suit for $5,000 damage., filed yesterday by Rae Robins, of the Argonne Apartments, who alleged the corporation was negligent in policing the swimming pool.

She said her arm was dislocated June 23, at the pool when a group of youths grabbed it and pushed her.

1,000th Year For Monastery

Einsiedeln, Switzerland (U.P.).—The one thousandth anniversary of the famous Benedictine Monastery here shortly will be celebrated. The town of Einsiedeln already has been crowded for weeks with pilgrims. The papal legate, Cardinal Schuster, Archbishop of Milan, has arrived, charged by the Pope to crown the miracle working image of the Virgin Mary.

The Pope also has granted to all the faithful visiting the Basilica of the Virgin Mary complete remission of their sins.

The old monastery has been burnt down five times and the fires destroyed many previous objects. Nevertheless the library still contains 32,000 books, 900 incunabulas, parchments and documents of all sorts, the precious sequences of Notker (ninth century) and many other treasures. The image of the Virgin Mary was blackened by fire and is, therefore, called the black Holy Virgin. On the walls of the church are suspended arms, legs, hearts and other objects of wax, given by the people who have been restored to health by the intercession of the Virgin.

The peasants of the Schwyz Mountains and the monastery were not always on such good terms as they are today. The pious men of Schwyz took the monastery by assault many centuries ago. The conflicts were caused by the abbots endeavoring to extend their powers and make the free peasants their subjects. The fights lasted over 250 years and ended with the victory of the peasants.

Land Cleared By Novel Plan

Seattle (AP).—Washington farmers are removing stumps from vast tracts of logged-off lands at a cost of 10 cents a stump by using old vacuum cleaners.

The idea, developed by a public utilities company in conjunction with Washington State College, Federal and county agents, involves burning the stumps out by using forced draft—like a blacksmith's bellows.

The sucking power of the vacuum cleaner is reversed, and a hose with a metal pipe tip attached, so a powerful current of air will be blown out by the electric motor of the cleaner.

A hole is bored in the stump, a fire is started by using motor oil, and the blast of air from the hose causes the stump to burn steadily. Groups of holes are fired, and when they join in the center of the stump, there is a powerful blaze of charcoal, which soon removes it.

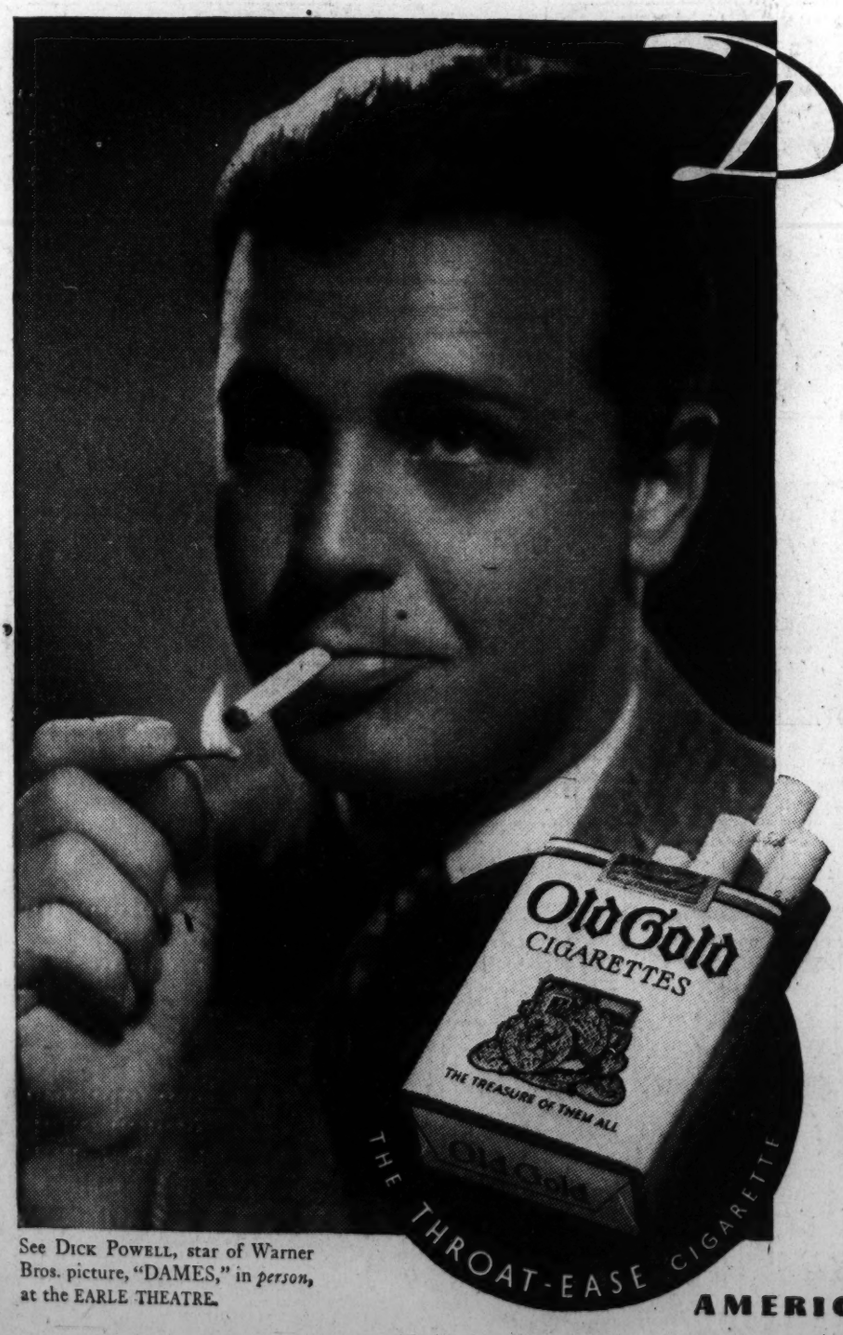
"It was love at first liqht...with me"

says Dick Powell



See Dick Powell, star of Warner Bros. picture, "DAMES," in person, at the EARLE THEATRE.

"Why doesn't OLD GOLD use that as a slogan?"—he inquires

Dear Mr. Powell:

Curiously enough, Old Gold has many times used the catch-phrase, "Love at first light." For it is true that many smokers are won at first taste by Old Gold's delightful flavor.

But the feature of greatest importance to every smoker is Old Gold's exceptional throat-ease. The queen-leaf quality of Old Gold tobaccos . . . and the freedom from any form of artificial flavoring . . . make them friendly to the most sensitive throat.

Sincerely yours,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P.S.—Briefly, it comes down to this, Mr. Powell:
No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. That's why Old Golds are so easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

Satins and CREPE SLIPS

In Satin, sizes 32 to 44
In Crepe, sizes 32 to 50

Pretty grand buys—as you'll agree when you see the lovely quality of the satin and crepe, the exquisite Alencon type laces, and the careful stitching. V or bodice top styles, both bias cut and in tea rose or white. Tailored slips, too, in white or tearose satin and crepe—also red, green, navy, black or brown crepe. Sizes 34 to 44.
